Senate committee to probe L.B. site

Objections hit college headquarters plan

By BOB SCHMIDT
From Our State Bureau

SACRAMENTO — Plans to construct the permanent headquarters of the California State University and Colleges System in Long Beach are proceeding on schedule, despite a ripple of objection developing in the State Capitol.

On April 26, the State Lands Commission cleared the way for the formal transfer of 6.4 tidelands acres near the Queen's Way Bridge from the City of Long Beach to the state university and colleges board of trustees. Preliminary planning for the $4.6-million facility is now in progress, and the schedule currently calls for construction bids to be sought late this summer and for groundbreaking to take place early next year.

The building, which will house Chancellor Glenn Dumke and a staff of 350, is to be ready for occupancy in 1975. Dumke's office is now in leased quarters on Wilshire Boulevard in Los Angeles.

However, two veteran Democratic senators have announced their intention to proceed with separate plans to locate the headquarters facility in Sacramento, and a similar proposal is expected from a legislative committee.

Sen. Randolph Collier of Yreka, who is advocating construction of a giant, twin-towered Capitol to replace the present golden-domed structure, plans to raise his objection to the shift to Long Beach when the California State University and Colleges budget is considered by the Senate Finance Committee on May 14. Collier is chairman of the committee.

Walter Stiern of Bakersfield said last week he intends to introduce legislation shortly requiring the headquarters to be located in Sacramento.

And the Joint Committee on the Master Plan for Higher Education is expected later this month to propose legislation locating both the Cal State and University of California headquarters in the capital. The UC president's office is now in Berkeley.

For several years, the California State University and Colleges trustees have expressed dissatisfaction with their cramped Wilshire Boulevard site, which currently costs the state $278,000 a year in rent. In 1970, city officials, aware the trustees were house hunting, began to explore the possibility of attracting the headquarters facility to Long Beach.

They hit upon the idea of donating a parcel of tidelands property to the system, and in 1971, Sen. Joseph M. Kennick, D-Long Beach, carried legislation making the donation possible.

The legislation was necessary because the 1911 grant by which the state conveyed the tidelands to the city restricted the property's use to maritime purposes.

Kennick's legislation added the word "education" to the trust language. The bill, SB 1474, was given extensive hearings and was signed into law by Gov. Ronald Reagan on Oct. 1.

Lebanon fighting dies down

BEIRUT, Sunday (UPI) — A government complex that includes the offices of the South Lebanon governor in the port city of Sidon was damaged by a rocket early today despite a cease-fire between the army and Palestinian guerrillas.

Clashes near the Syrian border between the army and guerrillas claimed two lives Saturday, the army reported, but with the exception of the rocket attack, the situation in the country was quiet today and a Beirut curfew was eased.

The rocket hit government house, a compound of buildings housing various government departments and the governor's offices, reports said. There were no reported injuries and it was not known who was reponsible.

THE ATTACK—shortly after midnight—was the second act of violence in or near Sidon in less than 24 hours. Saboteurs blew up a bridge three miles from Sidon in the early morning hours Saturday.

The government compound is located near the Palestinian refugee camp at Ain Hilweh—just south of the city.

The Palestine Liberation Organization, the guerrilla coordinating group, Saturday rejected a statement by President Suleiman Franjieh that Palestinians in Lebanon constituted an "occupation army."

It said the guerrillas were determined to maintain the "Palestinian presence in Lebanon dedicated to its principal task which is to liberate occupied Arab lands."

Palestinian guerrillas blamed "Jordanian intelligence" agents for the attack on the span on the main coastal highway from Sidon, on the Mediterranean about 25 miles south of Beirut. Two men, identified as Jordanians, were captured.

THE LEBANESE government Thursday warned against "fifth columnists" who they said had fired at both guerrillas and army forces. It said efforts were being made to "uncover these elements" but government sources said no progress had been made thus far.

Meantime an army spokesman in Beirut said the Palestine Liberation Army brigade that surged into Lebanon from Syria Thursday night to join the fighting had pulled back across the border.

Mexico agrees to ransom U.S. consul general

GUADALAJARA, Mexico (AP) — President Luis Echeverria said Saturday that Mexico will meet the demands of guerrilla kidnapers who threatened to kill a hostage U.S. diplomat unless 30 Mexican prisoners are released. Authorities began gathering the 30 for a flight to Cuba.

The abductors, calling themselves the Armed Revolutionary Forces of the People, demanded that the prisoners be flown to Havana for asylum in exchange for the freedom of Terrance G. Leonhardy, 58. He is the U.S. consul general in Guadalajara, the country's second largest city.

Leonhardy was kidnaped by armed men Friday evening as he drove home from his office.

Echeverria told newsmen in Mexico City, "the government accepts the demands of the kidnapers because it is essential that the life of this man be protected."

IN WASHINGTON, the State Department said it will rely entirely on Mexican authorities to deal with the kidnaping. "All the decisions are being made by the Mexican government," a spokesman said.

The government began assembling the prisoners — many of them members of extremist groups, and others apparently common criminals — at an unspecified place in Mexico City. Eleven were imprisoned in outlying states.

Foreign Minister Emilio Rabasa said he had been in touch with the Cuban government and Cuba consented to give asylum to the 30.

The ransom demands were televised Friday night, as ordered by the guerrillas. On Saturday, authorities following directions from an anonymous telephone caller found a list of 30 persons, including five women, being held in jails in six Mexican states and in Mexico City.

Echeverria had said his government would comply with the demand for the prisoners' release once it had the list. The deadline set for freeing the 30 in Cuba was this afternoon.

The president also said he ordered federal and state law enforcement officers to suspend all investigations of the kidnaping, as the guerrillas demanded, although he called the kidnaping "a totally irresponsible, unlawful act."

"The important thing, above all, is to save the life of the consul," said Atty. Gen. Pedro Ojeda Paullada. "Local and federal authorities are working with prudence and discretion."

ALTHOUGH the kidnaping breaks the law, Echeverria declared: "The philosophy of my government is humanistic. The government accepts the pretensions of the Ex-aide to testify on Watergate

Nixon 'coverup' claimed

Combined News Services

WASHINGTON — Former White House Counsel John W. Dean III reportedly is prepared to testify he can "associate" President Nixon with the attempt to cover up the Watergate bugging.

Newsweek magazine said Saturday its forthcoming issue, which reaches newsstands Monday, will also report that Dean was told by former senior presidential adviser John Ehrlichman that Nixon promised executive clemency to convicted Watergate conspirator E. Howard Hunt.

A high administration official, who was not named, denied both stories, Newsweek said. The magazine did not say whether Dean would tell his story to a grand jury or a Senate committee investigating the case.

MEANWHILE, the New York Times learned federal prosecutors in the Watergate case have summoned officials of the Central Intelligence Agency to discuss that agency's role in the plot to break into the office of Dr. Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

The prosecutors asked the intelligence officials to appear, sources close to the case said, after Hunt told a federal grand jury that he had utilized CIA equipment, including a "safe house" in Washington used by the agency's clandestine service, to prepare for the burglary of the Los Angeles office of Dr. Lewis Fielding.

The new head of the CIA is James R. Schlesinger, former director of the Atomic Energy Commission.

Newsweek said Dean told investigators he was summoned to the White House's Oval Office last September after the announcement of the initial seven Watergate indictments and found Nixon and former White House Chief of Staff H.R. Bob Haldeman "all grins." Newsweek quoted Dean as saying they were pleased by his efforts "to keep the lid on."

Nixon was quoted by Newsweek as having told Dean: "Good job, John. Bob told me what a great job you've been doing."

Dean has been named in published reports as a participant in both the planning of the bugging of the Democratic headquarters in Washington as well as the subsequent coverup attempt. Haldeman has been named by various sources as being involved in the coverup attempt.

NEWSWEEK SAID the clemency promise came last December when a lawyer for Hunt sent a message to former White House counsel Charles Colson that steps had to be taken to prevent a long jail sentence for Hunt. The message was relayed to Dean and Ehrlichman, the magazine said.

The Nixon team: zealotry, arrogance, manipulation and a passion for overkill. A-19. Other related stories on A-11.

According to Dean, Newsweek said, Ehrlichman took the message to Nixon in the Oval Office and came out with what he said was the President's promise of executive clemency for Hunt.

Dean said Ehrlichman told Colson to inform Hunt's lawyer that "everything is okay" but not to be "too specific."

Last Monday, Ehrlichman and Haldeman resigned their White House posts and Dean was fired.

In the Times story, Lawrence Houston, general counsel of the CIA was quoted as saying Saturday afternoon that "we supplied all the information on our involvement in this to the Department of Justice some time back." Houston repeated what other spokesmen said, that "we had no prior knowledge of the Watergate or the breakin to the Ellsberg psychiatrist's office." But he declined to comment on how the CIA aid on the Los Angeles burglary had been requested, or at what level of the agency command it had been granted.

The possible involvement of the CIA in any criminal aspects of the breakin of the Los Angeles psychiatrist's office poses what some lawyers here depicted as a rare legal situation.

Under the National Security Act of 1947, which set up the agency, the agency is expressly barred from having any "police, subpoena, law-enforcement powers or internal security functions."

The 1947 act also authorizes the agency to protect "intelligence sources and methods from unauthorized disclosure" — an authority

Lynwood guard accused in murder of 2 bosses

Lynwood Police arrested a 58-year-old security guard on suspicion of killing two of his supervisors Saturday after being fired from his job, authorities reported.

Police said the suspect, identified as Merlie Lee Jones, no address, was arrested following the discovery early Saturday morning of the two guard supervisors — one dead, the other dying — outside a guard shack at the Jorgensen Steel Plant, 10650 S. Alameda St.

The victims were identified as Guard Superintendent Robert G. Crawford, 52, of 1324 Acacia Ave., Torrance; and an assistant superintendent, Raymond Gulley, 36, of Los Angeles. Both were employes of the Wackenhult Guard Co., authorities said.

Lynwood officers said they were called to the plant's guard shack at 7:06 a.m. by a fourth security guard, identified only as Officer Price.

According to Lynwood Police Chief Ralph Darton, Price told investigators of the shootings, adding that the killer also had fired two shots at him.

Investigators later reported that the suspect, Jones, was arrested on the grounds of the steel plant. Crawford was dead at the scene, they added, while Gulley was pronounced dead on arrival at Lynwood's St. Francis Hospital.

Jones was booked, said officers, on two counts of murder and one charge of assault with intent to commit murder.

$2,500 offered for woman's killer

When the manager of Mr. T's television rental shop at 3580 Washington Blvd., Culver City entered the store at 9 a.m. last April 2, he saw immediately that the door of the safe at the rear of the shop was standing open.

He looked around and called out for his secretary, 31-year-old Mrs. Judith Cooper. Mrs. Cooper, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Older, of 251 Temple Ave., Long Beach, customarily opened the shop at 8 a.m.

The manager went to the rear of the store when he received no response, and it was then that he saw the crumpled form of the missing woman, lying on the floor beside the open safe. Her eyes and mouth had been taped and she had been stabbed to death by more than 50 knife wounds.

Cash amounting to more than $1,200 had been taken from the safe.

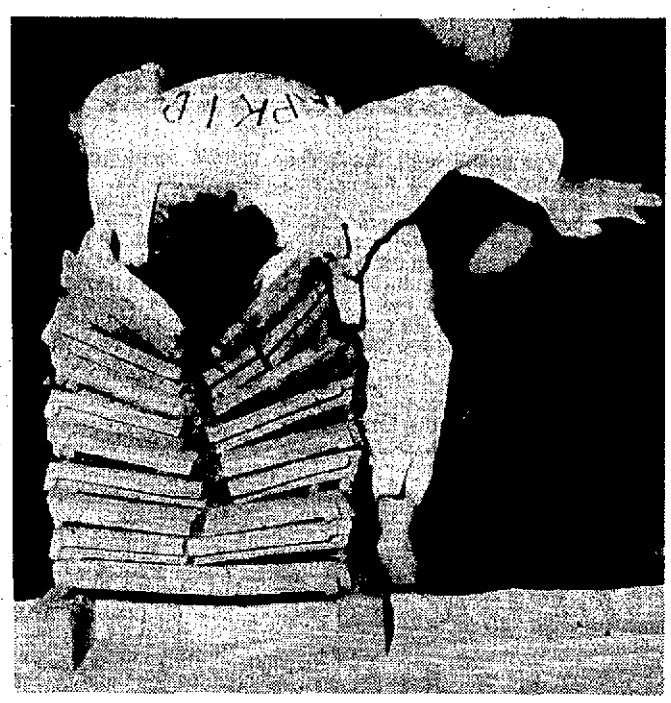

Culver City detectives have scoured the neighborhood around the shop repeatedly, but have been unable to find witnesses who saw anyone entering or leaving the rental store after Mrs. Cooper opened it for business on that morning. There were no clues left at the scene.

SECRET WITNESS

Secret Witness will pay $2,000 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the murderer of Judith Cooper, and Mr. and Mrs. Older have pledged an additional $500 to the reward.

If you have such information, call Secret Witness at 436-2526 from 8 a.m. to midnight on weekdays, or from 3 p.m. to 11 p.m. on Saturdays and Sundays. Or write to: Secret Witness, P.O. Box 67, Long Beach, Calif. 90801.

Little people seek amity, understanding in league

OAKLAND — The Little People of America, Western district, are meeting in Oakland this weekend to prepare for a national convention on dwarfism, its handicaps and its non-handicaps.

The credo of the LPA is, "Size shouldn't keep people from entering the field of their choice or from having a good time."

Mrs. Al Stickney of San Bruno, Calif., a 4-foot-2-inch former elementary school teacher and national LPA vice president, said, "We are working with medical research centers throughout the country to find out whatever we can about dwarfism."

There is no known cure for disproportionate dwarfism, which afflicts Mrs. Stickney and her husband. They have normal-size trunks, but very short limbs.

LPA members work with the traumatized average-size parents of dwarf children, in addition to aiding medical research.

"There is sometimes a severe reaction in parents who don't want to face the fact that their child is dwarfed," Mrs. Stickney said. To keep this from damaging the child, LPA parents are encouraged to work with normal-size parents, and the other way around, she said.

The LPA like to encourage the belief that citizens, though dwarfed, aren't stopped from doing their thing, like Louis Scharrer, retired civilian budget officer who worked at Malmstrom Air Base in Montana for 28 years.

The 3-foot-3-inch Scharrer has, since his retirement in 1971, traveled to Hawaii, South America, the Caribbean and Britain.

"I try to smoke these little people out of the woods," he laughed. "I try to get them to join our group."

The LPA was founded in 1957 with a membership of 20. Today, the national membership is 2,000. Mrs. Stickney said the LPA exists because "we realize there is comfort or help in knowing you're not alone."

Bear roams suburb

Someone in the suburban Chatsworth area may be in for a shock. A brown bear, possibly weighing more than 300 pounds, was sighted in the area Saturday and authorities were unable to find it.

"I found his tracks and found where he'd jumped a barb wire fence," said Gordon Zeller, animal control officer for Los Angeles. "But he hit high brush and hard land and I lost the track."

Zeller said he thinks the bear is someone's pet and added, "He's probably getting hungry and he'll probably wander through somebody's yard in Chatsworth while they're barbequing outside, and almost give them a heart attack."

Traffic jam at fire

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — A small fire at the Spot Light Tavern took firemen 10 minutes to douse Friday night, but police said it took them almost an hour to untangle the traffic slowing to watch. Damage to the small tavern was estimated at $2,000.

The First Bank of Troy is a bank with the personal touch. And the man responsible for that touch now is fighting to keep his job past retirement age.

The bank — founded in 1905 — is located in Troy, a community of 514 persons in north central Idaho, but it has depositors in all 50 states and several foreign countries. Almost 10,000 persons have accounts, and assets total more than $21 million.

Bank President Frank Otto Brocke, 66, is credited with much of the bank's success. However, he must leave Dec. 31 under a new retirement policy adopted by the board of directors.

"No bank can continue to operate as it did 40 years ago," one state bank official commented. Board members, reluctant to criticize the popular bank president publicly, say privately he has resisted modernization programs at the bank.

Brocke's lending policy also is an element of the current controversy. In one of his more unconventional decisions, Brocke authorized a loan to a man who once robbed the bank. But, he points out, it was repaid — on time.

Unopposed

Harry Bridges was nominated without opposition at the longshore union's San Francisco convention Saturday, meaning the 71-year-old union leader will get another two-year term as president of the West Coast longshore union he helped found in 1937. He has been its President ever since.

Within 60 days the West Coast longshore union's 55,000 members will vote on the proposed slate.

"There is no indispensable man in this union," Bridges said after he had been nominated and seconded 10 times. "You can get rid of all of them and this outfit will keep on going.

Asked later what his goals during his next term in the $23,000-a-year job would be, Bridges simply replied:

"We've got plenty of work to do."

Unique trike

Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace has been paralyzed from the waist down since he was shot by a would-be assassin last May 15, but he now has a special tricycle he can "pedal" with his hands.

Propelled by rotating the handlebars instead of foot pedals, the trike was invented by Angelo Vittori of Chisholm, Minn., for 14-year-old Debbie Grahek, of his community, who is unable to walk and couldn't ride with her friends.

Debbie, her father, the inventor and Chisholm Mayor Lawrence Beiluzzo were part of an 11-member delegation who journeyed to Montgomery for the presentation Friday.

Relaxing

Pearl Bailey was back in her Roosevelt Hotel suite in New Orleans Saturday afternoon, relaxing after her overnight bout with an intenstinal virus that delayed the opening of her nine-day appearance there.

The 55-year-old entertainer was rushed to Hotel Dieu Hospital with severe abdominal pains Friday only hours before the opening and spent the night in the care of physicians.

At the top

An Italian Himalayan expedition conquered Mt. Everest on Saturday, putting four men on the world's highest peak.

The Italian radio office in Katmandu said a message from Everest reported that two Italians—Carol Rinaldo, 21, and Mizuko Mirko, 26—and two Nepalese Sherpa guides had set foot on the 29,028-foot summit.

The Defense Ministry in Rome said the climbers planted the Italian flag atop the peak. The ministry has a direct telephone hookup with the 17,712-foot-high base camp, where 44 of the 134 expedition members remained throughout the three-month climb.

Debt

Convicted wife killer Dr. R. Bernard Finch said in Kansas City, Mo., Saturday his wife's death was "a terrible thing," but appealed for a medical license to practice in Missouri so he could finish repaying his debt to society.

The State Board of Registration for the Healing Arts took under advisement his request for permission to take the examination in June for a state medical license. Board President Dr. Jerome Williams said the board could come to a decision by today.

Finch, a portly, softspoken man whose thinning, gray-flecked hair is combed straight back, said in his statement to the board: "I'm not going to try to justify what I have done in the past. Society has said that as a convicted felon I owe a debt. I paid part of it inside. Now I'm anxious to pay it outside."

Finch was convicted along with Carol Tregoff of shooting his wife, Barbara, in the driveway of their West Covina, Calif., home in 1959. He was released from prison in 1971.

Tourists

Mayor John V. Lindsay of New York kept up his rapidly paced exposure to the Soviet Union Saturday by dropping in at Moscow's Palace of Pioneers.

Officially described as an institution "educating our children in the spirit of Communism," the modern building in southwest Moscow is a gigantic after-school hobby center with a wealth of facilities that make it a child's dream world.

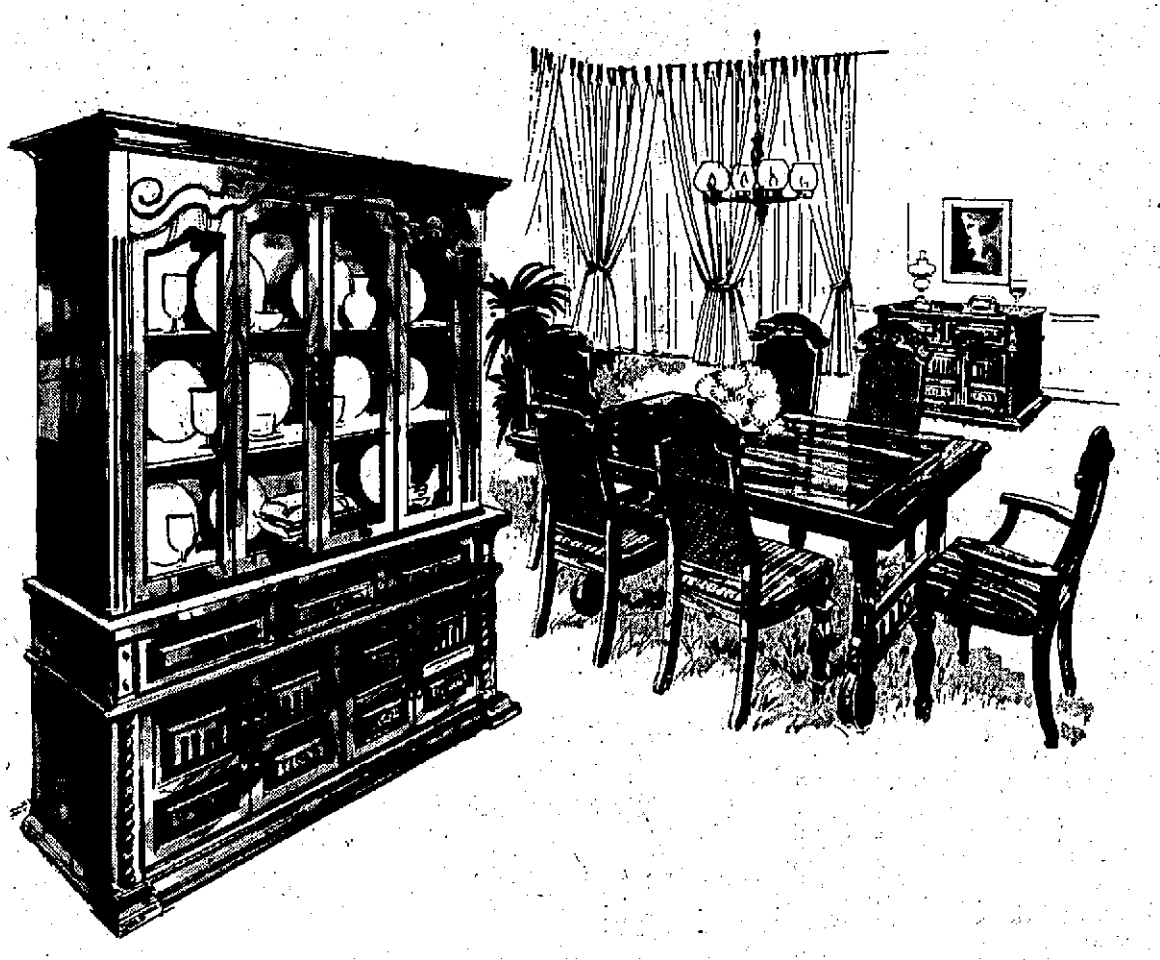

The mayor was met by English-speaking boys and girls who proceeded to guide him through a maze of hobby rooms where children were busily building model airplanes or practicing choral singing.

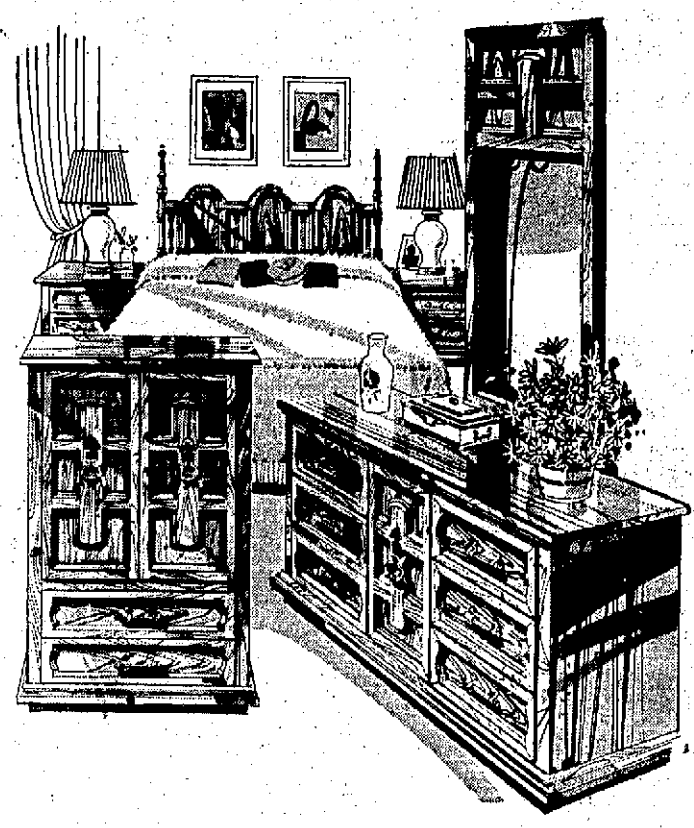

San Francisco Mayor Joseph Alioto meantime met Moscow Mayor Vladimir Promyslov and toured the Kremlin and an exhibition of economic achievements.

Smuggling

Greece's first woman ship captain has been arrested on hashish-smuggling charges, police said Saturday.

Sophia Petmezaki, 32, was arrested Friday along with her father, Nickolaos, 57, and her brother, Ioannis, 30, who served as first mate and engineer on the 1,320-ton freighter Sophia. Narcotics agents said they found 220 pounds of hashish worth about $50,000 wholesale hidden in the ship.

They're finally listening to fuels crisis prophet

By HERB SHANNON
Aerospace Editor

Spreading the word on the coming energy crisis has been an enervating experience for Don Rohrabacher, a Rolling Hills resident and director of fuel contracts for Flying Tiger Line, world's foremost air freight carrier, which got its start at Long Beach Airport in 1945.

"I presented papers recognizing the problem more than three years ago when I first represented Flying Tigers as a member of the International Air Transport Assn.," the husky former Marine Corps pilot said at the airline's new and expanding headquarters at the west end of Los Angeles International Airport. "Nobody listened."

BUT NOW that the subject has become an airline board room topic, he is running the distress warning signlas up the mast again.

This Thursday he will address a meeting of European airline operators hosted in London by British Airways-BOAC. The title of his paper will be "Fuel Crisis."

This time his words will gain added weight because of the growing scope of the problem and also because they will be coming from the vice chairman of the multi-national IATA fuels trade group and the vice chairman of the fuels committee of the domestic U.A. Air Transport Assn. fuels committee.

THE MESSAGE will be augmented by the research Rohrabacher has done since becoming a member of the ATA six years ago and his experience in negotiating long-term contracts to assure Flying Tigers of adequate fuel supplies to meet present needs and projected schedules.

"A few years ago the airline industry was paying an average of about nine cents a gallon for jet fuel," he points out. "That same fuel today is 12 cents, a 35 per cent increase. I believe we'll be paying double the current price by 1980."

Fuel charges are critical for airlines, since they represent the largest single operating cost. For Flying Tigers, the outlay for jet fuel is about 28 per cent of overhead, slightly higher than the industry average because the all-cargo airline does not have passenger service charges to dilute the total operating cost percentages.

"ANY SMALL increase in fuel costs becomes a big increase in our operating cost," Rohrabacher said. "Doubling it doubles our biggest cost item."

He sees the problem as a two-pronged dilemma.

"The petroleum producers didn't anticipate the huge increase in demand in time to be ready to meet it," he said. "Now that they recognize the situation and want to do something about it, the environmentalists won't let them. We've caught ourselves in a trap.

"Something has to give. Maybe we've let the pendulum swing too far. We have to compromise on something we can live with, or downgrade our standard of living. Nobody wants that." daily are predicted by the ATA to rise at an annual rate of 4.2 per cent to 16 million barrels a day by 1980.

DON ROHRABACHER
A Prophet Redeemed

TO SUPPLY this, he said the U.S. will have to increase crude oil imports from 26 per cent to 55 per cent in the next few years, and build 55 new refineries by 1980.

"Only one new refinery is under construction today," he said. "We'll also need ports to handle the new jumbo tankers to move the additional oil. No port in the U.S. has a berth capable of docking the big ships.

"All these things require an enormous lead time. If we started laying pipe today to bring in the Alaska North Slope oil, it would be three years before a drop reached Seattle.

"The U.S. always has had an abundance of resources. We've wasted a lot of it, and now we're making it difficult for environmental reasons to use proven reserves."

Rohrabacher said the U.S. has some 30 billion barrels of crude oil reserves, enough for a 20-year supply at current consumption rates, as compared to about 500 billion barrels in the rest of the Free World.

FUTURE needs must come from development of other sources, he said. In spite of environmentalists' objections, he believes nuclear power is the most likely to answer the demand beyond 1980.

Although Rohrabacher cited nuclear energy as the logical source for other industries which compete with airlines for petroleum fuels, he did not rule out atomic power for aircraft.

"A nuclear aircraft engine could supply more power than all four jets on our present aircraft," he said. "The energy crisis may smoke this out."

Traffic accidents in Southland kill 3

Three persons were killed and two injured early Saturday in unrelated Southland traffic accidents, authorities said.

In addition, authorities said two innocent victims who died as a result of a high-speed chase by Torrance police of a suspected drunk driver early Friday were identified Saturday by the coronor's office, and a motorcycle racer died late Friday at Ascot Park in Gardena.

Highway patrol officers said William Lewis, 22, of 916 E. 151st St., Compton, was fatally injured shortly after midnight Friday when he apparently tried to make a turn too late on the transition road between the Santa Monica and Harbor Freeways. Officers said Lewis' car hit a concrete pillar dividing the two freeways, then bounced back onto the Harbor Freeway before turning over.

One passenger, 24-year-old George Jackson, of Los Angeles, was thrown 50 feet from the car, while the other, Francis Sampson, 24, also of Los Angeles, was pinned inside with serious injuries. Investigators said they found no skid marks on the rain-slicked freeway.

Kenneth Earl Simmons and his wife, Denise Louise Simmons, of Baldwin Park were killed almost instantly when their motorcycle went out of control about 1 a.m. on the transition road from the Foothill to the San Gabriel River Freeways, highway patrolmen said.

The couple, who coronor's deputies said appeared to be in their mid-20's, were dragged more than 200 feet when their machine tipped over on wet pavement, investigators said. Authorities said at least two passing cars hit the bodies as they spun across the pavement.

Coronor's deputies Saturday identified two victims of a high-speed chase accident as Jesus Ramirez, 21, 23523 Mirable Ave., Carson, and 35-year-old Arthur Sanders, of Los Angeles.

Torrance police said they were chasing a suspected drunk driver, identified as 38-year-old Dorothy Mae Hildebrandt, of Hawthorne, at speeds of up to 115 miles an hour early Friday when her car broadsided the auto in which the two victims were riding at Crenshaw and Manchester Boulevards. Mrs. Hildebrandt was hospitalized in critical condition. Police said no charges had been filed but they expected a complaint to be later.

Hawthorne motorcycle racer Ivan Shigemasa, 24, of 12534 Inglewood Ave., died late Friday at Gardena Memorial Hospital. Authorities said his motorcycle was pinned to a turn wall at Ascot Park.

Trailer fire kills bride, mate hurt

ATASCADERO (AP) — a 16-year-old bride of one week was killed and her husband seriously burned when an early morning fire broke out in their house trailer Saturday, authorities said.

Firemen in this community 20 miles north of San Luis Obispo were investigating the cause of the blaze which killed Elizabeth Maslyn and burned her husband, John, 24, over 50 per cent of his body.

BRIGHT IDEAS BRING AWARDS

Bright ideas?—The International Newspaper Advertising Executives' Association (INAEA) says we've got 'em.

During the association's annual meeting, the Independent, Press-Telegram and the Long Beach Sales and Marketing Executives swept top awards for leadership in advertising ideas during 1972.

Included in the awards was a salute to SME for "efforts in creation and publication"—in these newspapers—of a special tabloid advertising section.

The SME section—one of 1,400 submitted for judging by the nation's leading newspapers—was selected one of the 15 best presentations for 1972.

Advertisements by Los Cerritos Center and the Long Beach Public Transportation Co. were also honored for their "superiority of idea."

In recognition of SME's award-winning special section, the Independent, Press-Telegram will present the advertising association's plaque to the group during a meeting Monday.

Special I,P-T merit awards will be presented to SME President Travis Montgomery; Ollie Speraw, who fostered the idea for the winning tabloid section; and Chuck Davis, who assisted with the preparation of advertising segments for the section.

Following the presentation, the newspaper's newest marketing film, "The Mysterious West," will be screened. The film, which has already been viewed by advertising executives and media directors in New York and seven other cities, has received acclaim from the New York Times for its "originality."

Retired judge to speak

By BOB HOUSER
Political Editor

Retired Judge Charles T. Smith will speak on "Crime and Punishment" at 1 p.m. Wednesday for the Long Beach Council of Republican Women Federated in the Lafayette Hotel French Room. A noon coffee hour will precede the talk.

Smith was appointed to the Long Beach Municipal Court in 1953. He served as Superior Court judge by assignment of the Judicial Council for a year before he retired last March 10.

Frontier Demos

Bob Wells, director of public information and publications at Long Beach State University, will speak at the 11 a.m. Wednesday luncheon meeting of the New Frontier Democratic Club in Francois' Manhattan Restaurant, 1909 E. Fourth St. Wells' topic will be, "The Free Press."

Third Friday Forun

San Francisco Supervisor Robert Mendelsohn, a prospective candidate for state controller in 1974, will be guest speaker for the Third Friday Forum's May 18 luncheon meeting in the Lakewood Country Club, President G.C. "Dee" DeBaun announced.

Mendelsohn became a supervisor in 1967 at age 29, youngest in San Francisco history. He began his governmental career as administrative assistant to the late State Sen. J. Eugene McAteer.

A Marine Corps veteran, Mendelsohn has been involved in every recent major Democratic campaign including those of Robert Kennedy, Edmund Muskie, George McGovern, Alan Cranston and John Tunney. He is coauthor of "Voices of the People," a fourth grade textbook on the U.S. Constitution.

GOP Juniors

Returned prisoner of war Capt. John Fer, San Pedro, and Ben Munoz, father of David, a missing-in-action airborne infantryman, will speak at the 11:30 a.m., May 16, luncheon meeting of Long Beach GOP Juniors at the Fireside Inn, Westminster.

Captain Fer was listed MIA for two years before showing up on POW lists. He was a prisoner for five years. David Munoz was reported missing in action May 13, 1969.

Luncheon reservations may be made with Mrs. Vera Robinson, 422-8295.

Bond poll rates crime top problem

Crime, rapid transit and smog control are rated the most urgent problems in a 39th Assembly District (East Long Beach-Signal Hill) questionnaire submitted to district voters by Assemblyman Bill Bond, R-Long Beach.

A more than 9 per cent return, 4,755 responses, on the poll, which Bond said is a much greater than normal return for such questionnaires, went 75 to 25 per cent in favor of Gov. Ronald Reagan's tax ceiling plan.

By 73 to 27 per cent, respondents favor diversion of a portion of gasoline taxes for rapid transit and smog abatement.

Lopsided opinions were registered on four other questions. Eighty-nine per cent thought unmarried persons with legally qualified dependents should be taxed at the same rate as married persons with dependents; 73 per cent said state laws regulating commercial credit should be changed to grant married women equal standing with their husbands; 71 per cent opposed granting public employes, including teachers, collective bargaining powers which would involve the right to strike, and 69 per cent are for a proposal to prohibit smoking in enclosed facilities used by the general public.

Also strong was the response to a question on a mandatory 10-year prison sentence on a first conviction for the illegal sale of hard narcotics. Sixty-six per cent considered the proposal appropriate and 21 per cent thought it to be too lenient, while 13 per cent considered ti too stiff.

Respondents opposed lowering the legal drinking age from 21 to 18 by 65 to 35 per cent.

On the matter of disposing of an $850 million state treasury surplus, 28 per cent were for a 13-month deferral of the one-cent sales tax increase; 30 per cent voted for deferring the sales tax hike for only seven months, granting income tax credit, restoring the Capitol building and buying open space coastal properties; 42 per cent opted for purchasing $800 million in unsold state bonds to save $450 million in loan interest charges.

Governor Reagan received the least blame for government inaction in questionnaire responses; 41 per cent rated the Legislature as the most unresponsive branch of state government; 39 per cent blamed the courts and 20 per cent marked for the governor.

Answers were about even on whether to abolish the 80-member Assembly and 40-member State Senate in favor of a 120-member unicameral legislature with four-year terms. The response was 51 to 49 favoring the unicameral house.

By 53 to 47 per cent, voters opposed mandatory payroll deduction to finance a catastrophic health insurance program promising to protect all Californians from the financial threats of severe injury and long-term illness.

They voted 54 to 46 per cent against no-fault auto insurance proposals that do not require insurance companies to reduce their rates.

A7 crashes in Cambodia

Cambodian soldiers search wreckage of USAF Corsair jetfighter which crashed into ammunition dump near Phnom Penh airport Saturday. The plane hit the storehouse of a military post which houses a battalion of Cambodian demolition engineers. Officials said three persons were killed and 20 injured.

3 British soldiers die in ambush

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Three British soldiers were killed and several wounded in an elaborate guerrilla bombing ambush Saturday near the border with the Irish republic.

"Our boys never stood a chance," one army officer reported. "The attack was cold-blooded and cowardly."

The ambush on a lonely mist-shrouded road near Crossmaglen, a mainly Roman Catholic border town 50 miles southwest of Belfast, came during an otherwise peaceful day in the trouble-torn province.

The only other incident the army reported was a bomb in a Belfast store that was defused by bomb disposal experts.

The first soldier to die was 36-year-old warrant officer William Vines. He was blown up as his patrol of paratroopers investigated a pile of stones on a road outside Crossmaglen. Several other men were wounded.

Under the stones was a big mine, planted by the Irish Republican Army's diehard Provisional wing and detonated by guerrillas when the patrol moved in, an army spokesman said.

The army said wires led 500 yards across the frontier.

The patrol called in reinforcements to comb the area. Three hours later, soldiers found a "complex wiring system" near the blast scene and began winding it in.

There was another big explosion and two more troopers were killed.

"It was an elaborate deception," an army spokesman reported.

"It was booby-trapped and designed to mow down anyone around it quite indiscriminately."

Four men later were reported to have been detained by troops for interrogation, but no other details were available.

The IRA's Provisionals later claimed responsibility for the double blast and for a similar mine attack Friday on a paratrooper patrol at nearby Forthill. There were no casualties in that ambush.

Only twice before have three soldiers been killed together, but in both cases they were "executed" by guerrilla gunmen.

Saturday's deaths hoisted the known fatality toll in the province's sectarian bloodshed to at least 784 since 1969 — 104 of them this year alone. Altogether, 213 British soldiers and Northern Ireland militiamen have been killed and nearly 1,000 wounded.

Business not 'selling' Japan, U.S. advised

New York Times Service

TOKYO — The United States embassy here has advised Washington in two separate reports that American businessmen are failing to take advantage of a big market in Japan for certain exports.

The general thrust of the two reports seemed at variance with the insistence of the Nixon administration and many American businessmen that Japanese trade barriers are the major reason American exports have failed to expand as rapidly as Japanese exports to the United States.

The United States ran a $4.2-billion deficit in its balance of trade with Japan last year, and, the deficit for 1973 is expected to be almost as large.

The reports suggested that American businessmen had failed to make sufficient effort to expand markets in Japan. They also indicated that American businessmen had failed to come into Japan with the same competitive drive that the Japanese had shown in American markets.

Both documents further suggested that Americans had been lackadaisical toward Japan's increasingly affluent 104 million consumers. American businessmen have used almost any excuse not to make reasonable efforts to introduce new products that the Japanese do not have but could be persuaded to buy, the reports said.

The first report, sent to Washington last September, was a 90-page document listing 28 product categories and 162 specific products that commercial attaches of the embassy felt were "high salables" and could be marketed with adequate promotion in Japan.

The second report, sent to Washington two months later, was a 36-page document on Japan's distribution system. In effect, the report maintained that the excuse of the intricate Japanese distribution system as a reason to stay out of the market had little meaning.

It noted that the most common response to questions on problems encountered with the distribution system were "import quotas, tariff rates, customs procedures and controls on foreign investments," none of which have anything to do with distribution.

"This suggested that the seriousness of the so-called "distribution" problems may have been overstated by the American business community," the report added.

The November report explained further that "many businesses are simply unwilling to make any investment in Japan which will not be fully recovered within a single year, and this unwillingness to invest hampers their efforts to expand sales." It also said that "some firms have been careless" in fulfilling sales contract obligations to Japanese purchasers.

Implied in both reports were a number of areas where American businessmen had failed to recognize a need in the Japanese market. The September document referred to Japanese management desires to streamline their manufacturing lines with labor-saving equipment to overcome shortages of labor. The Japanese have been seriously concerned with labor shortages at least since 1967, but American have not sold their superior technology in labor-saving devices to any meaningful extent.

The report said that, in too many instances, Americans had neglected market research activities in Japan. One such instance was the attempted sale of large American refrgerators that could not fit into the ordinary small Japanese kitchens.

The September document presented statistics indicating that West German products were the leading competitors of American products. But, in some cases, lack of aggressive American sales promotion meant giving way to the West Germans.

Did you have long day? Blame it on sun storm

LONDON (AP) — A giant storm on the sun last year probably slowed down the spinning of the earth for one rather long day, two scientists reported Saturday.

And they believe they know the date it happened.

THE TWO scientists, Dr. Stephen Plageman of the Goddard Space Flight Center in New York and Dr. John Gribben, an astronomer employed by the British science magazine Nature, reached their conclusions after studying the biggest solar storm ever recorded, on Aug. 4, 1972.

They sought to discover if there was truth in a theory held by some astronomers that the sun's activity directly affects the length of the day on earth.

In the current edition of "Nature" the two scientists said they examined information supplied by the U.S. Naval Observatory for signs of change in the length of days after the storm erupted.

They discovered that four days later — on Aug. 8 — the daily increase in the length of the day was 10 times greater than would have been expected at that time of year.

The length of day on any planet is governed by the time it takes to complete one full rotation. The faster it rotates, the shorter the day. So the earth must have slowed down fractionally.

AFTER a few days, however, the rotation rate settled back to the level it would normally have reached in the absence of the storm, the scientists reported.

Brandt said to oppose new Atlantic Charter

New York Times Service

BONN — Chancellor Willy Brandt does not share the American desire for a "new Atlantic Charter," according to aides of the West German leader.

Instead, they said, Brandt proposed to President Nixon when they met in Washington last week that the 1941 Atlantic Charter could be amended and supplemented when Nixon comes to Europe this fall for a series of meetings with national leaders.

Henry A. Kissinger, Nixon's adviser on national security, called for a new Atlantic Charter in a speech to the annual meeting of the Associated Press last month.

The absence of Kissinger's phrase in the joint declaration of Brandt and Nixon in Washington Wednesday has been seized upon here as a kind of German declaration of independence from American proposals.

SEN. McGOVERN
Pondered Exile?

Article assailed by McG

New York Times Service

NEW YORK — Sen. George McGovern — depicted in today's New York Times Magazine as so dejected at the failure of his presidential campaign that he thought of moving to England — has denounced the article as "full of inaccurate and fabricated quotations."

He described it as a "disreputable and shoddy piece of journalism."

The article, by Joe McGinnis, author of "The Selling of the President 1968," quotes the South Dakota senator as vowing to do "anything that was necessary" to frustrate a 1976 presidential campaign by Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton, who, briefly, was his 1972 running mate on the Democratic ticket.

Of Eagleton, who resigned as the vice-presidential nominee, after statements came out about his hospitalization for nervous exhaustion, McGovern is quoted in the magazine article as saying:

"HE WAS the one guy I didn't know at all. And the funny thing is, I never liked him . . . He always seemed superficial to me . . .He never would show me the medical reports. What a runaround he gave us on that."

The article also reports that McGovern's wife, Eleanor, had developed what McGovern described as a "pathological" hatred of the press for the way his campaign was covered.

McGovern, after being shown an advance copy of the article, denounced it. Eagleton, asked for comment, replied that he believed McGovern's denial and so saw no need to comment at length.

McGinnis wrote in reply that he could "understand the problem the politician faces when he sees in print several weeks later remarks that he feels may be embarrassing or politically sensitive." But, he wrote, the senator "did say the things I said he said."

HST Stamp issue set

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (AP) — The new Harry S. Truman commemorative stamp goes on sale officially here Tuesday morning, with Postmaster General E. T. Klassen presiding over first-day issuance ceremonies at the Truman Library.

Tuesday also is the birthday anniversary of the former President, and Klassen will serve as President Nixon's personal representative in placing a wreath on the Truman's grave in the courtyard of the library. Truman would have been 89 on Tuesday.

Customer wounded by sensitive cook

Supposedly, the customer is always right. But don't tell that to David Colomo. He complained about the service at a Los Angeles hamburger stand Saturday and, police said, was shot by the cook.

Colomo, 22, had ordered a hamburger but apparently became dissatisfied with the service and let the cook know it, police said.

The cook, identified as Raymond Lara, 20, apparently took offense at the criticism, pulled a shotgun from under the counter and shot Colomo in the left leg, officers said.

Colomo was treated and released at Community Hospital in East Los Angeles. Lara fled the scene with the shotgun, police said.

Chavez claims Nixon aided rival

SAN DIEGO (UPI)—The International Brotherhood of Teamsters got Nixon administration help in its drive to organize farm workers, Cesar Chavez, director of the rival United Farm Workers Union, said Friday.

In a separate appearance, International Teamsters' President Frank Fitzsimmons said his union represented the wishes of a majority of workers in the Coachella Valley, where Chavez' union lost many contracts to the Teamsters.

AT A CINCO de Mayo rally at the UC San Diego, Chavez said the administration arranged for Fitzsimmons to speak at a convention of the American Farm Bureau Federation in Los Angeles.

"It was there, before the biggest union-busting organization in the nation, that Fitzsimmons and the growers made their deal to bring farm workers into the Teamsters Union and try to destroy our union," Chavez said.

"The administration never has established any communications with us to deal with farm worker problems," he said. "They only come to investigate us, to harrass us."

Fitzsimmons, here for a Teamster local banquet, rejected a proposal to allow Coachella Valley Grape workers to vote secretely to determine which union they preferred.

THE TEAMSTER head said his union represented wishes of a majority of Coachella workers and had "thousands of signatures on petitions requesting the Teamsters to represent" them.

"I feel very secure in my position in representing the farm workers on the basis of the evidence we have," he said.

The secret ballots were proposed by the Rev. Joseph Donnelly, chairman of the Bishops' Committee on Farm Labor, in a telegram to Fitzsimmons. Donnelly said he was convinced the UFW represented the majority of farm workers in Coachella Valley.

Fitzsimmons suggested instead, "joining with us and going before Congress to seek regulations that would assure proper elections in this instance and all future elections."

Slain tot buried by 'friends'

VALLEJO (AP) — "Baby Jane Doe," an unidentified victim of a brutal beating, has been buried through the compassion of people who never knew her.

Some 185 persons filed through the Twin Chapels mortuary Friday to view the body of the 2-year-old girl, found beaten to death in a field of weeds April 22.

The chapel donated its services, as did the Rev. Thomas Kerr, who conducted the funeral.

The men of the USS McCain, stationed at nearby Mare Island Naval Shipyard, took up a collection to buy a headstone for the child and women of the Castlewood Baptist Church collected $52 to help pay for the cemetery plot and endowment care.

Cult chief sought in murder

By PAT LEISNER

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A police investigation into the witchcraft murder of a California youth centered Saturday on a search for the shadowy "high priest" of a cult known as "The Devil's Children."

"From the information we have received, we believe the ringleader to be still at large," police said Saturday.

Investigators were keeping quiet on the identity of the leader of the group of Satan worshipers accused of the torture slaying of Ross "Mike" Cochran, 17, of Fresno during a black mass ritual in a basement April 27.

Police have arrested nine persons in the investigation and revealed over the weekend that more arrests were pending.

POLICE said the youth, who was sent to a private school for problem adolescents near here last year by his parents, was offered as a human sacrifice during the ritual. They said he was strapped to a make-shift altar, flogged with chains and slashed with jagged glass in the rundown, red brick rooming house known as "roach haven" by the beach transients who lived there.

Cochran's mangled body was found bound with ropes and dumped alongside a remote road, his head crushed by a blow from a club.

Police broke the case last Monday when an unidentified youth picked up on a burglary charge confessed he "had something to talk about."

Police said Cochran had been a student at the Green Valley School in nearby Orange City until police removed him during a massive rajd on the institution last February.

THE STATE subsequently filed suit to close the school where students were allegedly subjected to cruel punishments and encouraged to engage in open sexual conduct, and officials said Cochran's parents, who have been unavailable for comment, allowed their son to become a material witness in the case.

Cochran was placed in the care of a Daytona Beach family where he lived until a month ago when he moved out. He was next seen on the boardwalk of this winter resort town and won a job as a change boy in Gus Gramatikos' Satellite Funland Arcade.

"It was the Easter rush and we were jammed," Gramatikos said.

"I needed help. I hired him. He was a likeable guy. I even had him working at the register and I didn't loose a dime."

Gramatikos sent Cochran to a boardinghouse owned by Mrs. Delphine Guillemette, who said she put him up in a room with her 34-year-old retarded son, George

While describing Cochran as smart, Mrs. Guillemette said the youth liked to masquerade.

She said he would frequently dress up in a shirt and tie and then flop a dog-eared military cap or an aluminum hard hat on his head and go for a walk.

GEORGE von Hilsheimer, founder of the Green Valley School, criticized police for removing Cochran, accusing authorities of irresponsibility.

Von Hilsheimer said Cochran has "a history of being a victim," saying the youth was nearly beaten to death in an attack last year.

Charged in the murder were Kenneth Francis, 17, who gave his address as Pope Air Force Base; Cindy Black, 15, Ontario, Canada; Howard Waellus, Detroit; Charles M. Paige, 21, Daytona Beach; Deborah Ann Shook, 22, Washington, N.J.; John J. Colbert, 18, no address; Steven Skaggs, 21, Petersburg, Va.; Charles Joseph Dunn, 21, Daytona Beach; and John Joseph Carpenter, 18, Sacramento.

Bastions of Nixon ideology

Regulatory bodies fall captive

By JOHN HERBERS
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — After more than four years in office, the Nixon administration, through the use of appointments and other means, has turned the "independent" regulatory agencies into bastions of Nixon Republicanism.

They are run by members and commissioners who generally share the President's philosophy for less government interference in business and industry. And they have less diversity than existed under previous administration, with academics, liberals and consumer activists in short supply.

It has been traditional for presidents to shape the agencies in accordance with their own goals and political ideas, but the Nixon White House, in the view of a wide range of authorities interviewed

'Nixon has gone further than other recent presidents' during the last few weeks, has gone further in this regard than other recent administrations.

Nixon's appointment March 12 of Lee R. West, a little-known state district judge of Ada, Okla., to the Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB) and the controversy set off by the appointment, is indicative of the trend.

The Senate Commerce Committee is holding up West's confirmation because committee leaders wanted the post to go to Robert T. Murphy, a consumer-oriented board member whose 12-year term has been marked by votes for more airline competition and against mergers. Murphy was a candidate for reappointment.

Instead, the White House chose West, whose name had been submitted by Sen. Henry L. Bellmon, R-Okla., with the support of the speaker of the House of Representatives, Carl Albert, D-Okla.

The two Oklahomans share as a corporate constituent American Airlines, which was disappointed at the CAB's refusal last year to grant a merger between American Airlines and Western Airlines. Officials of American Airlines have said publicly that they want Murphy replaced.

YET, SO strong is the tradition of giving the President a free hand in regulatory appointments, many senators say, that it is probably only a matter of time before the committee yields and West takes his seat on the five-member board. Murphy, whose term expired Jan. 1, is serving in the interim.

With the anticipated departure of Murphy and of Federal Communications Commission (FCC) member Nicholas Johnson, whose term runs out in June, Nixon appointees will so predominate on the major regulatory agencies that the stinging dissents that have come from holdovers from previous administrations are expected to be a thing of the past.

The boards and commissions were originally set up as arms of Congress to regulate and formulate policy in broad areas of trade, transportation and communications. In order to make them as independent as possible, Congress provided that the members have staggered terms and that they represent both political parties.

The staggered terms rarely work to prevent a president from gaining control due to frequent resignations that arise from various pressures and the tradition that the chairmen serve at the pleasure of the president. Of 38 positions on six major regulatory bodies — the CAB, the FCC, the Federal Power Commission, the Federal Trade Commission, the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Securities and Exchange Commission — Nixon, after little more than four years in office, has filled 28, including reappointments and those not yet confirmed. He has named the chairmen of all six:

His appointments have represented less of an ideological mix than those of previous presidents. For example, he appointed Alfred T. MacFarland, a Tennessee lawyer, and a Democrat to the ICC under the requirement that no more than a bare majority of members be of the same party.

THE SENATE Commerce Committee balked at the appointment, contending that, even though MacFarland might be known as a Democrat back in Tennessee, he had a long record of supporting Republican candidates. The White House then had MacFarland change his registration to independent and resubmitted the nomination.

"We could do nothing but confirm him," said Sen. Frank E. Moss, D-Utah. "I didn't like it, but 'I can't help but admire the way they did it'

I couldn't help but have some admiration for the bold way they did it."

Budgetry control over the agencies by the executive branch, which has existed for a number of years, has increased under the Nixon administration, according to testimony taken last year by the Senate subcommittee on intergovernmental relations of the Committee on Government Operations.

The Office of Management and Budget, a White House agency, has included some of the regulatory agencies in administration-wide expenditure and personnel cuts ordered by the President. This, according to Sen. Edward J. Gurney, R-Fla., who is an administration supporter, was "sort of a new and far-reaching authority that either did not exist or was not used before."

SOME OF the regulatory members said that some investigations of utility rates and other research was curtailed in the process. The FTC lost 72 staff members.

The performance of the agencies under the Nixon White House has been mixed, according to a consensus of authorities:

—The SEC under former Chairman William J. Casey instituted reforms and expanded its staff and activities, with budget office approval, to cope with the crisis in the securities industry. The new chairman, G. Bradford Cook, has indicated he will continue in the same tradition.

— The FTC was revitalized under former Chairman Miles W. Kirkpatrick and took a number of pro-consumer actions, including an expansion of anti-trust policy. Following his resignation earlier this year, he was replaced by a White House aide, Lewis A. Engman, who has said he will run the agency independent of the White House.

— The FPC has not had a strong consumer-oriented member since Lee C. White resigned as chairman a few months after President Nixon took office in 1969. Some senators, charging that President Nixon is breaking a strong tradition for having at least one such member, are objecting to his two latest appointments, Robert H. Morris, and William L. Springer, on the ground that they are industry oriented. The Senate Commerce Committee has cleared the appointments for a Senate vote after the Easter recess, with Senators Moss and Philip A. Hart, D.-Mich., among others, filing dissents.

— The FCC has become more compatible with the nation's broadcasters, who favor less government control, since it came under Republican control and has been headed by Dean Burch, the conservative lawyer who was chairman of the Republican National Committee in 1964. More important, it has been overshadowed by the emergence of the White House Office of Telecommunications policy which has moved aggressively in areas once dominated by the commission.

Although the regulatory bodies have long been a subject of controversy and there are many points of view on how they should operate, some experts say their performance at this time is particularly important.

"This is a time of inflation and the requests for rate increases are more frequent," said Lee White, whom President Johnson appointed to the power commission. "When I was in office and the economy was more stable it was relatively easy to decide who was entitled to more revenue and who was not."

FURTHER, some of the regulated industries are undergoing drastic changes that are of wide public interest — the emergence of cable television and the power shortage, for example.

'Their performance at this time is especially critical'

There is some ambiguity in the White House about what the administration is seeking to accomplish on the regulatory bodies. Last summer, President Nixon had an off-the-record meeting with a group of broadcasters. Stanley E. Cohen, writing in "Advertising Age," said the broadcasters came away "eager to talk."

"By their account, Nixon is annoyed by regulatory agencies staffed with young lawyers who are trying to challenge the system," Cohen wrote. "He is frustrated because some of his appointments go wrong. He can appoint people like FTC Chairman Miles Kirkpatrick, but he can't do anything about them after they are in their jobs."

When the White House announced Kirkpatricks's resignation on Jan. 1, Gerald L. Warren, deputy White House press secretary, said he could not say that the President accepted the resignation with regret. Kirkpatrick, however, received a letter from the President saying the resignation was accepted with "deep regret." Warren apologized, said his error was an oversight and the resignation was totally voluntary.

Few meat price violations found

WASHINGTON (AP) — The man who is directing enforcement of the government's price control programs says there have been "amazingly few" complaints from consumers about violations of the new meat price ceilings.

Stanley Goldberg, director of the compliance and enforcement division of the Internal Revenue Service, said approximately 2,000 complaints were received during the first four weeks. Most did not concern significant violations, he said.

The government has levied fines totalling less than $25,000 for violations of the price ceiling regulations imposed in early April and gone into court against one major meat packer.

It has initiated noncourt enforcement proceedings against five other large meat packers.

Most violations that have occurred are by large meat packers or supermarket chains, Goldberg said.

The meat price ceiling regulations require meat retailers, processors and wholesalers to post a list of ceiling prices near where meats are being sold.

He said of 6,500 stores checked in one week, 14 per cent were found to be in violation of the regulations, but that all but a handful were corrected on the spot after they were pointed out by IRS investigators.

USDA asks rules on meat in burgers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Agriculture Department recommended Saturday that Americans be told whether a hamburger is all meat or part soybean.

The department proposed a new rule that would set standards for two types of meat patties and said the requirements would be the first governing protein content and percentage labeling of ingredients for meat and poultry products.

Under the proposal:

—A "meat patty" would have to be entirely ground meat and no more than 30 per cent fat, with appropriate seasonings. If labeled "beef" or "veal" patties, the meat would have to be beef or veal.

—All other meat patty products would be called "patty with meat." They would have to have at least 60 per cent meat, of which only one third could be fat, but could contain such filler ingredients as cereal and soybean products. The added ingredients would have to be listed by their percentages.

Additives would have to provide nearly as high a protein content as the all-meat patties.

Byrne receives Krogh affidavit

By JACK V. FOX
United Press International

The judge in the Pentagon Papers trial said Saturday he had received an affidavit from a former presidential aide accused of masterminding the burglary of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist's office.

The affidavit mailed to U.S. District Court Judge Matt Byrne by attorneys for Egil "Bud" Krogh is reported to contain his confession that he ordered Watergate conspirators E. Howard Hunt and G. Gordon Liddy to carry out the burglary.

A spokesman for Ellsberg said that defense lawyer Leonard Boudin contacted Byrne Saturday morning and asked to see a copy of the affidavit.

The judge's clerk, David Treiman, told Boudin after consulting with Bryne that the judge had received the "Krogh material" at the federal courthouse Friday night.

Byrne relayed word to the defense that he would not turn over the affidavit before a hearing at 9:30 a.m. Monday.

BYRNE did not say what the document contains.

The defense had asked for the affidavit, saying, "if the news reports we've heard are correct . . . it more firmly establishes the link between President Nixon and the criminal activities carried out by his subordinates in connection with the prosecution of Daniel Ellsberg and Anthony Russo."

The Los Angeles Times Saturday quoted a "close associate" of Krogh as saying the former chief assistant to ex-presidential aide John Ehrlichman provided federal prosecutors in Washington Friday with the sworn affidavit in which he admitted helping supervise the break-in which linked the Pentagon Papers and Watergate cases.

According to the report, Krogh said in his affidavit he helped plan the break-in because he was aware the President was concerned about the effect publication of the secret Pentagon Papers might have, especially on his efforts to end the Vietnam war.

A copy of the affidavit reportedly was mailed to Byrne Friday by Krogh's lawyers.

Convicted Watergate conspirator Hunt said Krogh authorized the burglary and arranged for him to use CIA equipment for the job, according to a transcript made public at Friday's session of the trial.

Hunt's comments were contained in a 38-page transcript of his testimony before a Washington grand jury investigating the Watergate affair.

THE DEFENSE has moved to dismiss all charges against Ellsberg and Russo as a result of the break-in, but Byrne withheld action on that pending the receipt of further information from the Justice Department. However, he said it was clear "the burglary was conducted by government employes."

"Those facts speak for themselves," Judge Byrne said, instructing the prosecution that it was up to the government to prove its case had not been tainted by the illegal act.

Delay denied in Segretti prosecution

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — U.S. Atty. John Briggs denied Saturday he had stalled proceedings against California lawyer Donald H. Segretti, indicted Friday for allegedly distributing a phony campaign letter accusing Sens. Henry Jackson and Hubert Humphrey of sexual misconduct.

Jackson blasted Briggs' handling of the case just hours after a federal grand jury in Orlando returned the indictment against Segretti and Tampa accountant George A. Hearing. It accused them of conspiring to write and circulate the bogus letter on Sen. Edmund Muskie's campaign stationery during the Florida Democratic primary in March of 1972.

Jackson said the Senate committee probing the Watergate scandal had agreed Friday to look into Briggs' handling of the case against Segretti and Hearing.

BRIGGS hinted the grand jury in Orlando might return more indictments in the case of the phony campaign letter, probably within two weeks.

Segretti, a 31-year-old attorney who, according to former acting FBI director L. Patrick Gray, was paid at least $30,000 from President Nixon's re-election campaign funds, surrendered in Los Angeles Friday night and Hearing surrendered in Tampa. Both were released on bond.

Politicos agree on Richardson's integrity

BOSTON (AP) — Politicians who have worked with Elliot Richardson in his home state of Massachusetts say he's a staunch Republican, a zealous prosecutor and "a very tough guy."

ELLIOT RICHARDSON
A New Challenge

Richardson is now acting attorney general and has been nominated by President Nixon to fill the Cabinet post held by Richard Kleindienst. Taking over the job, he also assumed responsibility for investigating the Watergate case.

"I can think of no one more uniquely qualified, by background, brilliance, training and integrity," said Gov. Francis Sargent, a distant cousin of Richardson. "And also toughness. He can be a very tough guy."

Richardson served as U.S. attorney, lieutenant governor and attorney general in Massachusetts before he was tapped by Nixon in 1969 to serve as undersecretary of state. He built a reputation in the Bay State for careful, meticulous preparation of cases — and for political dedication.

Donald L. Conn, head of the criminal division of the state attorney general's office during Richardson's tenure, said, "On every case he was ever involved in, he went after it very zealously — he did his job."

Maurice Donahue, a Democrat and former president of the state Senate, said, however, "He was a dedicated Republican when it came to politics. He never deviated if it was a question of doing something for the party."

"He's a funny guy, a tough guy," said Walter Parker, who was Richardson's administrative aide for several years.

"I know that he hopes to help to in some way to restore confidence in our government," added Parker. "It is a tough one for him; I am sure he is going to call it as he sees it."

Sargent, as well as fellow Republicans John F. Parker and Francis W. Hatch Jr. — minority leaders of the Massachusetts Senate and House respectively — urged Richardson to name a special prosecutor for the Watergate case.

Kenneth P. O'Donnell, White House chief of staff for the late President Kennedy and now a Boston businessman, said however, that it would be "difficult for Elliot to appoint an impartial prosecutor. I'm a Democrat, and I know I couldn't appoint an impartial prosecutor under the same circumstances."

O'Donnell described Richardson as "a very partisan Republican."

During his term as U.S. attorney, Richardson successfully prosecuted textile manufacturer Bernard Goldfine for tax evasion in a scandal that reached into the top levels of the Republican party.

Philip Castleman, who coordinated Richardson's campaigns in western Massachusetts, said his boss was proud of that conviction.

Many Democrats still criticize Richardson for his 1966 campaign for attorney general.

In the closing days of the campaign, he accused his opponent, former Lt. Gov. Francis Bellotti, of "moral insensitivity" for having — while lieutenant governor — accepted legal fees from an Ohio insurance company regulated by Massachusetts.

Bellotti, cleared of any law violation several months later by a panel Richardson himself appointed, claimed that Richardson had acted because his polls showed the Democrat winning.

"I thought he was completely immoral in this case, but I could understand why he did it," said Bellotti.

Labs offer 'consumer protection service' for trippers

By SANDRA BLAKESLEE
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — An increasing number of laboratories across the country will analyze, without asking embarrassing questions, any illicit "street" drug that the user would like to know more about.

The drug analysis programs have become a sort of consumer protection service for the occasional "tripper" who fears that the pills or marijuana he buys from an unknown dealer may be faked, adulterated, badly made or downright poisonous.

Worried parents who find suspected drugs in their children's clothing or rooms also patronize the programs.

The laboratories providing the service are operated by universities, private concerns, hospitals, local police stations, drug treatment centers and, frequently, underground drug-oriented organizations and individuals. Many are licensed, many are not.

Their legal standing is often uncertain. For example, the police departments of New York City, Nassau County and Buffalo — as well as private laboratories and hospitals — run confidential analysis programs that the state Health Department contends are illegal.

But understandings with local district attorneys, who usually applaud the programs and can exercise their discretion in enforcing the law, permit these laboratories to continue.

Although the use of such drugs as LSD, mescaline, psilocybin, STP, MDA and marijuana appears to have spread rapidly during the 1960's, most of the drug analysis programs were not started until two or three years ago. As one organizer said, "Before that, everyone was scared to do it."

Today the phenomenon is so common that the National Institute of Mental Health has awarded a contract to Dr. Bing Hart, a socio-pharmacologist working under auspices of the Haight-Ashbury Clinic in San Francisco, for a national assessment.

The need for such services is plain, Hart and others said. Not only would truthful, freely accessible information protect users from the agonies of a "bad trip," they say, but if people knew what "polluted" drugs were actually being sold, there would be less usage overall.

"Such programs won't stop drug use," Hart said. "But they will put it on a more intelligent basis."

Nonetheless, the Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs is acutely concerned about the growth of such laboratory services. "I am not sure they always help people," Fred Garfield, assistant director for scientific support, said in a recent interview. "These labs could be used as a quality control for pushers."

One of the better known street drug analysis programs in the nation is run by PharmChem laboratories of Palo Alto. The service, called analysis anonymous, each month assays 200 or more drug samples sent in from all over the country and from abroad.

The system works simply. The consumer wraps a small, unreturnable sample of his drug in tissue, places it in an envelope with $5 and a six-digit number of his own choice, and mails it off. After four or five days, he calls PharmChem and gives his number. He is then told the contents of his drug.

For an extra $10 he can obtain a quantitative analysis of his drug — how much of which substance is found. Most such services provide only qualitative analyses — simply what is there — because the more detailed assays are expensive.

'Such programs won't stop drug use, but only put it on a more intelligent basis'

PharmChem tests samples for about 100 different drugs and narcotics. They say they lose money on the program but offer it as a public service along with a free monthly newsletter summarizing their findings to anyone requesting it. Their main business is analyzing urine samples commercially for methadone clinics and other drug rehabilitation programs.

According to George Kohler, marketing director of PharmChem, there is a wide difference between the actual and alleged content of street drugs. Sometimes almost three-quarters of the drugs analyzed by PharmChem are not what they were purported to be, he said. Generally, half of the drugs tested are either something else or are adulterated with other substances.

One might think that the experienced drug user could tell the difference, but that is not the case, according to Do It Now, a drug information center in Phoenix and Los Angeles. "On the street level the power of suggestion is tremendous," they say. "Experienced users will swear that 'mescaline' and 'psilocybin' which contain only LSD bore absolutely no resemblance to their previous LSD trips."

Even the relatively inexpensive LSD varies greatly in quality and potency, from the poor "bathtub acid" variety to the pure, so-called "Clearlight."

Since street drugs are packaged in a variety of ways with a variety of names, it is relatively simple for a pusher to deceive his customers.

The use of cocaine is increasing, the testing services have found. Also, more and more cocaine today is being adulterated with local anesthetics, which numb the nasal passages and thus imitate the action of cocaine itself.

Most drug programs say they get little heroin for analysis.

Kohler said he suspected heroin users might be afraid of the semioffical status of many programs or that they might just not care much about quality.

Most of the marijuana sent in for analysis is actually marijuana or marijuana doctored with PCP, a powerful animal tranquilizer, the programs report.

While the adulteration of drugs is fairly common, "we have yet to find any sample which indicates someone is trying to poison drug users," said Dr. David Blake, associate professor and chairman of the Department of Pharmacology and Toxicology at the University of Maryland. Blake runs a well-established, state-funded drug testing service that analyses 30 to 40 drug samples a week.

Dealers will adulterate drugs, Blake said, for purely economic reasons — to get the best profit. They will use toxic substances (such as alum in heroin) when cheap nontoxic substances (such as quinine and lactose, which have recently been put under strict federal controls) are not available.

Wiretapping up 43 pct.

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — Court-authorized wiretapping by law enforcement officials rose 43 per cent in 1972 over the previous year, despite a decline in anti-gambling activity for which electronic surveillance has proved particularly effective.

According to figures compiled by the administrative office of the U.S. courts, 855 orders for wiretaps were approved by judges during the year, 206 by federal judges and 649 by state judges, resulting together in 2,861 arrests that have so far produced 402 convictions.

By far the greatest state activity took place in the New York metropolitan area, with 294 of the state orders, or 45 per cent, issued in New York, and 235 or 36 per cent in New Jersey. This left only 19 per cent of the state-permitted wiretapping for the rest of the country.

Sen. John L. McClellan, D-Ark., chairman of the subcommittee on criminal laws, told the Senate that such statistics "should do a great deal to relieve the fears of some citizens of an excessive use of these techniques by agents."

Federal activity in the wiretapping area declined in 1972, from 285 authorized interceptions the year before to 206.

Amnestydemonstrations eyed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A leading peace activist said Saturday that proponents of amnesty for Vietnam-era draft resisters and deserts should begin staging demonstrations to dramatize the issue.

Cora Weiss, who visited Hanoi during the war to talk with Communist leaders and American POWs, suggested amnesty advocates focus their efforts on "symbolixc and strategic" dates including Memorial Day, Veterans Day and Christmas.

She spoke at a National Conference on Amnesty sponsored by the American/Civil Liberties Union, the National Council of Churches, the National Student Association, the National Conference of Black Lawyers and Vietnam Veterans Against the War.

Other main figures at the conference, however, were more skeptical about the value of demonstrations.

"The amnesty movement at this point is about where the antiwar movement was six or eight years ago," said Henry Schwartzchild, director of the ACLU's Project on Amnesty.

Most participants at the conference appeared to favor universal, unconditional amnesty for all draft dodgers and those who deserted or got less than honorable discharges because they opposed the war.

Seat of problem

We bought a sofa and love seat from The Spider Shop, 1210 E. Pacific Coast Highway, for $925 last May. It was delivered in July and three months later the vinyl-type fabric started to peel, crack and fray. We contacted The Spider Shop and for six months got the runaround. They finally agreed to recover both pieces but they failed to do so. They are now trying to sell them and promised to order new ones for us when they sold. We've been waiting almost a year to enjoy our furniture. When do we get what we paid for? P.R.P., Long Beach

Despite denials by both the store and the furniture maker that there is anything wrong with your sofa and love seat, the store has taken them back, has sold them as used merchandise, and has promised to order new ones for you in a different material you have selected. Seymour Shenk, owner of The Spider Shop, told ACTION LINE "I lost money on the deal" but "that was the only way I could work it out to satisfy him." He said your furniture "looks like new. There's nothing wrong with the fabric." Betty Culbertson, manager of Z & H Furniture Manufacturing Corp., agreed with Shenk and said she thought you were exaggerating when you said the two pieces were in bad condition.

Stood up

On Nov. 9 we sent $20 to register our poodle with the Apollo Canine Dating Service, 1253 Seventh St., Santa Monica. We assumed the firm was reputable since we'd seen its originator on the "I've Got a Secret" TV show. When the company never contacted us, we called and found their phone disconnected. Can you help? C.L., Long Beach.

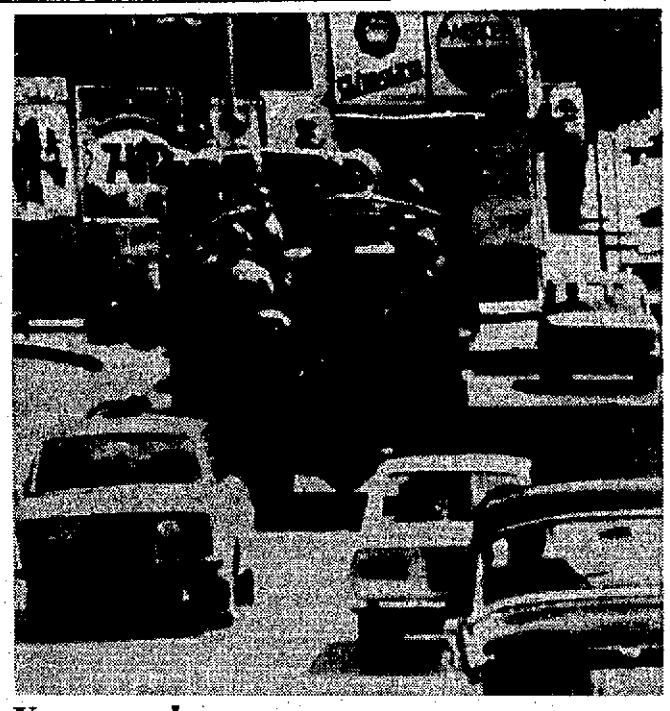

No. Early in December the Apollo Canine Dating Service was evicted for not paying its office rent, according to Detective Russ Martin of the Santa Monica Police Department. "They apparently just went bankrupt," he said. The Company, founded by Maurice Wooden to arrange breeding "dates" for subscribers' dogs, promised "dignified service which includes computerized and personalized canine matching." The service's "computer" was a file card cabinet, according to Martin. The Apollo Canine Dating Service office was also the outlet for Wooden's referral service for amateur inventors, the detective said. The uniqueness of Wooden's dog dating service — and his promotion of it — won it gobs of publicity by magazines, newspapers and radio and TV stations, apparently none of which looked very hard at the company's reliability. Just one month before the company went under, one national magazine quoted Wooden as saying his business was so successful he was "gearing up to franchise country-wide." Martin said police have found no criminal violations by the defunct company's officers. Persons owed money by companies that fold have little practical recourse in obtaining any refund.

Cool winds to offset sunny skies today

Gray clouds were expected to give way to sunny skies today, the National Weather Service reported Saturday, but chilling afternoon winds were again forecast to keep today's peak temperature in the Long Beach area below 70 degrees.

Coast Guardmen reported that small craft advisories were posted off the Southland coast Saturday afternoon due to winds gusting up to 25 knots. They added that winds were not expected to decrease until tonight.

The National Weather Service predicted tonight's low would dip to about 59. Forecasters said a warming trend was expected to begin Monday.

kidnapers because it is essential to protect his life."

Jose Nunez Olvera, assistant police chief of Guadalajara, announced during the morning that police officials had been ordered to "stay put" and that all decisions concerned with the abduction would be made by the federal government.

He added: "There has been no further word from the kidnapers."

The career diplomat, father of two daughters, Kathy and Eileen, was kidnaped shortly before he was to be host at a small dinner party in his home. His wife was on a vacation trip in the U.S.

Leonhardy was deputy chief of mission in San Salvador before coming here. He had entered the diplomatic service in 1942, as consul in Barranquilla, Colombia. He later held posts in Copenhagen, Madrid, Mexico City and Washington.

LEONHARDY was seized only four blocks from his home in an upper middle class neighborhood of Guadalajara. The kidnapers' demands were not made public until four hours later, when they were read on Mexico's most popular night television news program.

"The publication of this document will indicate the acceptance by the government of our demands. If newspapers of May 5 do not publish this document as an answer to our demands we will proceed to execute the arrested," the document said.

Newspapers, after checking with high ranking government officials, published the text.

Dean may 'associate' Nixon with coverup that seems relevant to what the government viewed in June, 1971, as the illegal theft and publication of the Pentagon Papers.

Yet one former CIA lawyer said Saturday that the protection authority was a "pretty broad-ranging statute that I don't think has every really been interpreted by the courts."

Another former attorney for the CIA said in a telephone interview, "I have no problems over this. If the White House says come help us, the agency has a legal right to do it.

"I'm sure that there were many officials in the agency who were aware that it was illegal (for the CIA to operate in the United States), and I'm sure they asked about it, but you can't have people sitting around wriggling their fingers while waiting for someone else to make up his mind. People have got to get going."

Some of the material initially seized in Hunt's White House office safe after the Watergate bugging arrests — such as a red wig he once wore in an interview — was known to have been initially provided by the CIA, sources said. But the agency sent word through Dean that its involvement with Hunt and the other Watergate defendants had ended before the illegal bugging.

The breakin at the office of Ellsberg's psychiatrist was planned by members of the so-called "plumbers" teams, set up under Nixon's in an attempt to determine who was responsible for aiding Ellsberg.

Earlier this week, the federal judge in the Ellsberg case released an FBI report in which Ehrlichman was quoted as saying that he had set up the group after Nixon had "asked him to make inquiries independent of concurrent FBI investigations which had been made relating to the leak of the Pentagon Papers."

Another member of the "plumbers" operation said in an interview Saturday that Liddy and Hunt had authorized the installation of a scrambler telephone, ordinarily used in intelligence to protect classified information in the event of wiretapping, shortly after joining the operation. Hunt used the red scrambler telephone, this source said, for calling the CIA and other intelligence agencies.

A key question now facing the prosecutors in the Watergate case is this: did the CIA have any reason to believe that any illegal act was going to be committed as part of the White House's investigation into Ellsberg?

Mississippi flooding may last for month

Rain and thundershowers splashed the central states and snow fell in the higher regions of the Southwest Saturday.

The mighty Mississippi River stood above flood stage Saturday from the flatlands of Iowa to the bayous of Louisiana and farmers along the Mississippi delta were hauling catfish from fields where they normally would be planting cotton.

Many areas have been under water for weeks, but as in all things, the big river and its tributaries are in no hurry and officials predicted it likely would be a month or longer before the water drains off in some spots.

A low pressure system from North Dakota to New Mexico stepped up shower and thundershower activity from the upper Mississippi Valley to southwestern Texas.

Rainfall was generally light. Another developing low over Nevada brought snow to the mountain area and a spring snowstorm appeared in the making. Travelers' advisories were posted for the central Arizona mountains where four inches of snow were expected. Stockmen's advisories were listed for south and east Wyoming. Showers and thundershowers developed over lower parts of Arizona and remaining intermountain areas.

Clouds hugged the West Coast while the East Coast enjoyed cold, but fair, weather. Gardeners on the East Coast who worried over freeze and frost warnings Friday night could not rest well Saturday night either. Freeze and frost warnings were posted over the interior of the Virginias, western Pennsylvania and part of New York.

CSUC headquarters plan hit

On July 12, 1972, the trustees decided to accept the city's offer, and on Sept. 27 formally agreed to develop with the city a joint powers authority to proceed with development plans.

Named to the authority were Daniel P. Bryant and E.E. Wall, executives respectively with Bekins and Standard Oil; retired CSULB Dean Dr. Francis Flynn; Long Beach attorney George Wise and Vaile "Bud" Young, a Buffums executive.

Under terms of the agreement, the city would donate the land to the trustees, the joint powers authority would sell revenue bonds to finance construction of the nearly 95,000-square-foot building, and the system would pay rent to the authority for 28 years.

At the end of that period, the bonds would be paid off and the trustees would own the building.

Last Nov. 28, the city formally declared that the site was not needed for the original trust purposes, and two weeks ago the lands commission made a similar finding. The findings were required by Kennicks's bill.

Formal conveyance of the property to the trustees will take place shortly, Assistant City Manager Robert Creighton said Friday.

Since the newly formed authority would have no money of its own until it sold the revenue bonds, the city advanced it $300,000 from its treasury to meet preliminary planning costs. As a result, preparation of working drawings, soil testing, and the hiring of financial and legal assistance is already underway.

The bonds will be sold sometime this fall, after the actual cost of the building is determined.

In its recommendation to the State Lands Commission, the commission staff said the site of the proposed building met the criteria created by the trustees when they began searching for a new headquarters location.

Criteria are:

—That facilities for professional accessible to the greatest number of California State University and College Students and faculty and to other university and college campuses.

—That facilities for professional development and exchange as libraries, research, computer and business centers be readily accessible.

—That adequate housing be available.

—That project be economical.

The commission was told that its staff review also bear out the city's contention that the proposed conveyance appears to be in the best interests of the people of the state."

It was further concluded that the project "will not have a significant detrimental environmental impact, a conclusion agreed to by the South Coast Regional Conversation Commission.

COLLIER AND Stiern are among a small group of legislators who believe that all main state offices should be located in the capital. Also located away from Sacramento, in addition to the headquarters for the university and college system and the University of California, are the State Supreme Court, in San Francisco; the attorney general, primarily in Los Angeles; the Public Utilities Commission and the State Department of Industrial Relations, both in San Francisco, and the state agencies dealing with financial institutions.

The offices regulating insurance and banking are located in San Francisco, and the offices regulating corporation and savings and loan institutions are in Los Angeles.

Proponents of the Long Beach site contend that it would be available to the largest number of interested people than any other location, primarily because it is within two hours' driving time of 10 campuses representing 55 per cent of the students and faculty and 45 per cent of the campuses in the system.

Booming school enrollment gone

By RALPH HINMAN Jr.
Education Editor

There's a price to pay for everything . . .

Back in the booming, frenetic postwar 1950s, Long Beach barely could build enough schools to keep pace with a rapidly expanding population. Many classes operated double shifts, factory style, as the local district expanded physically into areas that had been beanfields only months earlier.

Then, a decade later, came the great slowdown. Long Beach's birth rate — as, indeed, occured across the continent — slowed from a torrent to a trickle as the "Pill" took hold and "zero population growth" became the watchword.

Individual school enrollments here dropped sharply from their peaks in the 1960s. Among the major losers in a development that hit every part of the district were Cubberley and Tincher eastside elementaries, down 666 and 656 respectively. The westside's Garfield School lost 582 pupils, with dips noted even in central city.

Nor were junior and senior highs exempt: Stanford JHS, down 487 from peak; DeMille, minus 418; Bancroft, down 462. Lakewood High lost 922; Poly, 747; Millikan, 663, Wilson, 544; Jordan 445.

And for every youngster not occupying space provided for him or her earlier, the district presently stands to lose $1,174 — or about $2.5 million if the enrollment decline bottoms out at 20,000 in the coming five years. Local schoolmen responded last week to the deepending trend by issuing the first of three descriptive pamphlets entitled "You Have a Right to Know." Dealt with in a document in the hands today of many Long Beach parents are enrollments.

IT IS sobering reading, as are bulletins to be distributed this week and next. Elementary and junior high school pupils will continue to carry home copies, while parents of senior high school students receive theirs in the mail during the next 10 days.

Number two in a series published by the Long Beach Board of Education and signed by Supt. W. Odie Wright is a description of how "Plunging Enrollment Slashes School Income."

And moving with almost inevitable logic from Point A to Point B and finally to C, the three-part series concludes by declaring "We must Cut Costs to Maintain Quality."

While noting that teachers "should have the highest priority in the budget. pamphlet No. 3 declares bluntly, "School staff must be cut..The administrative staff has already been reduced and must be reduced further . . . and further it is agreed the support staff and number of clasified employes must be reduced if the total budget is to properly reflect continuing losses in enrollment and income and regular classroom instruction is to be kept at a high level."

Questions are raised . .

"Does this mean some schools may be consolidated (closed)? Custodial services reduced? What about school maintenance? Should the numbers of junior and senior high school offerings be reduced? Program items with the lowest and highest priorities?"

. . . but not answered. Readers are told "the real objective is to make cuts which will have the least effect on the quality of education." And, "With the understanding and assistance of parents this can be done."

THERE IS very little completely new information in the series. In fact, a further negative financial impact caused by a pending closing of the Long Beach Naval Station is not dealt with at all; announcement in Washington of a development that will affect so many aspects of local life came during preparation of the papers.

(A district spokesman last week said the departure of an estimated 2,600 children of uniformed servicemen could cost about $1.1 million in federal aid, $3.1 million from the state. Although actual sailing of some 60 Pacific Fleet ships to new homeports is not slated until summer 1974, school officials presently are keeping fingers tightly crossed. If fleet movements should begin this year, the potential loss could immediately be felt here.

Most of the sorry details have been explored beofre in these pages. Bob Schmidt, The I,P-T's Sacramento correspondent, last month described legislation — school aid/tax reform SB90 and its followup, "Son of SB 90" — that may prove damaging to Long Beach. And the education editor has written two or more depth stories annually since 1970 on this new phenomenon of declining enrollments and their gloomy portents.

Many will ask, perhaps, why should such a series be issued this month?

Employe groups may be expected to view it in a mood ranging from cautious to outright hostile. It comes in those last, climactic weeks before board and superintendent agree upon salary schedules for 1973-74 and might be construed as an effort to hold down those schedules.

Other observers will note the imminence of the annual budget-making season. The district's first, very-preliminary budget may be expected in June, followed by the second, or "publication," budget in July, with the final document up for approval in early August.

AS THAT season neared, teams of schoolmen appointed by the superintendent probed deeply into the district's major programmatic areas — personnel, operations, business affairs, etc. Reports from the study groups now are under high-level review and proposed cuts or reductions could possibly be reflected in the coming budget.

Another factor presently at work could be the once-in-a-lifetime rebate last fall of some $0.3 million in impounded tideland oil taxes. Ad hoc study committees for both the unified and community college district have been at work since December in preparing recommendations for board consideration as to how the money might best be spent in this or some future year.

Suggestions from various community groups concerned with education reportedly range from the construction in every school of instructional media centers to the creation of an investment fund which would provide permanent income by earning interest for the district

The multimillion-dollar fund presently is invested, as provided for by law, and the Board of Education might well defer any final decision. Or trustees might opt to move immediately, using the money in some fashion to ease the present strain.

And a feeling of frustration around school headquarters at 7th and Locust could be a root cause for a decision to release the three-part series. For even though Long Beach legislators staunchly defend its interests in Sacramento, the final benefits from a hard-fought SOS tax override campaign in 1970-71 could still be lost forever to local use.

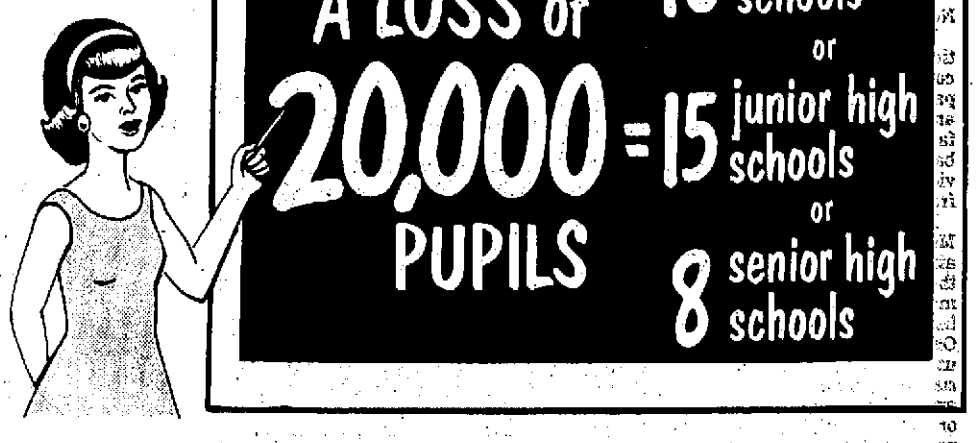

With only 53-cents of the voter-approved 95-cent unified district tax override already used, and with the remainder held in reserve for emergencies, the district may yet lose the final 42-cents because of action at the Capitol. In a statement marked by blunt bitterness, a pamphlet declares:

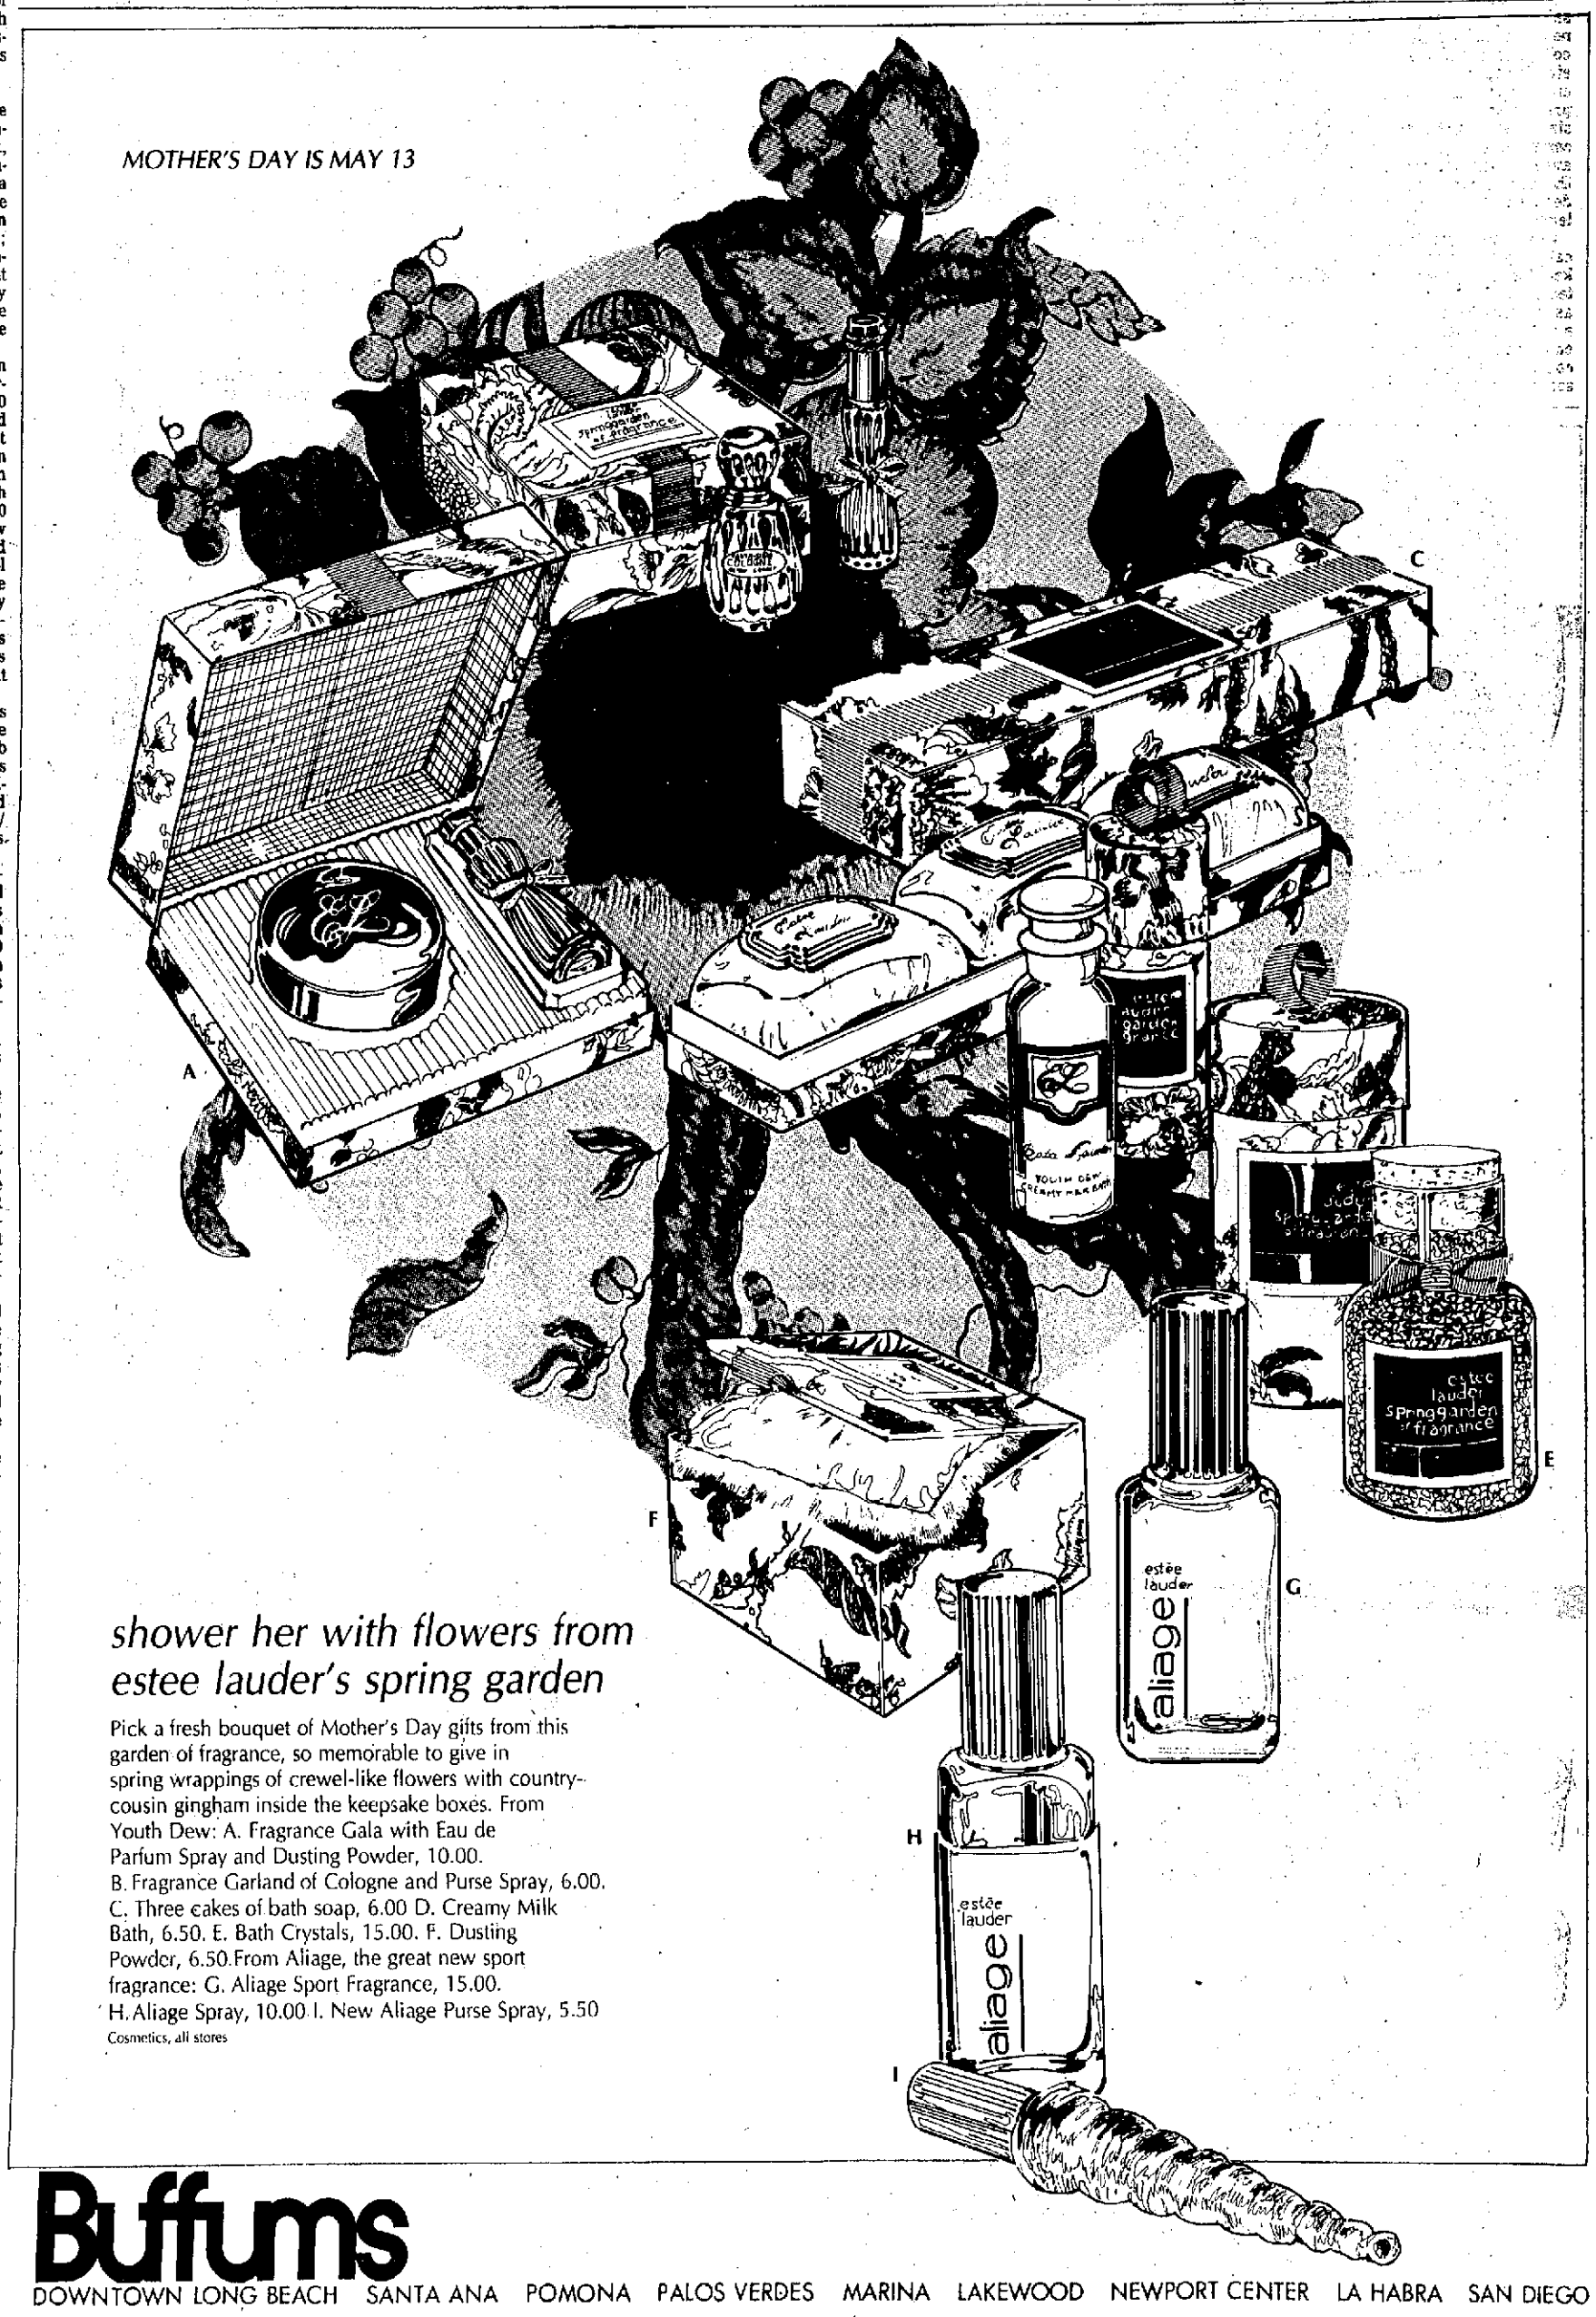

"Recent 'tax reform' legislation has not benefited the Long Beach Unified School District. In addition, efforts are being made at this time in Sacramento to deprive our school district of the SOS funds approved overwhelmingly by local voters."

In any case, it's startling to see the enrollment decline officially defined in these terms: "A loss of 20,000 pupils (the estimated 1963-78 total) equals 40 elementary schools or 15 junior high schools or 8 senior high schools."

Remembering that the 20,000 would come from all three segments, its still a shaker to recall the district now operates only 55 elementaries, 14 junior highs and 8 high schools.

There's cold comfort, perhaps, in the knowledge that Long Beach isn't alone in all this. News sources across the state and nation increasingly are reporting comparable declines in every regions. It might be considered part of an unknown price still to be paid for the zero population growth some authorities say they see about AD 2030.

Traditional courses in foreign language fading

New York Times Service

NEW YORK — Traditional foreign language courses, one accepted part of most high school and college schedules, are fading into the curriculum background, apparently victims of the trend away from required courses.

Figures reported by the Modern Language Association this week showed that the decline in enrollments for these courses is becoming rather steep. Only the so-called uncommon languages — such as Chinese, Russian and Hebrew — are rising or holding their now in numbers of students.

An MLA spokesman said that, according to a nearly completed survey, college enrollments in foreign languages have decreased overall by an unprecedented 10 per cent since 1970. Although no comparable figures are available for high schools, the spokesman said the decline is also hting that level.

One result is a drastically tightening job market for foreign-language teachers who, as recently as the mid-1960's, enjoyed a seller's market. Smaller enrollments mean fewer courses to teach, and even some tenured teachers are feeling the pinch.

Ironically, the decline comes at a time when young people logically could be expected to be more — not less — interested in learning foreign languages. There is increasing international travel, study aborad, and concern about other cultures. Moreoever, new teaching methods and equipment have been developed in recent years.

Yet, the modern language association reported these enrollment decreases between 1970 and 1972: French 16.7 per cent, German 12.5 per cent, Italian 5.9 per cent, Spanish 5.4 per cent, and Latin 7.7 per cent.

Enrollments in Chinese, Japanese, Russian, Portuguese and Hebrew — the "exotic" languages — have gone up 20 per cent since 1970; but these syarted from small bases. Chinese, for example, jumped 50 per cent from 6,000 students to 9,000, but this number is in a total college enrollment of 9 million. And the gains in these languages may be short-lived: The Nixon administration's proposed 1974 budget has eliminated the $14 million annual allocation which for 10 years has subsidized some of these courses on about 100 campuses.

Work, honors grow for scientist, 80

NOBEL LAUREATE HAROLD C. UREY
Heavy Hydrogen Discoverer, at 80, With Honors
-AP Wirephoto

Associated Press

LA JOLLA — On the calendar is written "Houston and a conference about the moon."

In June, Barcelona and the origins of life. In August, Australia and the solar system...

A dozen other invitations on Harold C. Urey's desk are impossible to accept. He recently celebrated his 80th birthday, and the demands on his time seem to be growing.

"I feel a bit fragile," said Urey in an interview. "I still walk down the stairs, all five floors, but I take the elevator up."

A one-time Indiana farm boy, he has been a working professor and scientist since the University of Montana appointed him in 1919. At the age of 38, he discovered heavy hydrogen, the substance that combines with oxygen to make heavy water — the essential ingredient of the hydrogen bomb.

The Nobel Prize was awarded Urey for that discovery in 1934, and the honors, awards from governments and special degrees still come. His secretary recently counted 30 such medals and awards and 16 honorary degrees, including nine from foreign countries.

Among the latest, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration honored Urey for "pioneering cosmoschemistry theories of the origin and history of the moon, the meteorites and the planets...and for major experimental contributions to the theories of the origin of life on earth and elsewhere in the universe."

Life wherever it exists is as close to the white-haired Urey as the orchids and peach roses which he nurses with a painter's touch in the backyard of the home where he and his wife, Frieda, have lived since 1959.

In the same breath in which he talks of eons of time — he believes man's so ar system began as a huge gaseous mass, contracting as the sun formed in the center, throwing off goblets of gas and solids that collided as planets — Urey is a modern man.

The rear bumper of his 1967-model car displays this sticker:

"Don't blame me. I voted for McGovern," the Nixon administration's cutbacks in scientific research funds have saddened him, and he thinks the American people have allowed rioting by "a small handful" of activist college students in the 1960s to permit this.

"The social problems in the United States today are not just going to go away," Urey said.

"All the people — American Indians, blacks, Mexicans, Chinese, Japanese or any other — are eventually going to be brought into this society by one method or another.

"And we had better try our best to make all of our people the best kind of people we possibly can."

Urey, who served as one of three program chiefs of the Manhattan Project from which the atomic bomb grew, believes "it's a very bad mistake to cut back on education so rapidly...I don't understand it at all."

Removing Roadblocks to Learning

It helps to organize subject

By Leslie J. Nason, Ed.D.

The student who keeps a subject organized has several advantages over those who do not.

That is — if he has subject matter organized in his mind — not just a pencil and paper outline.

Learning takes place during the organizing of subject matter in the mind of the student.

He learns by doing the organizing. You can't do it for him!

PRESENTING students with materials already

Eighth of a series organized in the form of charts and diagrams is planned as a short cut to learning. More often this approach turns out to be a roadblock!

The process of organization was carried out by the author. The student may fall into the trap of trying to memorize the completed product. In this approach the student works hard but little or no learning takes place.

To learn from preorganized material the student must break material down to bit sized portions, understand each, and rebuild the organization for himself. This is a learning not a memorizing process.

Jane was having trouble with a course in animal biology. Her textbook and her workbook both presented her with completed diagrams. As samples they included the digestive tract of a frog, the skeleton of a dog, the nervous system of a cat.

Each sketch and chart was too complex for Jane to digest through direct study.

At my suggestion, Jane broke down the study of each into steps.

FOR EXAMPLE: To master the digestive tract of a frog Jane first studied the diagram looking for the major parts of the system and trying to understand the digestive process as a whole.

Jane's next step was to close the book and try sketching the tract. On the first try she could get a few of the parts in place but not all. She rechecked the book, corrected her sketch adding parts. Jane then threw the first attempt away and started over with a clean sheet of paper and of course again a closed book.

After two or three trys Jane could build her own sketch. She could label the parts. Now with a clear picture of a frog's digestive tract in her mind, she could think through and learn the digestive process in detail.

Jane had broken the complex diagram down, reassembled it and in the process had removed a block to learning.

Jane applied the repeated study and sketch plan to each new complex diagram. She was no longer frustrated in the study of animal biology. Besides she had learned an approach that would unblock the learning of complex preorganized materials in other studies.

EVEN GOOD STUDENTS are often blocked when faced with general survey courses. Courses dealing in single subjects fall into rather obvious patterns. When several patterns in a single course overlap students have trouble organizing.

Students ask "How can I bring order out of such chaos?"

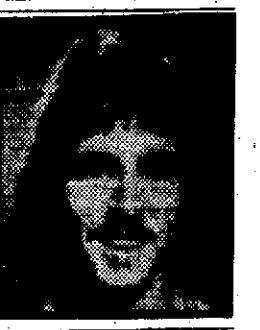

The answer: Outline ahead!

Make a written outline of each chapter BEFORE it is discussed in class. Use short sentences. State in your own words what you think the author said. Leave space between statements.

TAKE THE outline to class and use it in your note-taking. You may have to revise your ideas in the light of the instructor's explanation.

The Nixon Team

Overkill, arrogance, zealotry and manipulation

By SAUL PETT
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON — A sense of the jugular. A passion for overkill, for the fast hardsell. A one dimensional view of the world as being either for or against them. A distrust of people. An impatience with the odds. A fear of anything not manipulated. A terminal clot of zealotry and inexperience, arrogance and power.

The result:

Watergate.

Among people in a good position to perceive them, these were the separate pieces — the mentality, attitudes and climate of the White House — that ultimately produced the messy mosaic.

Largely these people spoke of the senior domestic staff until recently at the White House, men like H. R. Haldeman, John Ehrlichman, John Dean, and others below. None of these sources saw a direct link between Richard Nixon and the disaster, but many perceived indirect connections between

MELVIN LAIRD
'A Stupid Idea'

Watergate and the presidential psyche.

Overkill. The hard sell . . .

Anticipating a fight in Congress over appropriations for part of the Anti-Ballistic Missile program, the Trident submarine and the B1 bomber, presidential assistants urged a massive national campaign of newspaper ads.

Mel Laird, then secretary of defense and a veteran politician, fought them off. "The secretary," said a source close to him, "knew it was a stupid idea that would only create an issue, mobilize the opposition and bring resentment on the hill even before there was a fight. The way to start, of course, was to deal quietly with the appropriate committees and see who needed persuading."

It is said no presidential convention in history was more highly structured and scenarioed in advance than the Republicans' in Miami last year. White House aides provided or tried to provide every speaker with his text. They were even ready to run out on the floor with cards of prefab remarks for delegates about to be interviwed.

They struck out with Barry Goldwater, according to an aide of the senator, even after hounding him into the men's room with a speech text. "How insulting can you be," asked the aide, "to a man who was once your nominee for president?"

"We were obviously geared up for a rough fight that never materialized," said a White House assistant, who himself has been linked with dirty tricks. "We are expecting espionage and sabotage from the other side. What I can't understand is why the machine we started didn't stop or slow down when it became obvious it wasn't needed."

Arrogance . . .

Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas, appointed chairman of the Republican National Committee for the campaign, was asked, he said, "by Haldeman and others" if he was loyal to the President.

"Even to be asked was insulting," the senator said recently. "Especially for a man who fought for their Supreme Court nominations and stood on the floor of the Senate arguing against any cut in funds for Cambodia.

"The President," said Dole, "never asked me to do anything I thought I shouldn't. But his staff did. If I showed them a tough statement I was about to make they wanted it tougher. I had to tell them I would not make speeches impugning the integrity of others."

SEN. ROBERT DOLE

In the inaugural parade last January, the Senator from Kansas was assigned a car that was at least a $1.50 cab ride from the front. He is no longer national chairman.

A former high administration official describes the young men who came into the White House with Nixon as "juniors," men of limited previous success and experience, highly partisan and combative, zealots who felt that only their leader could save the nation from disaster.

Many came from the advertising business. Many had worked in politics before only as campaign advance men. The source continued:

"And their attitude remained that of the advance man, who is not interested in substance but looks at life only as a series of events to be managed. They knew nothing about under-statement or persuasion. They thought in terms of attack, attack, even when attack was unnecessary. And in the White House, they never learned the difference between running a campaign and running a country."

The men who worked in the Nixon White House appeared to share many of his characteristics.

"I believe in the battle," Nixon said in an interview last December, "whether it's the battle of a campaign or the battle of this office, which is a continuing battle. It's always there wherever you go. I, perhaps, carry it more than others because that's my way."

PRESIDENT NIXON
'Whip Them Up'

By his own account, he has long been wary of letting down, of relaxing in victory or defeat for fear of making a mistake. "You must be up for the great events," he said. "Up, but not uptight."

And the morning after he won the presidency by the second largest landslide in history, he reminded his cabinet and staff of the numbered days left until they go out of office, of the need to work as intensely as ever.

"The leader has to whip them up," Richard Nixon explained later in an interview. "The team goes just as fast as the leader, as the quarterback and coach, and I am both."

Then, as before, the staff worked long, intense, humorless hours. "After a while," said one staff member, "things weren't measured by their real effectiveness but by the amount of energy that went into them."

"Do not be lulled into a sense of false security by the polls which show the President well ahead at the moment," Charles Colson, then a special counsel to the President, told the staff. "Make every day count."

And then Colson told them that, to re-elect the President, he "would walk over my grandmother if necessary."

25 years of independence

Israel—an obsession of survival

The state of Israel celebrates its first 25 years Monday, the anniversary date according to the Hebrew calendar of its founding on May 14, 1948. At 25, it has come out stronger than ever in three wars with the Arabs, but its neighbors remain hostile and Palestine refugees in other countries still seek revenge for the homes and properties they lost.

By THOMAS CHEATHAM

TEL AVIV (UPI)—From the Nazi holocaust grew a Jewish state whose obsession for security and survival has pushed it from virtual impoverishment to a land of abundance and strength in its first 25 years.

David Ben Gurion's declaration of independence on May 14, 1948, set the nation—there were then 650,000 people, most of them concentration camp survivors—on a course that would lead to three wars against Arab armies intent on destroying Israel.

It is still surrounded by hostile neighbors, and perhaps 3 million Palestine refugees and descendents are outside looking in.

The feeling that no one else can be counted on for help has helped generate a driving force behind the development of a 20th century, semi-industrialized nation with a population of 3 million, half of them immigrants.

"THE rate of crowth has been beyond what legitimately could have been expected in the perilous atmosphere of May, 1948," Foreign Minister Abba Eban said in an anniversary interview. "I know it has exceeded my wildest dreams."

The army that rose out of underground gangs fought the war of independence with homemade grenades and mortars, and guns and planes smuggled in from the surplus piles of postwar Europe. Its tanks were trucks armored with sheet steel.

Today, Israel is making missiles and missile ships, combat rifles, artillery, ammunition and, according to foreign reports, its own fighter-bomber, the Barak (lightning). Its tanks are from the United States and Britain.

Whereas the early fighting men were conscripted immediately upon landing, the new army draws its strength from the boys and girls who sign on at 18, many of them aiming for a career. The military is the nation's backbone.

THE tents and huts that accommodated refugees from Europe and the concentration camps in the 1940s have given way to sprawling cities and towns of drab but functional cement apartments costing as much as $50,000.

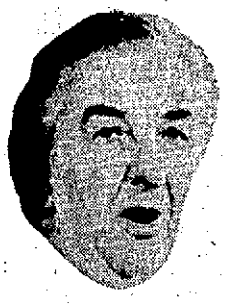

The barren beaches where the pioneers landed are now sprouting with glass and steel seaside hotels, evidence of a tourism industry that is the nation's top earner of foreign currency.

Out of the coastal dunes and plains have risen orange groves and collective settlements whose output has eliminated food rationing and enabled Israel to export such items as orange juice and turkey sausage to the United States and Europe.

The former newcomers who arrived with only the tattered clothes on their backs can now walk down jazzy Dizengoff Street shopping for locally made fashions matching the styles of Paris and Rome. Israeli leatherwear and bikinis are big numbers abroad, too.

FROM an initially Eastern European-based society has emerged a trendy, Americanized scene with pizza parlors and red, white and blue sandwich shops. Yes, there is a generation gap in the promised land of milk and honey.

Polish and Russian settlers, backbone of the Jewish presence in Palestine even before Israel was created, are still at the helm, led by 74-year-old Prime Minister Golda Meir. Yet half the population is under 20.

ABBA EBAN
Dreams Exceeded

The unity of purpose, and the zionistic zeal of the 1940s, have yielded to internal squabbles between religious Jews and secular Israelis, the native-born Sabra and the immigrant, the eastern Jew and the westerner.

Strikes and open discontent are the products of low pay — the average salary is $300 a month — and taxes of up to 82 per cent to pay the high price of defense.

"The community is much less adhesive than it was in 1948," Eban said, "but when danger threatens, the ranks close. The 1967 war showed that. In crisis, visions are recaptured."

From a people cast in sorrow and fear has risen a bustling land confident to the point of arrogance, yet genuinely puzzled why the Arab world finds its presence unacceptable in the Middle East.

"NEVER AGAIN" was the word following World War II, and still is. It explains a lot about Israel's steadfastness.

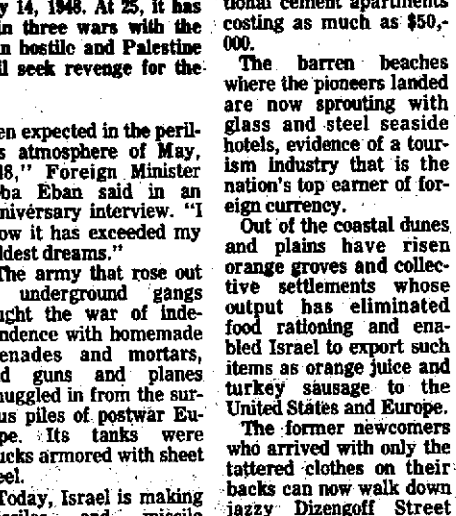

The first nation to recognize Israel, the United States, is still its godfather, supplying the weaponry and diplomatic support necessary to help deter the Arab world from attack. President Nixon is a man of honor in this country.

It was he who delivered the American pledge of $550 million in aid and loans for Israel when Mrs. Meir visited Washington recently.

Her trip evoked memories of the day in 1948 when she arrived in New York with $10 in her purse to raise money for Israel's struggle against besieging Arab armies. She came away with $25 million.

Said Ben Gurion on her return: "Some day, when our history is written, it will be said there was a Jewish woman who raised the money which made the state possible."

Mrs. Meir is, in effect, the continuity and strength of Israel exemplified today, 25 years later.

JEWISH MOURNING

JERUSALEM (UPI) — A nationwide wail of sirens Saturday opened a 24-hour mourning period for Israel's war dead while thousands of Israelis and tourists poured into Jerusalem for the military parade Monday marking the state's 25th anniversary celebration.

A one-minute blast signaled a stoppage of traffic in tribute to the casualties of fighting dating back to the then-fledgling state's 1948 struggle against invading Arab armies.

President Zalman Shazar lit a memorial candelabrum in the old city of Jerusalem.

In an order of the day by Lt. Gen. David Elazar, the army chief of staff, families of fallen soldiers were told their relatives died in fulfillment of "a strong and sure Israel, ready to face what is to come, her hand stretched out in peace."

Some men consider the combination of contemporary styling in natural shouldered comfort as one of the small harmonies in life.

Ailing Ben-Gurion reflects on Israel

By WILLIAM L. RYAN Correspondent

In a long and futile search for peace and security for his new nation, David Ben-Gurion came to regard the Russians as the greatest threat to Israel's existence. He found the late Gamal Abdel Nasser as the man most to blame for an unending state of war tension and Tito of Yugoslavia a big disappointment as a potential peacemaker.

A new Ben-Gurion book, including some hitherto unpublished material, spans three decades of intense efforts by this pioneer Zionist to reach understandings with the Arabs.

Entitled "My Talks with Arab Leaders," it is published appropriately, on the eve of Israel's 25th anniversary celebration.

Ben-Gurion, now 86 and ailing, emigrated to Palestine from Poland as a boy of 17. On May 14, 1948 he proclaimed Israel's independence as her first premier.

IN THE early days of 1956, Ben-Gurion wrote, he told an emissary from President Eisenhower, identified only as "X.L.", a former assistant secretary of state for defense, that he was intensely fearful of Russian influence. At the time, under Soviet auspices, Czechoslovak arms were pouring into Egypt.

"If the Soviets gain control of the region," Ben-Gurion told the emissary, "our existence will be impossible. . .If Russia occupies the countries around us, that will be the end of us."

DAVID BEN-GURION
Headed New Nation

That was in March 1956, when President Eisenhower was trying to relieve tension in the strategic world crossroads area. The atmosphere was becoming heated in a crisis building over the Suez Canal zone.

Ben-Gurion quoted the American is having found Nasser willing to listen, though insistent on the utmost secrecy about the Eisenhower effort. The Egyptian leader was pictured as fearful of becoming a target for an Arab assassin. The emissary put before Nasser proposals for a meeting of Israeli and Egyptian leaders and for prohibition of shooting across border lines.

The U.S. president's representative, Ben-Gurion said, bluntly asked Nasser whether he had hostile intentions for the use of the Czechoslovak arms and got in response not only an emphatic denial but a profession of sincerity in seeking a peace settlement.

BUT, said Ben-Gurion, Nasser never accepted the proposals and "it was plain, in fact, that he was opposed to them.

"The Israeli premier had no doubt Nasser was intent on war. "He has tremendous ambition," Ben Gurion wrote of that day's Nasser. "He wants to be the leader of the Arabs, the Moselems and the peoples of Africa. He is a clever man and while he does not want to lose the goodwill of the United States, he does not want to be solely dependent on the United States and that is why he is dealing with the Russians."

War did come that October, but it was Israel that launched it with French and British connivance.

IN 1963, Ben-Gurion made another attempt to get some sort of peace machinery in motion. The premier, then 76, wrote to President Tito proposing that the Yugoslav Communist, as a man professing to seek world peace, play a part in bringing Egypt and Israel together for negotiations. Ben-Gurion proposed to travel to Belgrade, secretly or openly, to discuss the matter, but Tito's reply was "disappointing."

"In view of present conditions in this part of the world and the significant developments and tensions now prevailing, outside intervention in my view could not produce the desired results," Tito wrote.

It was Ben-Gurion's last try. Two months later, "for personal reasons," he resigned as premier.

The Promised Land

Milk and honey — and industry

By RICHARD C. GROSS

TEL AVIV (UPI) — Israel could not live on the proverbial milk and honey alone, so it had to find other ways to grow and prosper.

It did, in large part, by such innovations as taking the orange it used to export, peeling it and making from it dozens of products for sale.

From an agricultural society plowed out of the sloping sands of the coastal plains, the Negev Desert and the drained malarial marshes of the midlands, Israel now has entered an industrial revolution. Its mills have become the fastest growing sector of the economy.

As necessity is the mother of invention, so the need for defense acted as an incentive to develop industrial technology that today ranges from sophisticated petrochemical outputs to electronics.

THE lack of raw materials has forced Israeli scientists to get more out of what they have to work with.

Nevertheless, growing pains have not eased for a nation of three million celebrating its 25th anniversary. Israelis still grasp at a prosperity made elusive by the world's highest rate of taxation necessary to pay for enormous defense needs. Their national debt totals $4 billion, the equivalent of $1,250 for every man, woman and child in the country.

Israel also has been straining to absorb tens of thousands of immigrants every year. And in the midst of all this, inflation is bounding along at between 10 and 15 per cent a year.

Exports are the future of Israel, says Dr. Moshe Mandelbaum, a seventh-generation native and deputy director-general of the commerce and ministry industry. "We need exports to increase the standard of living that Israelis want to live at and to keep attracting immigrants."

Oranges and grapefruits comprised most of the $48 billion in exports during Israel's first year. Jaffa oranges and grapefruit and their juices became known all around the world.

But Israel, hungry for money and the power to fight its wars, needed industry.

There were the King Solomon copper mines in the south, first opened more than 2,000 years ago. There were scattered textile mills producing the material for the growth of the fashion industry. There were food processing plants.

Mandlebaum wanted small industries — to take advantage of the "human element."

By 1972, Israel was exporting $1.75 billion worth of goods each year — about 85 per cent of it from the growing factories, which also contributed to the nation's increasing pollution problem.

Israel also took its famed oranges and squeezed, sliced, peeled, canned, bottled and froze their fruit and juice, and extracted oil from the peel to add aroma to household sprays.

The processed oranges brought $200 a ton to Israel instead of the $50 the whole fruit brought in the supermarkets of Europe and America.

And the milk and honey? Israel produces enought of both to feed its own population.

Secret Witness cases, rewards listed

As part of the Independent, Press-Telegram's Secret Witness program, summaries of cases in which rewards of specified amounts are offered are printed in the Independent and Press-Telegram each Thursday and Sunday. Rewards paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of suspects in any other criminal cases, not covered in these summaries, will vary in amount depending on the seriousness of the offense. The summaries follow:

—A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the murderer of 21-year-old Joyce King, of 5221 Cortland Ave., Lynwood, slain in the early morning hours of Jan. 1, 1972. Miss King left her home shortly after midnight to walk to a nearby drive-in restaurant. Her partially-clothed body, slashed by 40 to 50 knife wounds, was found approximately eight hours later in an alley behind the 11600 block of Louise Avenue in Lynwood.

—A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the murderer of Julia Holan, 88, who died April 14 of injuries received when she was knocked down by a purse thief on Eighth Street near Pacific Avenue on the previous day. The killer-thief was described as white, about 18 years old, about 5 feet, 8 inches tall, medium build, and with neatly trimmed brown hair.

—A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the murderer of Deborah Ann Baker, 18, whose strangled body was found March 21 in a vacant field adjacent to Los Coyotes Country Club, near Beach Boulevard and Rosecrans Avenue in Fullerton. Fullerton police theorize the young woman's body was dumped in the field after she was killed in the early monring hours on that date in another location. Miss Miss Baker was last seen alive by a girl friend with whom she was temporarily sharing an apartment at 1313 E. Wilshire Ave., Fullerton, at 1 p.m. on the previous day. At that time, she left the apartment and told her friend she was going on a job interview.

—A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the murderer of Fletcher Jordan Herndon, 58, of San Pedro, on the night of last Feb. 6. Herndon and his wife had just returned home from dining out and Mrs. Herndon was parking the car when an unknown assassin hiding outside the house at 985 Channel St. felled Herndon with two shotgun blasts in the chest as he walked up to the front door.

A $2,025 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the killers of pharmacist Patrick Horgan, 59, at the Horgan Pharmacy, 1403 Cherry Ave., on March 9. Horgan was shot in the back as he waited on three men who fled without taking any money after the shot was fired. The killers, black men in their early or middle 30s, drove away in a 1963 or 1964 maroon Chevrolet convertible.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the murderer of Victor Joseph Zalneraitis, of Long Beach, whose body was found lying in the oil fields southwest of Cherry Avenue and Burnett Street in Signal Hill last March 30. Zalneraitis had been slain by multiple stab wounds in the chest and back, apparently inflicted with a pocket knife. The 6-foot, 180-pound victim was last seen alive in a pool parlow at 2499 E. Pacific Coast Highway in Signal Hill late on the night before the body was discovered by an industrial worker.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the murderer of Mrs. Helga Dorothea Brown, 64, whose nude body was found in Scherer Park last Sept. 23. Mrs. Brown, last seen alive by her husband and friends on the morning of Sept. 17, had been beaten and strangled by someone who hid the body on an island in the duck pond part of the park. Her empty purse and part of her clothing were found near a picnic table in the park area.

— A $500 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of Freddie Tidmore, alias Fred Douglas Mabson, 20, sought in connection with the holdup shooting of John Bell, 33-year-old clerk at the Wooden Shoe Liquor store, 2053 Orange Ave., last Dec. 20. Bell, critically wounded, identified Tidmore as his assailant. Tidmore, who is black, 5 feet 10 inches tall, 155 pounds, is believed to be still in the Long Beach-Compton area.

— Secret Witness will pay $2,000 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the murderer of 11-year-old Teri Lynn Hollis, of 2036 Dalemeade St., Torrance, who was kidnapped from the front yard of her home last Thanksgiving Day. Her body, clad only in a white T-shirt, was found on a rocky and desolate stretch of beach 11 miles south of Oxnard on the following day. The little blonde girl had been raped and strangled. Teri was last seen alive by an informant who told Torrance police she was riding near her home on a bicycle pedaled by a young man about 21 years old, dark-haired, and about 5 feet, 6 inches tall.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the murderer of Kathleen Ann LaChance, aspiring Long Beach actress who lived at 4524 Banner Drive. Miss La Chance was last seen alive at 5 p.m. last Nov. 15 as she was leaving an actors' Workshop play rehearsal at the apartment of a friend in Los Angeles. Her nude body, arms bound by leather straps and mouth stuffed with sand, was found late that night near the pier on the Santa Monica beachfront. She had been raped and stabbed repeatedly.

— Rewards totaling $4,000 will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the killer of Mrs. Velma Harris, 44, shot to death in her Long Beach home at 5020 Centralia St. on Aug. 17, 1971. Her body was discovered by her husband, Ralph K. Harris, 47, when he came home from work at 11 a.m. Mr. Harris has posted a $2,000 reward in the case, and this amount is being matched by the Secret Witness service.

— A $1,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrests and convictions of the members of a Long Beach area auto theft gang who steal cars from throughout the Southland and then, at one of a number of auto repair shops, strip them for parts.

—A $2,000 reward is in force for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the killer of Mrs. Marguerite June Makeig, 50, shot in the head and killed when she returned to her home, 10608 Felson St., Bellflower, on the afternoon of Aug. 11, 1971. Mrs. Makeig had been shopping. When she walked into her living room, someone armed with a small-caliber handgun fired once, the bullet striking her in the head.

—A $2,000 reward is being offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the man who killed Elliot C. Lawson, 38, during a holdup at the Atlantic Inn, 1854 Atlantic Ave., at about 1:10 a.m. on July 16, 1971. The killer is described as a Negro, about 25 years old, 5-feet-7, 130 pounds with a two inch Afro hairdo. The man has a slender face, large eyes, a slender nose, and smooth, medium complexion. He has a deep voice, is straight in posture and is well-groomed.

—A $2,500 reward is in force for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the killer of Independent, Press-Telegram pressman Frank M. Schiavone, 41, and his wife, Shirley, 44, who were shot from ambush May 9, 1972, upon returning to their home in Westminster after an evening out. Westminster police are seeking to question a man believed to have been the last person to have seen the Schiavones alive. The man was with them in Woody's Bar, Springdale Avenue and Garden Grove Boulevard, Westminster, shortly before they were murdered. He is described as a white man in his mid-20s to early 30s, from 5-feet-10 to 6-feet-1 in height, with wavy, dark brown hair, a medium-dark, olive complexion and pock-marked square face with high cheekbones.

—A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the killers of Long Beach auto wholesaler Robert Wilson Cogley, 44, shot to death in the parking lot of the Highway Center Liquor Store, Pacific Coast Highway and California Avenue, at 1:40 a.m. last Aug. 12. Cogley's killers are described as Negroes between 16 and 19 years old and from 5-feet-7 to 5-feet-10 in height.

—A $500 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of Homer B. Miller, 25, also known as "Stony," in connection with the April 1971 torture murder of 22-year-old police informer and small-time dope peddler John C. "Tattoo Johnny" Reed. The victim was found dead in the gutter at Ninth Street and Harbor Avenue. His ears had been cut off and he was slashed and beaten. Officers say Reed was killed in an apartment at 324 Magnolia Ave., where there were six other men present when he was last seen alive and tied to a chair the night before his body was found. Miller is described by detectives as a "hippie-type" who has the name "Stony" tattooed below a swastika on his left arm. A line of numbers appears to have been tatooed on his left forearm.

'Tough' breaking into man's world

Girl reporter goes job-hunting

By KRIS DULANEY
Staff Writer

A woman has a tough job trying to crack the male-oriented job market.

I know, because I tried.

And whatever a woman is looking for through employment in a so-called man's job, she's likely to encounter several sexually-based roadblocks, many of which can leave her deflated, frustrated and bitter.

Some women freely admit they seek such jobs only to establish their personal mark of equality, or liberation, in occupations traditionally held by men. Others say they want to be paid on the same scale as men, even if it means doing a "man's job."

STILL OTHERS claim all they want is to do a job they like, and do it well — regardless of pay. But whatever the motives, the results are often the same:

Eagerness dissipates into apathy and anger, dreams melt into the realization that, even in 1973, there still are some jobs — in fact, a great variety of occupations — that have yet to feel the feminine touch and probably won't for quite some time.

And, in an already oversaturated job market, where employers often admit they have the prerogative to pick and choose from several applicants for one opening, it's all too easy to discriminate against females, claims the National Organization for Women (NOW).

Three weeks ago, NOW members charged that 84 out of 87 (95 per cent) Los Angeles employment agencies, polled in a recent survey, discriminate against women, in defiance of state and federal laws.

Though such violations sometimes are difficult to pinpoint — Title VII of the U.S. Civil Rights Act made it unlawful for an employer to refuse an applicant on the basis of sex — many employers openly admit that they will not, under any circumstances, hire a woman for the performance of certain tasks.

OTHER employers, however, while expressing doubts about hiring a female, will allow women to fill out applications and go through interviews, sometimes offering a woman the job.

But there seems to be no specific pattern or design — other than, possibly, an employer's personal feelings — for discrimination against women, I discovered.

After two days of earnestly applying for what I considered to be a male-oriented jobs, I learned that while my sex was, indeed, a barrier to employment with some firms, other employers in the same occupation said they would be willing to hire a woman.

Out of approximately 32 inquiries, I was offered, or at least promised consideration for, 10 jobs. Twelve employers answered my requests with an absolute, "No, we don't hire women" policy, while another 10 interviews were inconclusive, with job offers pending further information and reports on my experience in those fields.

Most of the jobs I applied for required little or no experience, almost all were answered through Independent, Press-Telegram classified ads, and most prospective employers registered shock, disbelief or outright sarcasm when confronted with a female applicant for their jobs.

"Uh, are you asking for yourself or your husband?" queried a woman's voice on the phone at International City Security, a firm that advertised, "Need 50 men. Highest pay in industry."

WHEN I assured her that I was asking for myself, the reply was a polite, but firm, "No, we don't hire female security guards. Not at all."

"You're in the man's department, aren't you, honey?" asked the secretary at Long Beach's George Amey Agency in somewhat condescending tones when I told her I wanted to apply for a security guard job.

"Most clients want men, and the only openings we've had for women were for part-time security people in department stores. Those were all up in Los Angeles," she added.

When I asked the same woman about another advertised job — management trainee — her response was that the job job involved door-to-door collections for a finance company.

"Some of these (finance) companies will hire women, but they want them to be about 35-years-old; I'm afraid you're just too young for that job," said the agency secretary.

"THE BUSINESS involves going out and knocking on doors, collecting, and that can get pretty rough!" she explained.

While the agency representative said the same companies will hire men at age 21, "so they can take them up through the ranks of management," she reiterated that I was "to young" for that line of work.

But, typical of many reactions to my requests for employment, the agency woman appeared very willing to help me find some sort of job, even if it wasn't what I said I wanted.

AFTER attempting to steer me away from inquiries about male-oriented jobs, she finally asked, "Don't you do office work, honey?"

Similarly, the man who answered the phone number included in an ad reading, "Carnival. Ride man and help in all departments," said, "Right now, about the only thing we have for women is working in the game booths, but I'll be happy to tell you who to contact if you're interested in the job."

Though the man at Public Finance Corporation's North Long Beach office — which had advertised "experience desired, but not necessary," for an opening as manager trainee — said he wasn't really looking for a woman, he did say I could come down and apply.

He also suggested that I try the area banks; "They're always looking for qualified men and women. Are you finding it difficult getting into the business because you're a woman?" he finally blurted.

"Yes," I told him, I was, indeed, finding it very difficult, but my setbacks were not limited to any one occupation.

Richard Lomeli, business agent for Local 13, International Longshoremen's and Warehouseman's Union (ILWU), said longshore work is "too physically demanding and dangerous for a woman."

While Lomeli said he thought "maybe some of the clerking jobs could be done by a woman," he added, "There's just no place for women on the docks."

But the business agent, who was frank in his admission that a longshoreman's job is not for a female, said the problem — at least where the ILWU is concerned — is much more complex than cut-and-dried discrimination.

'Don't you do office work, Honey?'

"Besides the obvious physical requirements of the work, there's a danger to the job that many people don't realize," he confided. "Our men have to climb up and down ladders — 50 and 60 feet into ships' holds — countless times a day; it can get pretty tiring, and if a guy gets a little grease on his shoe, it's awful easy to slip and fall."

AND EVEN if longshoremen were not concerned about the possible dangers to women on the docks, Lomeli added one more consideration for barring the ladies.

"With the growing number of containerized operations, our opportunity for work is steadily decreasing," he said. "Right now, registration in our industry is frozen; we're not even hiring men, much less women."

While Lomeli offered what seemed to be a carefully thought out and honest explanation for the ILWU's "no women" dictum, other prospective employers were not quite so polite, often giving me "stock" refusals couched in curt tones.

"YOU CAN'T do the stock man and that; it's heavy lifting and stuff," said the girl on the phone at Pacific Supply when I answered an ad for "receving clerk, stock man and driver" at a local automotive warehouse.

After a short pause, she added, "They said no matter how big the girl is, she wouldn't be able to do the job, because it involves heavy lifting and stuff. They said they're interviewing only big men."

"I think you ought to give it some more thought," said the half-grinning attendant when I applied for a job at the Shell service station, 6590 Atlantic Ave.

"I work these guys 12 hours a day, and with a woman — well, you have to give them so many rest periods . . . I tried a woman on the job once, but it just didn't work out," he added with an incredulous stare.

The response at a "growing swimming pool company" to my queries about their opening for assistant manager trainee was similar, but this time, a pass-the-buck technique accompanied the laughs.

AFTER PHONE calls to two different company offices and conversations with at least four representatives of the firm, a somewhat flustered male voice said: "Well, it's (the job) not for a female. It's like working with motors for swimming pools, rebuilding them and things. And you'd have to carry heavy cases of chlorine. Besides," added the voice, "it's not like you're really applying for a manager trainee; all I want is someone to help me while my assistant is gone."

"The positions for ladies have been filled," said an almost belligerent woman on the telephone Time, Inc.'s Telephone Marketing Division.

Time's ad had said the company was looking for "enthusiastic men" to fill 'dignified inside sales" jobs, and the woman agreed that some of those positions were still open.

"WE HAVE A sponsored program that men only work on, and that's simply not open to women," she said curtly. And after refusing to listen to my experience in the field, she finally concluded, "I've told you that program is NOT open to women; I can't talk to you any longer, because I can't help you."

The man in the adult bookstore I phoned in response to an ad for "manager trainee-clerk," said he was "sorry," but he couldn't help me, either.

Very courteous and obviously surprised by my call, he added, "I just cannot accept a female employe. Working in an adult bookstore sometimes gets pretty rough and the hours can sometimes be very long. I'm sorry, but we just feel we can't hire a woman."

Though several employers I contacted reacted with the same sort of surprise registered by the adult bookstore man, they were reserved in their attempts to discourage me, many claiming they have no discrimination policy against women.

"I have to admit I'm a little nonplussed here," said a representative for the California Angels, a professional baseball team, when I asked him for a tryout at first base.

"You obviously know what you're doing; it's just that this is sort of a strange request — it's the first request for a tryout I've had from a woman," he added.

"First of all, I'll tell you that only about one out of 50 people we try out ever gets a contract. But if you want to give it a go, I'll be perfectly willing to arrange a tryout for you.

"You realize you'll be the only gal on the field, but if that's all right with you, well, we'll set it all up," concluded the Angels' man.

A Los Angeles Dodgers representative was equally surprised when I said I'd like to try out at first base.

"Well, now I'll tell you just like I'd tell a 22-year-old male asking for a tryout," she finally said after asking my age. "Twenty-two is a bit on the mature side to be trying out; you have to figure at least four years in the minor leagues, if you make the team, and you'd be 26 before you even get to the major leagues."

Still surprised, she added, "About your being a woman, I just don't know . . . I'm not even sure if there's a league rule against it, but I don't think so. We've never had a woman ask for a tryout before you," she advsied.

Some employers, though admitting they'd never faced a job request from a woman, were more definite.

"We haven't ever hired any women, but I don't know why we wouldn't if we had a post we could put one in," said a woman at Evans Security in Long Beach.

Although some of the salesmen were obviously curious — many of them asking, "Why do you want to sell cars?" — the manager took my application and said I would be duly-considered for the opening.

"I PERSONALLY love the car business, and if somebody else wants to get into it, I think that's great," he admitted.

An amiable manager at the Carnation Company, where I applied for a job as a milkman-distributor, took much the same tack.

"We had a woman in here before, and she worked out quite well," said the interviewer while perusing my application.

I received similar treatment from other employers, including three security guard companies, a warehouse looking for a stock man, a carpet company needing a salesman, a man who wanted a forklift mechanic and a service station looking for a two truck driver.

ALL WERE surprised that a woman would apply for their jobs, but each offered me a chance to fill out an application and said I'd be considered for the position.

Last January, President Nixon's Council of Economic advisers reported that even if a woman does land a so-called man's job, there are additional problems she must surmount on the road to success.

"Some clients reject women lawyers, some customers reject women automobile salesmen and some workers reject women bosses," said the report.

The council also concluded that some employers often exaggerate the risk of a woman's job instability or her potential unacceptability to their clientele, and they screen her out of advanced training and advanced positions.

(Con't from Previous Pg)

And last November, the Bank of America in San Francisco said it would stop paying taxi fares for women working at night. Though the bank had been paying an estimated $170,000 annually to a cab company — which transported women to and from night shifts at a large computer and check processing facility — the policy was dropped when male employes complained of illegal sex discrimination, because they were not offered the same benefit.

In lieu of the taxi service, the bank began providing free parking for nightshift employes on lots tended by security guards. A shuttle bus run from the building to the lots also was installed.

Janet P. Bonnema was faced with a different type of problem.

When she finally donned a hard hat and walked into a mining tunnel at Georgetown, Colo., last November, 60 workers promptly walked out, citing the superstition that women underground are bad luck.

Whether or not a woman's presence on a certain job can bring bad luck to her coworkers is a moot question, but a team of government medical experts reported in April 1972 that it could leave the woman herself with a more serious problem.

The study, prepared by doctors at the National Heart and Lung Institute, said the incidence of death from heart disease is rising sharply among women under 45 and it may be due partly to their success in winning jobs formerly held mainly by men.

The doctors concluded the increased rate — 11 per cent over a period of seven years — of heart disease among women under 45 might be attributed to heir changing life-style, which was defined to include the jobs they hold, their eating and drinking habits, their leisure activity and environmental influences.

But whatever the problems encountered on or because of a job, a woman still has to get herself hired before she can fight the results.

And in 1973, that's a damned tough job in itself.

Held key to energy crisis

New rapid transit system bared

By DON WATERS

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — A group of engineers and designers say they may have hit upon a personal rapid transit system that combines simplicity and economy with convenience and a partial answer to the energy crisis.

Crusway, as the system is called, envisions a network of covered, elevated roadways upon which personally owned minivehicles would coast along at a steady 15 or 20 miles an hour, emitting little pollution.

After three years of development and $200,000 of its own money, the Syracuse University Research Corp.'s special projects laboratory unveiled a fullscale working version of the system on the top floor of an old factory building in downtown Syracuse.

Laboratory Director Paul Howells told a visitor that research showed that commuters favored the automobile mainly because it offered personal convenience that cannot be matched by any existing mass transit system.

"Our idea zas to keep what's good about the car — it's convenience — but eliminate what's bad — its size, tremendous weight and stop — and-go propulsion," Howells explained.

As he spoke, staff members zipped along a platform in prototype minicars and pedal-powered bicycles.

Other innovative transit systems, such as Bay Area Rapid Transit in metropolitan San Francisco, cost up to $20 milllion a mile to create because they use sophisiticated computers and other equipment.

With its drive-yourself, own-your-own-vehicle feature, Crusway-vehicle feature, Crusway could be put into operation for $500,000 a mile, Howells said.

The 8-foot-wide, two-lane roadways would have a capacity of 7,200 vehicles an hour, compared with the 4,000 cars a six-lane highway can handle hourly. The Crusway speed would be comparable to rush-hour automobile traffic.

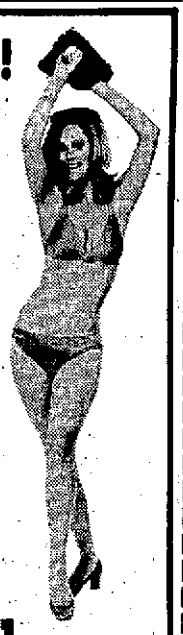

The Crusway vehicle would reach an entry ramp under auxiliary battery power or, in the case of a bicycle, through physical effort.

At the base of the ramp, a 10-foot-high mast attached to the vehicle would fit into a slot and make contact with an electrically driven and charged steel belt to propel it up the roadway.

Once on the roadway, the vehicle would coast by gravity down a gentle, 2½ per cent grade. While coasting, Howells said, the driver is free to change lanes, alter his speed and select exists, while maintaining a 30-foot safety interval from his closest neighbor.

At one-block intervals, the power lift again would take over the propulsion and carry the vehicle up a 10-foot rise to maintain the constant speed. Then it would be all downhill for another block.

Howell and his researchers said a variety of vehicles could be used in the system, ranging from a small, folding bibycle zith a telescoping propulsion mest to a $250-and-up minicar capable of carrying two adults and cargo. The auxiliary battery would need recharging weekly.

Stricter laws urged

A special governor's Consumer Fraud Task Force has labeled marketplace fraud one of the costliest of crimes, yet lamented its low rank on the priority list of many law enforcement agencies.

In addition, the task force found antifraud laws were not uniformly enforced statewide. In recommending better enforcement procedures for California's exiesting consumer laws, establishment of regional offices throughout the state was urged. "Such regional offices, " John T. Kehoe, director of the state consumer agency said, "would bring needed uniformity of authority and procedure, and halt the proliferation of independent local consumer offices."

In additional findings, the task force suggested: existing laws were not being fully utilized by authorities or were unknown by consumers, the impact of fraud on low income consumers is more significant than that of any othe group; there is a lack of coordination between various federal, state and local offices working in the consumer field.

Deceptive toy packaging

What you see isn't always as much as you get and the Federal Trade Commission is cracked down on deceptive toy packaging for manufacturers using deceptively oversized containers.

FTC alleges that Activitoys, Ltd., of Jersey City, N.J., has used deceptive methods of packaging their product, misleading consumers into believing they are getting greater quantities than is the case.

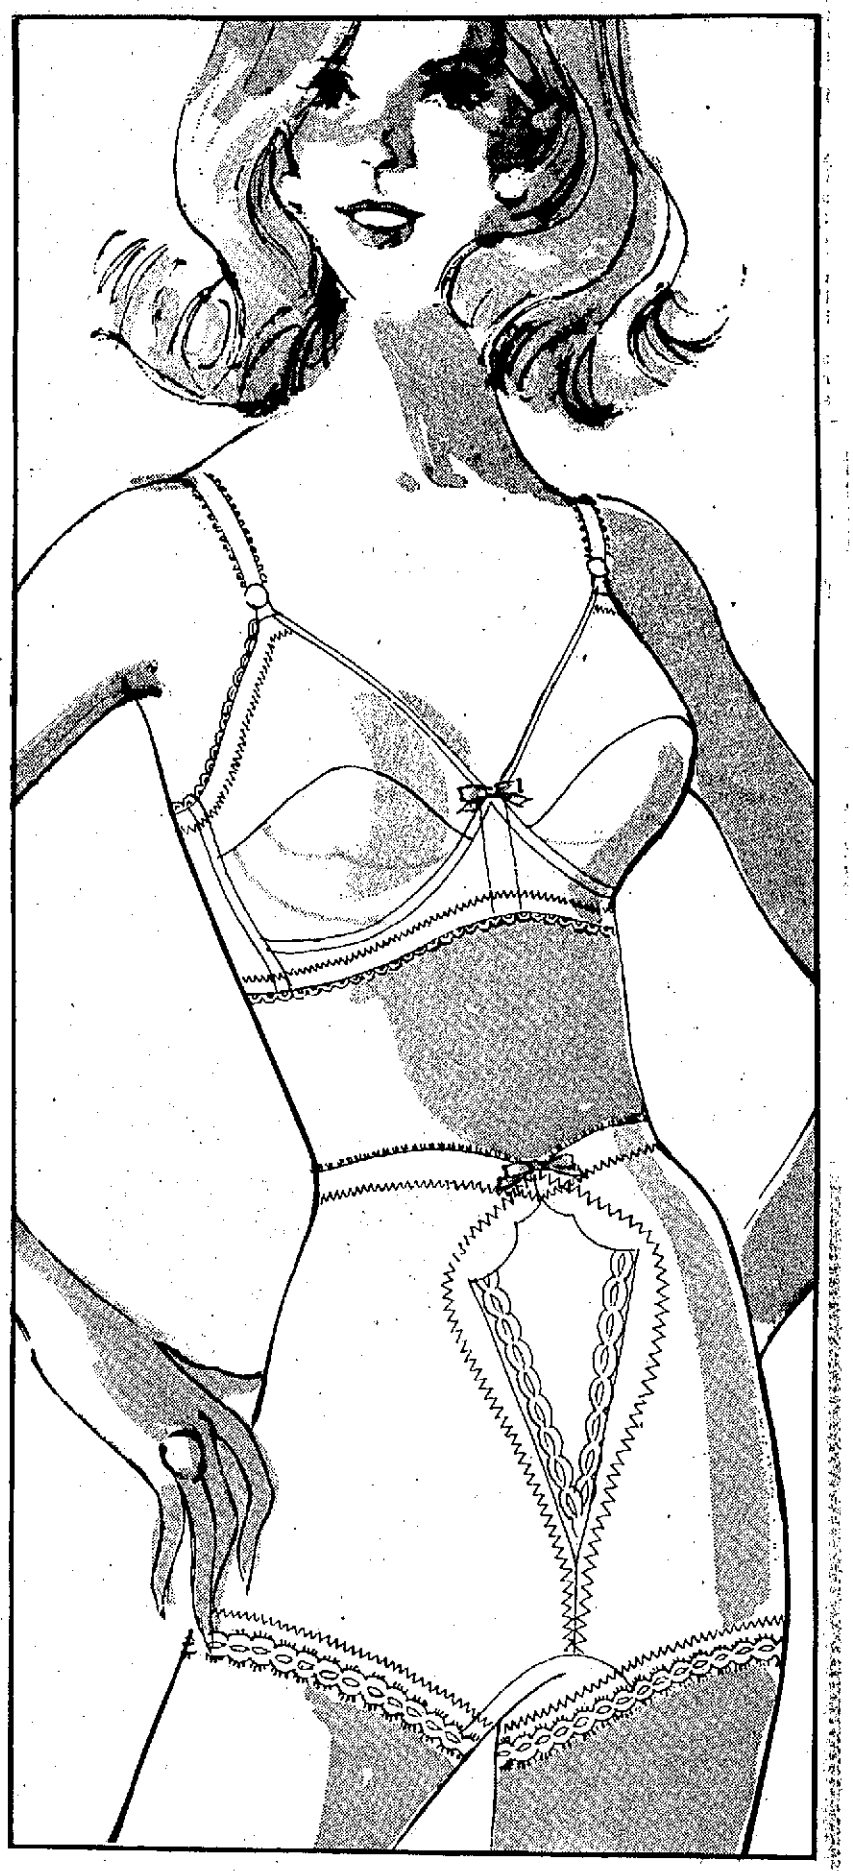

Meat ceiling prices explained

Meat ceiling prices have been monitored and enforced since April 9 by order of President Nixon and the cost of living Council. The ceiling affects meat processors, wholesalers and retailers and is based on prices between Feb. 26 and March 27.

While some retailers argue the setting of a ceiling price automatically forces the price of meat up to its highest level, using signs and price lists posted in markets grossing more than $100,000 per year, consumers can compare the current price of a cut of meat with the ceiling price—and it may be lower, the IRS reminds—althouth don't count on it.

To compute the ceiling price of each meat item, the meat manufacturer, wholesaler or retailer can use the highest price at which he did at least 10 per cent of his business in that 30-day period. That is known as the ceiling price. For example, a meat market sold five per cent of all chuck steak during the base period at $1.50 a pound. It sold another five per cent at $1.40 a pound and the rest at $1.35 per pound. The new ceiling price is not $1.50 per pound because less than 10 per cent of the meat was sold at that level. The ceiling is $1.40 a pound.

If this seems confusing to you, it was equally as confusing to at least 82 market owners in the Southland area. The Internal Revenue Service Officers issued 82 complaints against market operators since the new law went into effect. Most of the 82 complaints were traced to the fact that the market operators just didn't understand how to arrive at their ceiling price—the calculations were confusing and there was a communications breakdown. All 82 complaints have been satisfied, the IRS said.

CANNES FESTIVAL

CANNES (UPI) — Twenty-nine films from 13 countries will compete for awards at the Cannes Film Festival opening Thursday, according to festival director Maurice Bessy.

Bessy declined to predict the winner, but said he believed Ingmar Bergman's latest effort, "Cries and Whispers," would be the sensation of the festival.

Veteran directors such as Bergman, Joseph Losey and Francois Truffaut are being challenged by such rising stars as Jean Eustache, Gerard Guerin, Claude Goretta, Carmelo Bene, Gilles Carle, Andre Delvaux, Jacques Brel, Alan Bridges, Paul Newman, Jerry Schatzberg, Arthur Barron and James Guercio.

McKuen recalls $30 week era

NEW YORK — "Some people spend their lives becoming bastards," Rod McKuen said. "I had a headstart on them. I guess I became one when I was born."

It's a favorite confession of the poet-author-composer-singer-minstrel man whose 40th birthday is celebrated at Carnegie Hall and at Trude Heller's in Greenwich Village where he once sang rock songs for $30 a week and was glad to get it.

It's at 9th St. and 6th Av. across from the Women's Prison and the women used to come out and yell obscenities at us," McKuen said the other day at the Sherry Netherland, sitting amid some sheets of manuscript he was working on. "They asked us what color was our undershorts and once in a while they'd throw something at us."

He has gone onward and upward each year of his life and the paternity question has never been a handicap, possibly more an incentive.

"My father deserted my mother when I was born," he explained. "She died a couple of years ago. She was always very sketchy about him. I've never found one person who spelled his name as he said he spelled his."

ROD'S DOING three nights of concerts at Carnegie Hall, and it must seem strange to the bartenders and captains at the Copacabana where, about 11 years ago, he sang in the Copa Lounge.

"I sang there with another unknown, Wayne Newton. Four shows a night, six nights a week. I wound up with my throat like hamburger, I lost my voice totally. I got $200 a week, a lot of money for me, but it doesn't compare with $20,000 a night!"

Now an American folk hero, pampered by some socialites and intellectuals, he still likes to look back on the $115-a-month apartment he had at 55th St. and 2d Av. "I used to sell my blood to pay the rent," he says.

Seated on a couch in slacks and sneakers, hands on his arms, he said, "I owe a great deal to the people who said, 'You can't do that.'"

"They said I couldn't sing. I couldn't write books, I couldn't sell records, I couldn't sell poetry. I said, 'Watch!' They gave me the incentive to go out and prove them wrong."

MCKUEN'S unhappiest time, he said, "is when I'm on vacation which is the reason I don't take many." He has just acquired a biplane and will tour the country in it, sleeping under the wings, seeing parts of America not seen by most travelers. Out of this will come more poetry.

There were rumors about him being romantic with Charlotte Ford, which both found ridiculous, although he says, "She's one of the people I'd put on a tuxedo for . . .

DAVIS HOOKED ON COUNTRY

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Not too long ago, in a recording studio, someone challenged Mac Davis to write a "hook" song, an industry term for a highly commercial tune with a phrase that sticks in everybody's mind.

And, though Davis may not like to admit it, that particular moment has done more, perhaps, than any other to shift his career into full gear.

Davis, 31, is just about the hottest thing going nowadays in the county and pop arena; and to think, it all started as a "joke."

"Someone asked me to write a hook song. So, I picked up my guitar and began singing 'Baby don't get hooked on me.' It all started out as a joke. In fact, we ended up recording the song and the tracks right there before I even had the lyrics written."

The rest is well known. After "Baby Don't Get Hooked On Me" zoomed to the top of the charts, it was followed by "I Believe In Music," another hook song.

Davis wrote his first song when he was in his mid-teens. During that time, the handsome curly-headed Texan had traveled to Atlanta, where he formed his own rock and roll band at age 15.

Davis, who makes his home in Los Angeles, said he sees a trend toward lyrical simplicity in the song of the young.

"There's more instrumental stuff and I think we're going back to the simple roots instead of heavy groups writing heavy music," he said. "Things are heading back into everyday life — the kind of music that people can identify with.

"Country music has been telling it like it is for a long time.

"When everyone else was crooning with the moon," he added, "country music was with it and laying it all out on the line."

It's Cosby atop Magic Mountain

Comedian Bob Cosby will open Magic Mountain's "Summer Festival of Stars" with his 8 and 10 p.m. performances at the amusement and entertainment park over the Memorial Day weekend, May 26-28.

The "Summer '73 Season" also will be highlighted by the introduction of four new rides, and a new restaurant, La Cantina, featuring south-of-the-border cuisine.

Magic Mountain's one-price admission ($5.50 for adults, and $4.50 for children 3 to 12) includes unlimited use of all rides and attractions and admission to all entertainment performances.

In addition, Magic Mountain has signed a summer-long contract with London Bridge, Capitol Records' young singing group, who will appear daily in the park's teen-oriented Contempo Pavilion.

The park is about 25 minutes north of Hollywood on the Golden State Freeway.

Louise coming into her own

LOUISE LASSER . . . no longer Woody's ex

—AP Newsfeatures Photo

Louise Lasser is probably best known for doing television commercials and being the ex-wife of comic Woody Allen. Now co-starring in a comedy called "Slither," she's coming into her own, as she puts it, "notoriety."

By Eve Sharbutt

NEW YORK (AP) — Louise Lasser is a pretty, All-American type actress who doesn't look crazy. This may be the reason she often appears in movies about people who do.

Now she is co-starring in a comedy caper called "Slither." She plays the wife of a balding saxaphone player who, with three others, is looking for 312,000 embezzeled dollars while chased by two sinister black camper trucks.

Before that, she was the real-life wife of comic Woody Allen and appeared in four of his movies, including "Bananas" and "Everything You Wanted to Know About Sex."

Divorced from Allen, Louise thinks she's finally coming into her own success or, as she puts it, "notoriety."

Reddish blonde hair hangs in braids below Louise's angora knit hat "from London," she said, "where I was filming "Coffee, Tea or Me." "It was her first television movie and was she said, quiet a revelation.

"I HAD turned down television so far, because what is there on it that is meaningful or original? And at this point, it's still not for me. In a few years, it might change.

"Of course there's money in it, and when I need money, I'd even read the telephone book. But financially, I think I can hold out without television. We'll all head there eventually and it's too bad, because there's so much in the film medium that's untouched," she added.

A native New Yorker, she is the daughter of a tax expert who encouraged her theatrical ambitions. She studied political science at Brandeis University as well as working with amateur theatrics. She decided, eventually, to drop the amateur and worked in summer stock as Dorothy in "The Wizard of Oz."

She auditioned for David Merrick and was hired to understudy Barbara Streisand in "I can Get It For You Wholesale," on Broadway. Eventually she replaced the star and launched her stage career.

LOUISE has regularly appeared in television commercials.

"They give you a great deal of freedom and a day's work is good camera acting experience.

"I don't think appearing in them is invalid for actors. It's no more prostitution than situation comedy. People certainly don't live the way that's shown on television, either," she added.

She said there are specific reasons for selling products in commercials and it's easy to turn down the ones you don't want.

"Suffering financially is a shallow form of suffering," she says. "I have different priorities. And perhaps each film gets more tedious. Who knows. I can wait and see."

A New York and Los Angeles person, in order to keep up with her acting commitments, Louise lives with two dogs, one a mongrel and the other a Pekinese.

"PART OF me is very shy, likes to read and stand aside to let others do things," she said. "I'm the sort of person who can't listen to talking radio early in the morning. Mornings are very pure for me. I prefer New York and coffee and classical music. And if I'm not in the mood for classical stuff, I know something's wrong."

An actress who "wants to go deeper into myself," Louise looks ahead to more comedy and straight roles. She will appear in the television film, "The Lie," which had, she said, the first challenge for her since acting classes.

"Eventually I'd like to write and direct. You're just so much of a property as an actor unless the director has a strong point of view. I never mind how late in life I succeed because I know I will eventually find a valid success for me.

"It's scary making decisions. You ask yourself if you're making a mistake not getting into a series or something. But I think you always get another chance."

Satellite launched

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union launched another unmanned Cosmos satellite into orbit today and said it was "operating normally." It was the 556th in the Cosmos series.

Unintentional laughs

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Nothing stops an actor in his tracks so quickly as a practical joke in mid-performance.

A prime victim of the theatrical put-on is Angus Duncan, who stars in "How to Seduce a Woman." He gets jumpy whenever the script calls for him to pick up a prop.

Angus was a member of the Old Log Theater in Minneapolis for two years where a playful repertoire troupe provided a lot of unintentional laughs.

On the final night of one performance, Angus picked up the stage telephone to outline a murder plot to a nonexistent conspirator on the other end.

"The cast had rigged the phone to my own house," Angus recalled. "And there I was, in front of a full house, talking to my wife. I read my lines straight, but she kept calling me dirty names. I went along with it and didn't break up."

Angus was less fortunate on Broadway starring in "Barefoot in the Park."

"I came through a door on stage carrying two suitcases," he recalled. "I was to reach off-stage and pick up a third valise. Well my pals in the cast had loaded it with an anvil. I couldn't budge it. That got the biggest laugh of the night.

"A couple of months later I was doing the same scene and reached offstage for the same valise. When I looked into the wings there was a totally nude girl standing where the suitcase was supposed to be. That was the first time I ever broke up on stage. The audience didn't know what was happening.

"MOST actors either get furious with a practical joke or laugh uncontrollably.

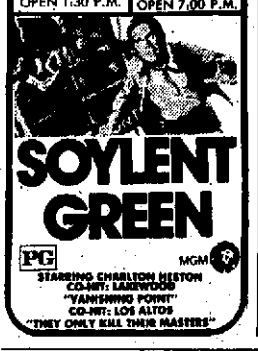

"I'll never forget the time I was supposed to leap out of bed and into a pair of carpet slippers. One night they were nailed to the stage.

"The audience howled when I took a step and tore the tops out of my slippers. But I kept a straight face and continued as if nothing had happened.

"One of the most common stunts is to ignore another actor's entrance when he knocks on the door. The actor on stage continues to read or whatever while the poor guy off-stage pounds the scenery down."

IN another play Duncan was called on to light a cigar. In one performance a fellow actor handed him a rubber cigar and waited for the fun.

"I knew what he was doing right away," Duncan said. "So I just handed it to another actor who was in on the joke. He was so paralyzed he forgot his speeches for the rest of the act.

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Sunday

Your birthday today: Opens a year of necessary experimentation. You need special skills, qualifications — get busy studying to get them. Today's natives have creative talents, know their way around in fine arts.

Aries (March 21-April 19): You can act on the passing financial scene, settle your own and group arrangements satisfactorily. Advance family plans, improve home life.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): The usual competitive maneuvers bring no special progress but diversions and creative ventures thrive. Nobody seems motivated to do routine chores.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Cooperation comes readily, helped by emotional attractions. Business deals begin well although money received now has strings attached.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Cash in on past investments and redeem obligations. Established arrangements are subject to change with little or no notice. You have brief opportunity to turn the situation to good account.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Routine work proceeds slowly enough to annoy you, but your intervention will not be constructive. Reorganize your own affairs instead.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Today's minor events are the seeds of significant future relationships. Leave your environment for as long as circumstances allow.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your friends are at it again — you can please no more than one or two of them, and it may not be worth the bother. Follow hunches.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): It's a great moment to begin a new mission, enter a new status. Colleagues show unusual but well-meant cooperation.

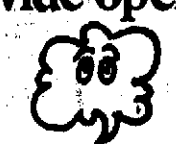

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): If you're not alert and on the move, younger people surprise you. Creativity shouldn't lead you into extremes.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be open about your feelings, discreet about financial details. Rivalry sharpens wits and mood. Your partner must be free to act without consultation.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Quiet, sensible action may alleviate some of today's confusion. By evening most issues reach critical proportions.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Romance blossoms with the slightest encouragement, especially where secret attractions are just beginning to surface.

How to dream with your eyes wide open.

Everybody likes to dream. But the chances of seeing a dream become reality are pretty slim. Unless you're crafty enough to figure out a smart way to save. One that's practical and painless. One that won't eat up your paycheck but will still give you a chance to salt something away.

If you're smart, you'll decide on U.S. Savings Bonds. They're one of the easiest ways to save. Just sign up for the Payroll Savings Plan where you work. Then an amount you specify will be automatically set aside from your paycheck and used to buy Bonds.

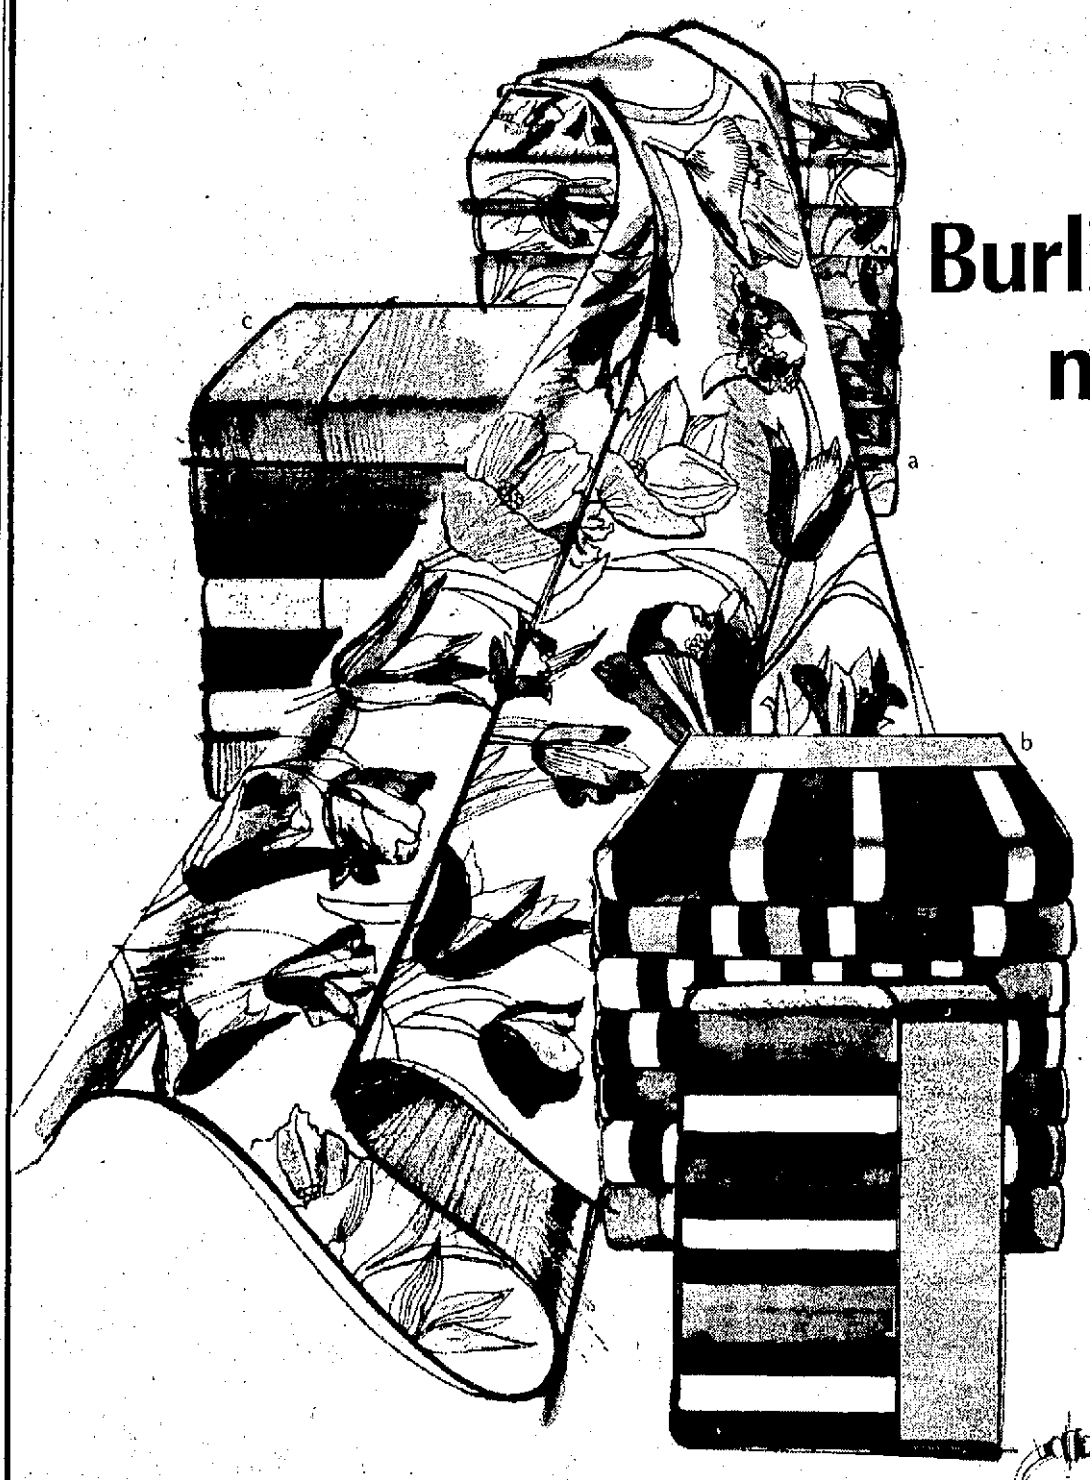

Now E Bonds pay 5½% interest when held to maturity of 5 years, 10 months (4% the first year). Bonds are replaced if lost, stolen, or destroyed. When needed they can be cashed at your bank. Interest is not subject to state or local income taxes, and federal tax may be deferred until redemption. Pr Gen 1-299-

Save the porpoises

The National Marine Fisheries Service wants to rent a boat.

The federal agency is seeking to charter a tuna purse seiner to conduct at sea experiments with the hope of developing methods and gear which will prevent the killing of porpoises trapped in nets during the taking of tuna.

Fishing boat skippers post a lookout in the crow's nest to spot schools of porpoises. Frequently schools of tuna are found swimming beneath the porpoises. Ironically, the helpful mammals are trapped when the purse seine net is set around the tuna school. They become trapped in the net's mesh, and unable to breath, they suffocate.

The charter period is for 19 days starting about June 4 and departing from San Diego.

Comments sought

Proposed regulations to implement the California Environmental Quality Act of 1970 have won tentative adoption by the Fish and Game Commission, the Department of Fish and Game, the Wildlife Conservation Board, and the Marine Research Committee.

The proposed regulations specify objectives, criteria and procedures for the evaluation of projects and the preparation of environmental impact reports. The regulations which provide guidance for operations under the stringent protection act, were adopted on an emergency basis April 4.

Copies of the regulations are available from the Department of Fish and Game, 1416 Ninth St., Sacramento, 95814.

Interested persons are encouraged to submit written comments to the department prior to June 3. Such comments will be given consideration prior to final adoption of the proposed regulations.

'Just one more'

The Los Angeles Harbor Department will sponsor a month-long photo contest during September.

The last contest, held in June 1967, resulted in more than 10,000 entries from more than 1,000 amateur and professional photographers. Winners were treated to trips to Mexico and Hawaii and awarded many lesser prizes arranged for by the department's Public Relations Director Robert Robinson.

The 1967 winning photos, as will be this year's winners, were exhibited in Europe and Hawaii.

The contest supplies the department with black-and-white and color photographs and slides which are used to illustrate the department's annual report and other publications. The Harbor Commission allocated $12,000 to cover costs of conducting the contest.

British troops train in Kansas

FT. RILEY, Kan. (AP) — Some 150 British military personnel began a two-month training session alongside their U.S. Army counterparts here this weekend. The visitors are members of an elite unit drawn from the British Army and Marine Corps. The visit is part of an exchange program of the United States and Britain designed to provide closer contact between the two NATO forces.

WATERFRONT

whooly-owned subsidiary of Mobil Oil Co., has ordered three tankers to be built in Japan which will be longer than the Queen Mary by 96 feet. Two of the VLCCs (Very Large Crude Carriers) will be 80 feet wider than the former luxury passenger liner.

None will able to call at either Long Beach or Los Angeles harbors. Neither harbor is deep enough. Two of Mobil's new oil carriers will require a water depth of 88 feet. Long Beach with a channel depth of 60 feet has a decided advantage over Los Angeles Harbor where the water is but 35 feet deep, but neither can presently handle either of the 88-foot draft ships nor the third ship being built at Sasebo Heavy Industries which will draw 91 feet.

The Queen Mary, for all her bulk, draws only 39 feet.

Two of the VLCCs being built by Sumitomo Shipbuilding and Machinery Co. will be 274,000 deadweight tons. The Sasebo-built carrier will be only slightly smaller at 271,000 deadweight tons.

All three ships will have a speed of 16.5 knots. All will be powered by 36,000 to 38,000-horsepower turbine engines.

The massive tankers will be used to haul crude oil from the Persian Gulf to Europe and to Japan. Delivery of all three ships is expected in 1975.

Sea lions to stay

The National Marine Fisheries Service has denied the request of two Santa Barbara sea mammal trappers they be allowed to capture 500 sea lions for selling to zoos, oceanaria and scientists. ken for the sole purpose they would be sold.

The federal agency refused the request on the grounds the animals would be taken for the sole purpose they would be sold. Taking of seals, sea lions, porpoises and whales, except under certain circumstances, is forbidden under the Marine Mammal Protection Act of 1972.

The agency ruled that if permits to take the animals are granted they should be granted only to those persons who would be responsible for the care of the animals after they were taken from their natural habitat and "not to persons engaged solely in the capture of the marine mammals for sale to others."

Denied by the agency were requests from Sea Lions International, which sought permission to take 300 sea lions, and from Global Sea Lions, Inc., which wanted to take 200 of the mammals for resale to various zoos and seaquaria.

and now... the FUTURA sewing machine

The FUTURA* sewing machine...a giant step forward in sewing machine performance.

Behold! A bright new star in the Singer galaxy of sewing machines. Ahead of its time, and not a moment too soon for you who have been waiting and hoping for just such a marvel to make sewing easier, more fun. The Futura machine...engineered by the people who have set the standard for excellence since great-great-grandma set her foot on a Singer* treadle.

Let us count the ways the Futura sewing machine puts space-age technology to work for you.

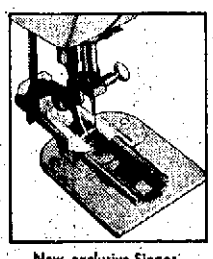

New, exclusive Singer* one-step buttonholer. Actually measures the button and makes the buttonhole...zap! In one quick operation.

New, exclusive Singer* see-thru bobbin window. No more guessing when the bobbin needs rethreading...which won't happen often because the Singer* exclusive front drop-in bobbin holds up to 50 yards!

New, no lubrication needed. No time loss, no mess!

New...10 built-in stitches including speed basting. Now, 4 stretch stitches, plus fashion, zig-zag and fancy stitches built in! Plus many other stitches with interchangeable discs.

Still another innovation! A simplified goof-proof "place-in" threading system makes threading super-quick 'n easy. And, see how nothing protrudes to interrupt the sleek, streamlined design, with an illuminated dial panel, and a slanted arm allowing more room, unobstructed visibility. So many other out-of-this-world features to help you turn out professional-looking results in less time, with less effort. Sewers, there's joy in the Futura machine. Singer knows.

TENT CITY SPROUTS IN ORANGE COUNTY AS 10,000 SCOUTS MARK 50th YEAR

BOB GEIVET

Celebrating 50 years of scouting in Orange County, 10,000 youths set up their tents on Laguna Canyon ranchland for a three-day funfest.

For the first time, the Scouts and Explorers were joined by girls, almost 200 of whom are in various Explorer posts throughout the county.

Like buddies, they roughed it — plenty. It rained Friday night, and it blew cold all day Saturday until late afternoon.

It was miserable — but it's not in a Scout's code to complain. So they all had to make the best of it, and they found it was great.

They set up their tents by troop or patrol designations, and the horseplay and horsetrading began.

There was a thriving business going on as the Scouts swapped anything for everything. Anybody who caught a frog was a cinch to come up with a good knife. Anything of value—or supposed worth—fetched something else that was valuable—or supposedly so.

U.S. Marines put on a parachute drop and a demonstration of how men are rescued by helicopter. Scouts cheered—and wished they could jump out of those big planes, or be airlifted by the whirlybirds.

Substituting for the traditional campfire, a program at the outdoor arena stage was presented Saturday night. Church services were held today.

Pinch of 60-40 rule hits LBSU

By TOM WILLMAN
Staff Writer

Long Beach State University, which grew to be the largest institution west of the Rocky Mountains in the 1960s, this year will feel the first pinch of an old statewide rule that it has outgrown, but apparently can't discard.

The regulation, dating back at least to 1961, places a strict ceiling on promotions for teachers in the third of four categories by stating that no more than 60 per cent of the teachers on a campus can occupy the top two ranks.

This year at LBSU, the 60 per cent ceiling on full and associate professorships apparently will be reached; in the ranks of assistant professiors, the third category on the academic ladder, only 25 of 177 eligible teachers will be promoted, officials say.

AND THERE WILL be other teachers, moving up from the starting rank of instructor and through several pay levels of the assistant professor rank, piling up behind those who must wait for a promotion.

"What can the almost 300 faculty in the lower ranks of instructor and assistant professor expect in the future?" ask leaders of one LBSU faculty group, the United Professors of California (UPKC). "A promotion in 10 to 15 years?"

According to Dr. Bruce Carpenter, administrator in charge of faculty affairs, few vacancies are expected in the upper two ranks in the near future. The mandatory retirement age for a professor is 67, he says — and the average age of the 1,100-odd teachers at LBSU now is 45.

Yet, Carpenter says, any change is at best "very doubtful for this year," possibly because the rule works as a cost-cutting device by restricting salaries.

But teachers who were promoted to the second-highest rank of associate professor before the "60-40 rule" cut down the opportunity, still will be able to move up through a series of step-pay increases toward promotion to full professor.

THE 60-40 RULE apparently is disliked by everyone on the sprawling Long Beach campus. Last Tuesday, 30 teachers — most members of UPC — staged an "informational picketing" to inform their colleagues of the rule.

The previous week, their plan to picket had been endorsed by the Academic Senate on campus. While some senators dissented, not liking the idea of picketing, the senate unanimously adopted a stand against the 60-40 rule.

Dr. Helen Gilde, chairwoman of the Academic Senate and a full professor, walked the picket line.

Picketing faculty members said they expected two results of the promotional cutback: a drop in general morale among teachers; and a plunge in the morale of assistant professors and instructors, perhaps to the point that many of the brighest young faculty members will seek jobs elsewhere.

"That's a distinct possibility," Dr. Carpenter agrees. "The market is still tight, but there are jobs for bright young professors."

CARPENTER WOULD like to see the 60-40 rule lifted for a period of years "to allow the university to handle its own affairs."

The idea of increased control at the campus level is one for which President Stephen Horn has lobbied with regularity.

Carpenter adds that the 19-campus system's Council of Presidents also opposes the 60-40 rule.

But the rule seems immovable for the time being. The reasons behind its strength apparently are rooted in a decade-old policy of budget-cutting, says Carpenter, a policy which is spelled out only in the State College Administrators' Manual, a product of the system's trustees and chancelor's office.

The Board of Trustees was created in 1960, and no one at LBSU seems quite sure whether trustees created the rule or inherited it from the system's previous guardians in the State Department of Education.

Some Long Beach professors say they believe the rule's greatest support comes from the State Department of Finance because of the rule's salary-saving capability.

STILL ANOTHER reason for the rule's entrenchment may be that four other campuses in the system are faced with the same situation as Long Beach. All reportedly have applied to the chancellor's office for 15-year exemptions, says Carpenter, each apparently contending that faculty ratios would level off in the vicinity of the 60-40 breakdown, given time to run a natural course.

Carpenter says such an exemption was granted to San Jose State University — founded in 1857 — when that campus finally hit the 60-40 barrier in 1967.

Many professors at LBSU point to the San Jose exemption as a precedent that should be followed.

Lots of collectors, that's who Button, button, who's got?...

By Mike Jelf
Staff Writer

To modern man, a button is something to keep his shirt closed.

It's a simple, commonplace item stamped from plastic, seldom thought of except when it comes loose.

In the 18th Century, however, many a coat button was a miniature work of art, and a gentleman of means could be a walking art gallery.

Everything then was made by hand, and craftsmen often lavished incredible amounts of work on highly ornate buttons.

And Mrs. Aimee Cusworth, a Downey woman who has spent the past 11 years latching onto sartorial discs made of gold, silver, ivory, china, porcelain and enameled metal, is making sure that art is not lost.

She sarted collecting buttons in 1952, when she was living in a Philadelphia suburb. In her possession was a case of brass buttons with gold inlays, which had been in the family since about 1820.

They looked like military buttons, but when curiosity overtook her and she had them examined by an expert, Mrs. Cusworth learned they were from a gentleman's dress coat.

From this it was a short step into collecting. At first, she says, she was like most neophyte collectors, who "nickle and dime themselves to death" by getting as many buttons as possible as cheaply as possible.

Now, she says, she collects by the material used in the button and the technique used to shape it. In short, her collection includes the more elaborate, deluxe buttons.

That's not the only type of button collecting going on, though. The beauty of the hobby, Mrs. Cusworth says, is that "you can collect any way you want. Some people collect only inexpensive buttons. They may be all pink, or all leaves."

Mrs. Cusworth's collection, which she estimates at between one and two thousand "really deluxe" buttons, shows variety and ingenuity one normally wouldn't associate with men's clothing.

(In the 18th Century, she says, the intricate, fancy buttons were on men's coats and waistcoats; women's outfits had only inconspicuous buttons.)

One of the buttons in her collection is an elaborate configuration of gold, platinum, and 33 diamonds.

Another is carved of light jade, and another is an unbelievably detailed miniature silver frog. One button is a small woodcarving of a dog's head, complete with colored glass eyes.

There's also a rebus (communicating words through pictures) button with a drawing of a violin with two upper-case letter "D"s. This spells out a message which will come at the end of this story.

There is a national button collectors' association, as well as state and and local groups. Mrs. Cusworth is a member and past president of the Los Angeles club, and a member of the Long Beach group as well.

Collectors, she says, build and liquidate their collections almost exclusively through dealers. The price of a button can vary tremendously, she says.

Dealers get their buttons from people who sell off heirlooms and from collectors who want to reduce their collections. "I've sold many collectable buttons to a dealer," she says.

In antique shops, she says, "I've never found anything really good."

In the world of deluxe button collecting, she says, there are few secrets. When a collection seems likely to come on the market, "we know where every one of those buttons is, and who wants them."

And the rebus message mentioned earlier, if you haven't guessed, is "fiddle-dee-dee."

Gas rationing no threat to biker

By DENISE KUSEL
Staff Writer

Ed Walker zips by the gas station on his way to work, unconcerned about the rising prices, switches his motorcycle into 24 and goes smuggly on his way.

Walker doesn't have 24 gears — just 24 volts — his motorcycle is electrically powered by three 12-volt batteries with a potential 36 volts of power.

"I was concerned about the environment," Walker, co-owner of Regal Industries of Long Beach said, "so, I built a machine that virtually emits no pollution.

"Lectra," the name he's given to his two-wheeled street machine, has a top speed of 40 m.p.h., can go an average distance of 50 miles before it needs recharging and costs about a nickel a day to operate.

"I think electric cars are a thing of the future," Walker said, "and since the average person doesn't travel more than 25 miles to work each day, it's an economical method of transportation."

The motorcycle is equipped with three batteries and is designed to plug into the usual 110 volt house current. Instead of shifting gears, Walker explained, "You simply switch the three batteries to gather increased voltage in order to gain speed."

"I estimate it draws as much energy as a 50-watt light bulb when it's being recharged," Walker said.

The one drawback — he can't go on the freeway. Minimum speed for freeway travel is 45 m.p.h.

But for a nickel a day, he can afford to take his time.

A necessary project

After two postponements, the South Coast Regional Zone Commission is to decide May 14 whether to allow the Southern California Edison Co. to modernize its generating plant on Terminal Island.

The $92-million modernization and expansion plan has already been approved by the Los Angeles County Air Pollution Control District and the Regional Water Quality Control Board, as well as by three Long Beach agencies: the Bureau of Franchises, the Planning Commission and the Citizens' Advisory Environmental Committee.

IT SHOULD BE approved by the regional zone commission.

Some environmentalists have indicated opposition to the plan, largely on the basis that it will add to air pollution.

We share their concern about air pollution. We do not share their view that forbidding this modernization would benefit air quality.

It would do the opposite.

IN SIMPLE TERMS, here is the situation: By 1975 there is going to be such a shortage of electricity that selected sections of Southern California will be faced with periodic blackouts. Your electricity would just be shut off for several hours at a time.

Edison will have to operate its present plant here to cut down some of this blackout danger. This plant, as now constructed and operated, would provide some 148 megawatts of power — and considerable air pollution. (Even so, it meets air pollution control laws.)

If the plant is modernized, the new units will be ready for operation in 1975. The result is this: The plant will then provide about four times more electricity and will cut the air pollution by about one-third.

In other words, denying the application will permit generation of a relatively small amount of electricity and a lot of air pollution. Granting the permit will add a lot of electricity and cut air pollution.

WISHING THAT better technology could be made available and installed to minimize blackouts in two years is just that — a wish. It can't happen.

Wishing that people would shut off their lights, air conditioners, televisions, shut down industries, again is just a wish.

Some environmentalists have argued that Edison should be required to revamp its modernization plans to take advantage of a "superior" technology proposed for the Huntington Beach plant. That technology had not been developed when the Terminal Island modernization plans were made.

At best — if the engineers' computations are correct — a modernization using the Huntington Beach approach would cut daily emissions of oxides of nitrogen into the South Coast Air Basin by less than one-tenth of one per cent.

IT WOULD TAKE 14 years of that kind of operation to compensate for the extra nitrogen oxides that might be emitted during the projected 2-year or more delay needed to redesign the Terminal Island plant, get the new design approved by all the necessary agencies and get construction started.

We would pay for the delay not only with two years of extra air pollution and more blackout possibilities but with succeeding years of higher electricity bills. The Huntington Beach design in the size needed at Long Beach would be inordinately expensive — and it is the consumer who ultimately pays that bill.

The cost for reductions in nitrogen oxide emissions would be more than 800 times the cost of the reductions achieved a few years ago.

Some environmentalists have said the answer is to deny approval for the modernization and to make heavier use of existing facilities unnecessary by cutting our use of electricity.

THIS IS NOT a practical answer. People will not do so voluntarily.

The inevitable increase in the power demands of this area cannot be wished away. It cannot be legislated away. It must be met.

The modernization plan has been approved by every government agency that has studied it so far. It should be approved by the South Coast Regional Zone Commission.

Third-class villainy in the 38th

There is something to be said for a 78-year-old retired housepainter from Downey named George Dear who received fewer than 250 votes in last week's special election in the 38th Assembly District (Bellflower-Compton-Downey-Lynwood-Paramount).

Dear made the May 29 runoff election along with Democrat Frank Vicencia and Republican Bob McLennan because he happened to be the only candidate entered from the Peace and Freedom party. Vicencia got more than 6,900, McLennan more than 4,000 votes.

The main thing to be said about George Dear is that he didn't try to fancy up his ballot designation. It read, "Retired House Painter." He submitted no phony nor contentious press releases; only one, in fact. It said, "I am the only working class candidate in the race and I will be emphasizing working class issues."

In elective politics, specifically in the 38th District race, the Dear system is a loser.

In example, the whole 38th campaign was a loser. I commend it as a test tube case to political science classes as a sampler in shabby politics.

The literal crowning blow came as late as 3 a.m. election day when Keith Cochrane, placing signs for candidate Walter Mallonee, was hit on the head with a piece of wood by a guy in a truck bearing workers for candidate Ray Guillen.

Who knows how many of the candidates were engaged in the old multiple-ply sign game — pasting their signs over those of a rival until the things are 10-thick?

Vicencia issued a post-election statement expressing his conviction that his victory "was clear proof the voter was not taken in by the confusion, misrepresentation and negativism which marked the campaigns of some of my opponents.

"We stuck to the issues in a forthright and constructive campaign to convince the citizens that our experience and understanding of the legislative process would serve their best interests."

Better Frank should have mixed it up a bit with his rivals during the campaign than to come on with this holier-than-thou epilogue.

Misrepresentation? It was Vicencia who was the object of a court injunction for using his signature over the title "Assemblyman," thus representing himself as an incumbent.

It was Vicencia who used the claim he was "the" Democratic candidate in his literature despite the fact there were 10 Democratic candidates.

It was Vicencia who filed originally as a legislative advocate (lobbyist), the apparent source of his "experience and understanding of the legislative process," and then, on counsel, changed his ballot designation to "Businessman-Company President."

Dr. Robert McLennan, the Republican Downey physician who made the runoff, is charged with extensive misrepresentation in campaign accusations directed at the Los Angeles County Probation Department.

Kenneth E. Kirkpatrick, chief probation officer, says McLennan implied that the department and juvenile court are releasing dangerous offenders to prey upon the citizens of Los Angeles County, to wit, "850 hard core juvenile offenders... loose in the community."

Kirkpatrick says it isn't true; two out of five of these juveniles had been removed from the community and sent to California Youth Authority or to other institutional programs; one fourth of the 850 cases were not even under probation jurisdiction.

Back to the test tube. A Long Beach draftsman named Ephraim Valencia turned up on the ballot with the nickname "Frank." How does "Frank Valencia" grab you when it appears on the ballot just ahead of "Frank Vicencia?"

Valencia was a political science student of Long Beach State Professor E.E. "Ernie" Leonard. But that didn't end the double-name trick. A few days before the election there appeared a letter showing a Leonard endorsement by one Carl Porter Jr. implying in sleazy obfuscation that he was the son of the late 38th District incumbent Assemblyman Carley V. Porter.

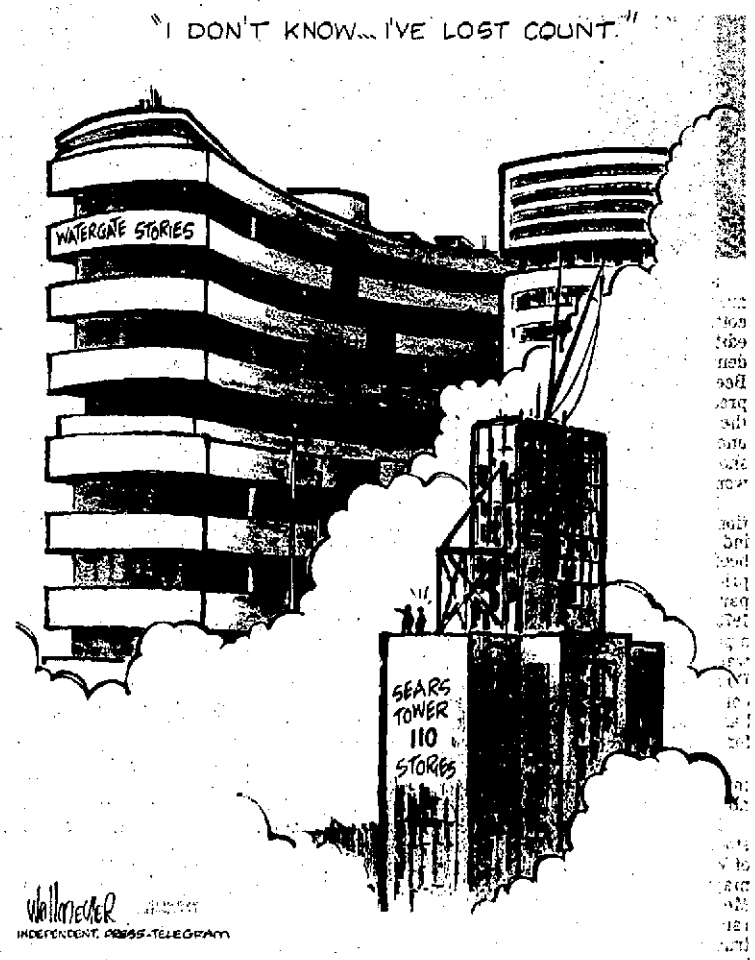

Democrats Valencia, Leonard and Walter Mallonee did not meet legal residence requirements but contended they were on legitimate ground in the absence of any precedent for enforcing the requirement.

Since all knavery now is reckoned from the Watergate these days, Vicencia invokes it today in his pledge for the remaining days of the runoff campaign:

"I welcome the opportunity to discuss these issues with my opponents and shall ask for the support and endorsement of all those eliminated in the primary with the specific exception of Messrs. Leonard and Valencia.

"I repudiate their Watergate-type tactics and will, if elected, work diligently to effect election reforms to eliminate capricious and unethical practices by irresponsible people."

All of which suggests a fine campaign slogan for Physician McLennan: "Heal thyself!"

Reagan goes from pillar to Post

SACRAMENTO — Things are not going well for Republicans these days, and perhaps that accounts for Gov. Reagan's skittish behavior last week.

On Tuesday, the governor's frequently proclaimed law-and-order posture became a little tilted when he said the people involved in the Watergate case should not be considered criminals because they "are not criminals at heart."

Bob Schmidt

View From Our State Bureau

"Criminal," he said, was too harsh a term to use, because the people involved were "well-meaning individuals" committed to re-electing the President.

DOES ANYONE really have to bother to speculate what kind of language the governor would use had it been Democrats whose involvement with burglaries, wiretapping, theft, perjury, suborning perjury, obstructing justice, and campaign law violations had been exposed?

Perhaps Reagan thought the word "criminal" too harsh because he himself had used up his week's supply of harsh language the day before.

On Monday, Legislative Analyst A. Alan Post had submitted a 127-page critique of the governor's expenditure limitation proposal, the one he is now seeking to put on a statewide ballot via the initiative process.

Post has worked for the Legislature since 1949. He heads a staff which now exceeds 60, and his job is to provide the Legislature with detailed analyses of matters requiring legislative attention.

The Legislature had asked him to examine Reagan's plan, to analyze it, and to determine if (a) the foundations on which the radical proposals rested were valid, and (b) the proposals would do what Reagan said they would do.

POST CONCLUDED that the premises on which the governor based both the need for his plan and the plan itself were shaky, and that the proposals might produce effects not intended.

In response, the governor later Monday delivered himself of a two-page recital of the legislative analyst's "horrendous errors" in the past, concluding with the statement that "Mr. Post has chosen to abandon the interests of the taxpayers and has instead embraced the policy positions of those free-spending leaders in the legislature by whom he is employed."

The highly personal nature of his attack on Post startled Republican as well as Democratic legislators.

Alan Post has earned an incredibly unique reputation in Sacramento. He is considered competent, objective, and nonpartisan, and there just are not very many of them kind in this highly political city.

Jack McDowell, director of Reagan's campaign press relations in 1970, had this to say when he was a political writer for the San Francisco Examiner in 1967:

"Perhaps the greatest recognition of Post's professional nonpartisanship lies in these facts: While he regularly produces bumper crops of gubernatorial ulcers and upsets the dreams and schemes of some of his influential employers, they have disputed his conclusions but never once accused him of playing politics."

The analyst's office was created in 1941 to provide the Legislature with its own independent source of fiscal and research information. Post, the second man to hold the office reviewed the budgets of Governors Warren, Knight, Brown and now Reagan, and has been re-hired by both Republican and Democratic-controlled Legislatures.

HE HAS VEXED Reagan on numerous occasions during the past six years, but almost always because he has insisted that Reagan administration officials differentiate between reality and speculation in their testimony before legislative committees.

In several recent budgets, for example, the governor said welfare would cost the state X number of dollars if certain reforms were adopted.

Post would invariably respond that reform certainly was needed, but he was obliged to point out that existing federal law clearly prevented some of the proposed changes from being implemented, and it was therefore risky to base a budget on the speculation that federal approval of those changes could be obtained.

This the governor translated into opposition by Post to the proposed changes. In some cases, Post did object. But his responsibility to the Legislature was to point out that without assurance of federal approval it was unsound to base a spending program on the speculation that there would be approval.

There are numerous other illustrations of Reagan-Post conflicts, but most are of a similar nature. It is undoubtedly thankful for the governor to lash out at so persistent an annoyance as Post has proven to be, but the analyst's 24-year record for objectivity and accuracy is too established for even Ronald Reagan to sully.

The Great Cadillac cover-up

WASHINGTON — The Watergates, with their elaborate tapestry of cover-ups, are not confined to politics. Equally cynical and deceitful are the corporate Watergates.

We have found evidence of such a cover-up among thousands of General Motors documents turned over to us.

To assist in preparing this anatomy of

MERRY-GO-ROUND

by

a cover-up, we called upon the Center for Auto Safety, founded by Ralph Nader.

The story began in 1967 with the discovery that a "blower relay" made by GM's Delco Remy division was failing its engineering tests.

Cadillac urgently called on Delco Remy to correct the dangerous problem. Delco Remy made some adjustments and delivered the new relays to Cadillac.

Shortly thereafter, the Cadillacs began to roll off the production line. Almost immediately, the relays began to fail — in one case, after the Cadillac had been driven only six miles. By late 1968, with sales of the new 1969 models just beginning, there were 750 failures.

Cadillac attended to the burned-out relays as fast as they were brought in. But it did nothing to warn the tens of thousands of other customers that their Cadillacs could burn to the ground any minute.

By March 1969, a harsh, intra-GM battle had erupted outside the hearing of Cadillac owners or, for that matter, Cadillac dealers. The Cadillac division complained to the Delco Remy division that almost 10 per cent of their relays were failing.

By September, more than 11,000 relays had failed. Cadillac met desperately with Delco Remy on the "mounting warranty failures." Feverishly, Cadillac engineers recommended a fuse which at least would keep the car from catching fire when a relay failed.

Higher-ups rejected the idea, however, as too expensive, even though the Center for Auto Safety estimates the part would cost a mere one dollar.

By October, there were 14,000 failures. By the end of the year, the figure had reached a staggering 21,000. Finally, Cadillac abandoned GM's own Delco Remy division and began purchasing from an independent contractor.

Meanwhile, in Cadillac's offices a starkly honest memo was being circulated. It showed that an astounding 48 per cent of the relays would probably fail in five years or 50,000 miles of driving.

The finding led some Cadillac men to urge a recall campaign which would cost $1.4 million.

Cadillac's bosses balked. It was decided, to keep on fixing the cars that came in without alerting other owners that they were driving potential firetraps.

An internal hush-up campaign was conducted by Cadillac's middle management. Handwritten notes among the documents in our possession tell how a supervising engineer was hiding facts from Cadillac Vice President George Elges.

"Bob (the engineer) is worried just as we are," reads one note, "that Elges is going to hear about this problem from some dealer on a trip or through an owner letter and then complain because he wasn't informed. Thinks we should somehow inform him of the problem and decide what to do about it."

When Traveler's Insurance contacted a Cadillac representative after hearing rumors of a fire problem, Cadillac in a cover-up worthy of the White House assured Traveler's the information was false.

Finally, Cadillac let its dealers in on the extent of the failures in an indirect memo, but still refused to tell its owners.

Now, with summer approaching, tens of thousands of owners of 1969 and 1970 Cadillacs face, still unsuspecting, another season of danger. The relays burn out faster in hot weather with the air conditioners blowing.

Our queries to GM have produced Ron Ziegler-like backing and filling. First a spokesman denied any fires and injuries as a result of the blower relays.

Then, the spokesman told my associate Les Whitten, "our records show about 200 reports where a wire harness melted in air conditioning systems of 1969-1970 Cadillacs. Available Cadillac reports describe four fires involving the instrument panel or engine compartment. There were no accidents and one alleged injury reported."

Did Gray understand his own words?

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The tragedy of L. Patrick Gray III is that he still doesn't seem to understand the outrageous things he did to the Federal Bureau of Investigation in his 10 months as acting director.

A great part of that lack of understanding may be attributable to the nation's press and its acceptance of obvious conflicts of interest Gray had as a Nixon appointee in conducting an objective investigation of the Nixon White House and the Nixon re-election committee over the Watergate mess.

The gray-haired, amiable former Navy captain was extremely accommodating to the press in a way that the late J. Edgar Hoover never was.

THE COMFORTABLE old man relaxed many of the guidelines that Hoover had enforced on dress, hair length, and mustaches. With a good deal of fanfare, he hired more women and members of minority groups.

While these reforms may have been overdue, the manner in which they were introduced seemed to have been designed to garner the maximum publicity in contrasting his reign to that of Hoover's tenure.

The resulting impression was of a sharp contrast to the stern Hoover discipline, and, among the newsmen favored with the interviews with the "good old boy" Pat Gray, this was an improvement over the cold and inaccessible Hoover.

FORGOTTEN, in the rush of good publicity about "the nice guy" heading the FBI, was the inherent conflict of interest in any long-time political supporter of President Richard Nixon directing an investigation that might involve some of the President's key advisers.

Having won good publicity, Pat Gray went about the business of solidifying his relations with the White House — an essential step in getting the nomination as permanent director.

The accommodations he made in connection with the Watergate investigation are now a matter of history. He sent raw FBI files to White House Counsel John W. Dean III, and failed to conduct a searching inquiry when there was evidence that indicated information from the files had been "leaked" to officials of the Nixon re-election committee.

Pat Gray met with Special Assistants H.R. "Bob" Haldeman and John D. Ehrlichman and agreed to their rules on the questioning of White House witnesses.

IT HAS BEEN reported that government investigations have established that Gray met with Dean and Ehrlichman on June 28, 1972, for a discussion of files found in the desk and safe of convicted Watergate conspirator E. Howard Hunt, a White House consultant. Those same sources have told federal investigators that Gray tossed one of the files in his FBI "burn bag."

Clark Mollenhoff

Ehrlichman has confirmed such a meeting, but has denied giving Gray orders to destroy one of the files. Dean has apparently told federal investigators that Ehrlichman suggested that Gray should destroy the file.

Gray resigned abruptly, without an explanation, but with a general denial of any wrong-doing.

THE STRONGEST denunciation of Gray's role in the last 10 months can be found in the February issue of the FBI Law Enforcement Bulletin. The "Message from the Acting Director," signed by Gray, stated:

"Leaders of the law enforcement profession are well aware of the grave responsibilities entrusted to our profession. To fulfill these responsibilities requires us to maintain a high standard of excellence in the performance of our duties...

"There are many evils which can and do afflict our profession. None is worse than corruption. There can be no room for corruption in the ranks of the law enforcement profession. Corruption erodes the public trust and confidence which is the foundation of our profession...

"The working environment of a law enforcement officer is filled with temptation. There will always be someone seeking to reward him handsomely to look the other way when the law is violated. Many criminals have no hesitancy about offering and delivering special favors to those who can assist them in their illegal endeavors. Others may, by virtue of their position, attempt to intimidate the law enforcement officer into neglecting his duty to the law. The officer is subjected to these pressures because he stands as an otherwise insurmountable obstacle to the plans of those who would act outside the law...

"Well-meaning platitudes condemning isolated instances of corruption in law enforcement do little to correct the problem. What is needed is strong leadership to expose and take action against each case of corruption. We may never succeed in screening out at the preemployment stage those who may be susceptible to corrupting influences, but we must not allow them to infect others in the ranks of law enforcement."

IT IS INTERESTING to contemplate what Acting Director Gray may have been thinking when he approved that personal message for publication in the February FBI bulletin.

On the cover of that same issue of the FBI publication is a picture of seated Abraham Lincoln and the inscription: "...Let every man remember that to violate the law is to trample on the blood of his father, and to tear the charter to his own and his children's liberty."

Pat Gray may have been too busy preparing for his hearing on his nomination to be permanent director of the FBI to have even looked at the cover of that FBI publication, let alone to heed its message.

A cattleman's side of the beef story

Some reasons why beef prices are not likely to be reduced by boycotts is given in a Value Line editorial written by a former president of the Colorado Cattlemen's Beef Improvement Committee. He presents some statistics concerning the past and present production and consumption of beef that should be considered by those who wonder why prices are so high.

In 1952 with a national population of about 155 million the cattle industry provided 155 pounds of beef per person. It was too much, prices xell by 50 per cent. By comparison the industry produced in 1972 over 116 pounds per person for a population of about 210 million. It was not enough. Prices started up. During this period consumer income increased 230 per cent. This has resulted in the greater demand for beef.

TOO MANY PEOPLE have too much money to spend on the available supply of beef.

Some of the changes in the livestock business is given. At the close of World War II technology brought major changes in the industry. Mechanization of farms and ranches with tractors and pickup trucks resulted in the decimation of horse and mule herds. They were slaughtered by the millions for pet foods. The advent of margarine had a great effect on the dairy industry, of even greater importance were the advances of genetics, nutrition and management that produced a cow that could give almost three times as much milk. This resulted in the dairy herds' reduction by almost two-thirds.

New synthetic fibers caused domestic sheep herds to dwindle. These large reductions in the horse, mule and dairy cows and sheep left millions of acres of feed grains as surplus. To fill the gap the build-up of beef cattle began. Production increased rapidly until markets became glutted and prices dropped 50 per cent in 1952. The profit incentive was reduced. Droughts in the 1950s forced the early sell-off of cattle at distress prices.

IT USED TO BE that beef cattlemen shipped their cattle to farmers in the Midwest corn and wheat states where they were fattened to market weights and grades. In the late 1950s the large commercial feedlots were started. These operators bought range cattle in large numbers and brought them up to weights high above what was accomplished by the farmers' programs. Accordingly without materially increasing the number of cattle in the nation the feedlots had increased the weight per head of cattle available to the consumer. But the consumers increased income and desire for beef increased the demand faster than the supply.

During the 20 years 1952 to 1972 the beef industry increased its output 285 per cent. During those years live cattle sold for less than they had brought in the four years prior to 1952. During those years the cattlemen refused to take government handouts and subsidies. It was not until 1971 that cattle prices equaled those of 20 years before. In early April of 1973 live slaughter steers sold for only 30 per cent more than they did in 1952. The cattlemen asks, "Is there anyone who would roll back his wages to just 30 per cent more than they were in 1952?"

AGRICULTURE, of which beef represents the largest segment, is America's biggest business. It represents over $335 billion of assets equal to 60 per cent of all U.S. corporations. Livestock men and farmers spend $75 billion a year on goods, services and taxes. They buy more petroleum products than any other single industry.

Because of my confidence in the integrity and statistical experience of The Value Line, I accept these statistics as valid. The article gives many other examples of why meat prices are going to remain high. It closes with "the only way to reduce beef prices is to increase production and that will come only when the producers are allowed a fair profit on investment and labor."

My comment is that for the present the consumer can bring about this balance best by cutting down on the per person consumption of beef until there is assurance that prices will not continue to soar. It will take time to increase production to equal the ever-increasing amount of beef we consume per person.

Small turnout seen for Los Al election

By BOB ANDREW
Staff Writer

A 27 to 33 per cent turnout of voters is predicted by City Clerk Doris Pass for the special Los Alamitos election Tuesday to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Dale Kroesen from the city council.

There are only two candidates in the race. Both lost in last April's municipal election, and are now seeking to serve out the final year of Kroesen's term. The candidates are former councilman Joseph H. Hyde and William W. Parton, manager of the Navy Exchange at the Los Ulamitos Naval Air Station.

"The main issue in this election is that if Joe Hyde gets elected he'll go right back to voting with the (William) Brown-(Charles) Heiser power bloc," declared Parton, "and we'll have the same turmoil all over again."

THE "TURMOIL" to which Parton referred did not begin until six-months after Hyde lost his council seat last year. Then Kroesen, Mayor Charles Long and Councilman Kenneth Miller forced the resignationof then-City Manager William Kraus.

Within a month recall petitions were being circulated against Kroesen, Long and Miller and a counter-recall had been launched against Brown and Heiser. Kroesen resigned before the petitions were filed in an effort to bring peace via this election.

However, the petitions against Long and Miller were filed anyway, but the clerk refused to accept them on grounds they were filed at her home after the time period had passed. The legal validity of the petitions is still in question.

MEANWHILE the council has been locked in a 2-2 deadlock and unable to select a new city manager. Late last month Kraus was hired to take over the reigns in Norwalk, a city about four times the size of Los Alamitos.

Parton claims he would be an independent member of the council not voting with either bloc but weighing each issue on its own merits.

Hyde on the gther hand readily declared that he would vote "most of the time" with Brown and Heiser.

"It's a matter of philosophy," Hyde said. "I won't vote with them on the basis of a power bloc, but after evaluating each issue most of the time I will see things the same way as they do and Parton will line up with Long and Miller. That's what the whole dispute is about — how should the city should be run?"

HYDE contends the underlying issue is whether the city will have on "open administration" with a high level of citizen involvement or return "to the type of closed administration they had before Draus came."

Hyde favors increased parks and recreation services with the additional funds needed to support them coming primarily through attraction of sales tax-generating businesses to increase the tax base.

He opposes increased density in residential developments, particularly near los Alamitos High School, because of the added burden it would throw on the school system.

PARTON objects that

JOSEPH H. HYDE

WILLIAM W. PARTON

Hyde is unfairly trying to tar him with a "high-rise density" label. He, too, is in favor of low residential density, although some areas are best suited for apartment construction, he feels.

Parton declares that he stands "100 per cent behind the decision of the Secretary of Defense to convert NAS Los Alamitos to a training facility for joint use by all armed forces reserve branches.

"To me it represents freedom," Parton declared. Asked to define that stand, he said, "Well, just remember Pearl Harbor. I don't want to see anybody, a relative and friend or an enemy locked up in a bamboo coop for 8 to 12 years."

HYDE expressed surprise that Parton had raised the air base us an issue.

"I am not in favor of closing the base, as my opponent charges," Hyde said, "although I find it hard to believe that they will close the Long Beach Navy Base and expand Los Alamitos."

Hyde said he is reserving judgement on the impact of bringing in other reserve units and "119 helicopters" to the base.

"If the noise proves to be too bad," Hyde said, "I will have no conflict in expressing the citizens' complaints. My opponent on the other hand is an employe of the base and his hands would be tied."

Marine paper bared on handling race problems

By BUCK LANIER
Military Editor

The candid Marine Corps report on how the service should deal with racial turbulence has been obtained by the Independent, Press-Telegram.

It has been previously circulated privately among the Corps and the Secretary of Defense's Human Relations division will distribute the recommendations to all Navy units later this month.

"Do's and don'ts" for commanders are spelled out in the paper. Lt. Gen. William K. Jones, just retired, was Pacific Marine Force commander when he ordered the study. A series of severe racial incidents in the command prompted him to authorize it, officials indicated.

GEN. JONES assigned three officers and two civilian experts in operational analysis systems to compile the paper.

The team read investigative memos dealing with the incidents in Hawaii, Okinawa, Japan and among Marine battalions assigned to amphibious assault ships. All commanders, investigators, witnesses and bystanders were interviewed.

Without using names or locations, they charted what they had learned to see if there were similarities or patterns.

They described a typical racial problem as having four parts, beginning with a minor confrontation, then an escalation, a tension phase and then a turbulence.

A SUMMATION of the recommendations:

— It is a mistake to deal with self-appointed group leaders. Doing so weakens the chain of command and tends to give command approval to their unauthorized leadership.

Instead, each individual should be allowed to speak for himself.

— Whenever possible, unit officers and senior noncommissioned officers should be used to control discipline problems. Military or civilian police should be a last resort.

— Never address racially segregated groups about racial matters. This includes a group that would have a small number of sympathetic persons from other racial groups present.

No matter how fair the commander is, his words will be misinterpreted by the other groups. There is more understanding to be gained by the questions and answers that come from a fully integrated audience.

— Do not apprehend persons, particularly minority group leaders, in public, such as dining halls, clubs and theaters, if they can be identified and handled later.

If they are a clear and immediate threat, however, pick them up immediately.

— Assure that enough force is present and available before giving an order for an unauthorized group to break up. Once committed, force must be swift and capable of complete control. If it is too little and too late, further violence will result.

— Complete identification of participants in illegal racial activities is paramount. It is the mask of anonymity that helps to spur illegal activity and violence.

— An alert, well-trained readily available reaction force is the best insurance against mob violence on an installation.

Lakewood Lions plan installation

Barry Goldstock, attorney, has been elected President of the Lakewood Lions Club. He will be installed at a dinner-dance at the Lakewood Country Club, June 9.

Also elected and to be installed are Jess Barber, first vice president; Tom Cumberland, second vice-president; Bob Bucknall, third vice president; Phil Wellman, secretary and Clayton Pelsky, treasurer.

John Yates will be installed as Lion Tamer and Sandy Sanders as Tail Twister for the local service organization.

Saludos Amigos Parade today

The Saludos Amigos Parade, concluding the 27th annual Lakewood Pan American Festival, will step off today at 2 p.m. along Del Amo Blvd.

The parade, which will have over 3,000 participants in 135 units, will start at Del Amo Blvd and Palo Verde Ave. and move west along Del Amo to Clark Ave., then north to disband in the area of the Fiesta de Amistad carnival in the Lakewood Shopping Center.

Television commentator George Putman will be grand marshal for the parade and Rear Adm. V. G. Lambert, of the Los Angeles-Long Beach Naval Base, will be reviewing officer for the military units participating. Olympic swimmers, Steve Genter, Susan Atwood and Ann Simmons, will act as honorary division marshal.

The 1½-hour parade also will have consuls of Latin American countries as guests. This year the Pan Am honored country is the Dominican Republic.

Reviewing stands will be along Del Amo Boulevard and just south of the Lakewood City Hall on Clark Avenue.

"I concentrate on new dentures at prices you can afford"

What you can't afford is to be without them. Dr. F. E. Campbell

Why I can offer new dentures at such reasonable prices: Of all our services, the basic and most important one is making new dentures. We do all our own work in our own modern laboratories. With the popularity of my INSTANT CREDIT PLAN — I can deliver new dentures at prices you can afford.

Instant Credit Makes it Easy. Older people often face a different kind of credit problem than younger ones. I understand your credit problems. I carry my own credit, so I can make my own decision on your credit INSTANTLY. No waiting for an answer. No banks or finance companies to deal with. Many of my patients work part time, are on Social Security, a small pension or retired. Whatever your circumstances, I tailor the terms to fit them — on approval of your credit—even if you earn UNDER $200 a month, even if you've never had credit before.

Extra work? No extra charge. Even though we never know in advance how much time and work your new dentures may take — you always know in advance how much they'll cost. Exactly. We never charge extra for difficult cases. All work in our labs by union technicians.

One Day Service. Usually, if you come in to our downtown L.A. office by 9:30 A.M. — your dentures can be ready the same day — a real advantage for out-of-towners.

Fast Plate Repairs in all 12 offices. Usually... while you wait.

Union Members. All union and insurance dental care plans welcome. Bring your I.D. card. We do the rest.

Any questions? We'll gladly answer them in detail. Come in anytime or phone the office nearest you. No appointment necessary for examination.

Good buys remain at Park Place

Ninety-three luxury homes have been sold since Park Place opened in Cerritos last August, according to G. Ross Crawford, director of sales for builder Ponderosa Homes, a Kaiser Aetna division.

"The remaining homes in this park-oriented community represent 12 of the best buys in Southern California," Crawford stated.

Park Place homes are priced from $37,990 to $48,990.

For outstanding value, Crawford cited the Roosevelt, a spacious two-story home which offers three bedrooms, 2½ baths, a den and a bonus room.

The Roosevelt's well-planned kitchen adjoins the large family center on one side, and the formal dining room on the other, which is separated from the living room by a unique sunken conversation pit with fireplace.

"This dramatic home is punctuated by such outstanding design features as cathedral ceilings, an innovative use of quary tile and wrought iron, a floating staircase and sliding walls of glass that open onto garden and patio areas," said Crawford. Buyers are offered a choice of three exterior elevations — rough sawn diagonal siding, cedar shingles or stucco.

"As important as design and elegance are the quality features that go into every Park Place home," he pointed out. "When you buy any of the four Park Place plans, you're buying a lifetime of cast iron tubs and sinks, copper water lines, ceiling and sidewall insulation, ceramic tile countertops, self-cleaning double ovens, nylon shag carpeting, rear-yard block-wall fencing, concrete driveways and a shake or cedar shingle roof."

PARK PLACE derives its name from its proximity to Cerritos Regional County Park.

"An extension of the community it serves, the 80-acre park offers residents ample picnic grounds, lots of green grass for romping and relaxing, hiking trails, meeting halls, night-lighted baseball diamonds, and a host of other recreation activities," Crawford added.

Park Place may be reached via the Artesia Freeway (Highway 91) to the Carmenita turn-off, south on Carmenita to South Street, and west one-half mile to 19002 S. Vickie Avenue, where the sales office and furnished model complex are open daily from 10 a.m. until dusk.

MAINTENANCE-FREE VILLAGE GARDENS TOWNHOUSE . . . part of S&S Construction's Cypress Village community

Adjacent S & S communities combine townhome, patio

Cypress Village, a $50 million master-planned residential community combining adjacent townhome and patio home developments, is now celebrating its grand opening in Cypress.

The complex is the newest development in the area by S & S Construction, a subsidiary of Shapell Industries, Inc.

When completed, the project will consist of 485 Village Gardens townhomes and 196 Village Greens patio homes. Both developments adjoin the 432-home College Park community, which opened last year.

A total of 1,113 living units will be featured in the overall Cypress Village development.

At Village Greens, six decorator-furnished, detached patio home models are on display, built of genuine lath and plaster construction and priced from $36,450 to $48,950.

Eight townhome models are open at Village Gardens, ranging from $31,950 to $38,950. Both communities feature separate recreational facilities for residents' use; all units have been designed for maintenance-free living.

"CYPRESS VILLAGE represents one of the largest single community developments in S & S Construction's history," stated Gerry L. Dirksen, vice president and general manager.

"We feel this is truly a master-planned community, in that we are offering three distinct forms of residential housing within one area."

"By doing so, we can meet the needs of all types of homebuyers, whether they are looking for a conventional family home or seeking the appeal of more-leisure time with a maintenance-free townhome or patio home," he added.

Both Village Gardens and Village Greens feature individual, fully equipped private clubhouses with lounge areas, kitchens and bar facilities, in addition to large outdoor swimming pools and whirlpools, centered around landscaped greenbelt areas and children's play areas.

EXCLUSIVE standard features in all townhomes and patio homes include wall to wall carpeting throughout, vinyl tile flooring, complete exterior wall and ceiling insulation, all electric kitchens with dishwashers, ceramic tile in kitchen and bathroom areas, cultured marble pullmans, and hand-finished natural wood cabinetry from Shapell's General Cabinet Company subsidiary.

Wood shingle roofing is featured at the Greens, while concrete tile roofs are offered at the Gardens.

Distinctive exteriors are accented by extensive use of wood and masonry trim. Patio home units also utilize brick and natural stone in exterior as well as interior design.

Automatic garage door openers are standard features in Village Green units, while each townhome includes an enclosed private garden patio.

"Village Gardens and Greens have been designed for both family and adult living," said Mark Bader, general sales manager. "Both new communities have varied recreational facilities available to residents who, without the worry of upkeep on their homes, have more time to enjoy these amenities.

"Patio home and townhome living share the advantage of security and convenience as well. With the realization that conventional home ownership does not suit everyone, Cypress Village was developed to cover different segments within the homebuying market," Bader added. "This unique concept, adapted to one area will, we feel, meet with great acceptance by the public, supported by the company's quality reputation."

RESIDENTS AT both communities have all recreational facilities accessible to them which, in addition to a total of five swimming pools, also include men's and women's saunas, a billiard room, assembly room, and children's pool.

Homebuyers may take advantage of the services of Shapell's Decorating Studios, which offer a complete line of home furnishings and accessories, as well as free professional decorating counsel to aid in custom interior design.

Cypress Village is located conveniently close to major freeways, shopping, educational, and employment centers in the area.

Village Gardens models are located at 6909 Grand Mannan Drive off Knott Avenue, and may be reached by taking the San Diego-Garden Grove Freeway to the Knott exit and proceeding north past Orangewood Avenue.

To reach Village Greens, turn left at Orangewood to the model complex at 6674 Vinal Haven Court.

Bixby Ranch Co. reveals land plan

Plans for development of a townhouse condominium complex on an 7.85-acre site on Lampson Avenue across from Old Ranch Country Club have been announced by Bixby Ranch Company.

Joseph R. Brown, Jr., executive vice president-real estate, said an application to the Seal Beach City Planning Commission will be made pending the outcome of the May 15 election when residents of the area have the option to vote in favor of a $1 million bond issue which would permit acquisition of the land for a park district.

If two-thirds of the voters approve the measure, plans will proceed for use of the land as a public park, he noted.

Brown said he is announcing details of the planned townhouse development prior to the election in response to inquiries asking clarification of the company's plans for the property if the park district measure fails.

Goodwin becomes full-service office

The Orange County office of the Percy H. Goodwin Company, one of Southern California's oldest and largest full-service real estate and insurance firms, has been expanded into a full-service operation, President Mike Goodwin announced.

Noting his company's new expansionary policy for Orange County, Goodwin said the action was to meet the demands of the rapidly growing building industry in Southern California.

"We can now service our clients from this office in all fields of real estate," Goodwin said, "over a territory including all of Orange County, Los Angeles, Riverside, and San Bernardino."

GOODWIN named Jack Andrews, veteran real estate executive, as general manager of the Orange County office, which has five full divisions: real estate investment, property management, insurance, mortgage banking and new home sales.

Andrews said that although the Orange County office of Goodwin Company has been open for six years, its mortgage banking was handled by the San Diego office.

Final units at Brentwood

Construction has started on a final unit of 57 homes at Brentwood Park, an eventual 200-unit neighborhood of homes located at 17012 Bloomfield Ave., Cerritos.

The Brentwood Environmental Communities project offers five plans priced from $44,495 to $54,995 ranging in size from three to four bedrooms and an idea room.

Every home has a lot enclosed with an eight-foot-high privacy wall.

Shag carpeting, double ovens, indoor built-in barbecues, imported Mexican tile and hardware, wet bars and shake roofs are among the features included in the purchase price.

Construction whould be completed by the end of May, according to Sylvester Morning, president of the company.

$8.5 million in sales

Westport foursome active

Dean Rickbeil, president of Wesport Home Builders, Inc., Anaheim-headquartered builder-developer of two Southern California home communities, Capistrano Villas in San Juan Capistrano and Westport Cerritos Villas in Cerritos, reports almost $8.5 million in gross sales were recorded by just one woman and three men at the two developments in 1972.

E. J. CANTILLON (L), chairman of Westport Home Builders, presents certificates of appreciation to four of sales force: Ed Novak, Jan Cantillon, Al Erickson and Al Gallant.

"Credit for the impressive figure belongs to Al Erickson, sales manager at Cerritos; Al Gallant, sales manager in Capistrano, and to Jan Cantillon and Ed Novak, both in Capistrano, who all recorded over $2 million in sales in 1972. Without their hard work, extremely long hours and dedication to their job, we would certainly not have compiled such an imposing amount," Rickbeil pointed out.

THE FOUR super salesmen were the first to become members of Westport's $2 million club and were treated to a trip to Las Vegas by the appreciative company.

The sales figure represents a total of 850 homes in the two localities.

Construction of an additional 234 garden villas in Capistrano is now underway, bringing the total number of homes already built or under construction to 650. 540 have been sold. A total of 1,168 are planned for the $21 million, 120 acre community.

Of 307 villas built in Cerritos, all have been sold, and another 228 are in various stages of construction.

Realtors challenge syndication rulings

Realtors will challenge two of the new rules governing real estate syndications disclosed by Corporation Commissioner Brian Van Camp at a special seminar in San Francisco last week at the St. Francis Hotel, according to Burton E. Smith of Bellflower, member of the steering committee of the Syndication Division of the California Real Estate Association, sponsor of the seminar.

Smith is former California real estate commissioner and president of the Real Estate Securities and Syndication Institute of the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

He said one of the rules in question would limit the fee earned by a real estate broker upon resale of a syndication he originally sold to 50 per cent of his original fee.

The other would fix the minimum investment in a syndication of more than 100 investors at $2,500.

"TO LIMIT the fee of a broker upon resale of a syndication would tend to limit his incentive in setting up such a syndication in the first place, since he often invests a portion of his original fee in the syndication in lieu of payment to get it going," said Smith.

"It particularly would limit his incentive in reselling the syndication. Since the successful resale of a syndication depends so much on type, timing and how hard the broker works to make the best sale, the new rule would work against the interests of the investors."

He said the second rule would severely limit the number of people who could afford to invest in a syndication. "The California commissioner of real estate, who has jurisdiction over syndications of 100 or less, requires a minimum investment of only $1,000," he pointed out.

THE NEW rules represent the first major revision oin the guidelines affecting syndications since the adoption of the original corporation commissioner's rules.

During the seminar, which was repeated in Los Angeles Thursday, seven panelists headed by Van Vamp discussed requirements, implementation, and procedures under the new rules.

Buying land

FRANKFORT, Ky. (UPI) — American Smelting & Refining Co. said it decided to purchase 1,400 acres of land on the Ohio River near Stephensport for a major new electrolytic zinc refinery. The project will be built if engineering and economic studies show it feasible. The plant would employ approximately 500 people. intent

CHOICE

Arthur Cook, Mission Viejo, has been appointed manager of community information programs for Mission Viejo Company. He formerly was with Rockwell International.

Oceana South's 2nd unit half-sold to date

The second unit of Oceana South, an all-adult planned development community in Oceanside, is now one-half sold according to sales director Jim Davis.

"We have now sold 43 of the 86 homes in the second unit," Davis said, "while the first unit is completely sold out."

"Second unit homes will be available for a September move-in," Davis added. "Construction has also been started in the 141 homes in the third unit, which will be available in early 1974."

Prices of the homes in the community range from $23,495 to $31,995, with excellent conventional financing terms available.

When construction and sales of the second and third unit are complete, Oceana South will total 303 units on 48 acres. The total value of the community will be more than $7.5 million.

OCEANA SOUTH is the third all-adult community to be built by Oceana Land Company in the Oceanside area. The earlier communities — Oceana and Oceana Real — have both been sold out for some time.

Davis noted that "Happy Adult Living" is the theme at Oceana South.

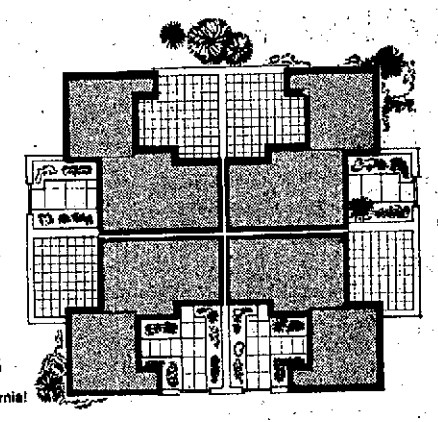

"The fact that this is an adult community doesn't mean that one has to be retired to live here and enjoy," he pointed out. "On the contrary, Oceana South has been designed for active adults. And even if one does happen to be retired from his job, there is a host of activities available to keep him busy right here in the community."

Visitors may reach the homesite from the San Diego Freeway or Highway 395 by taking Highway 78 to El Camino Real, then going north to Mesa Drive and east to Pear Tree Lane and the beautifully furnished models. The models are open daily from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The Private World of Brentwood Park

Where you start with the walls when you measure the differences

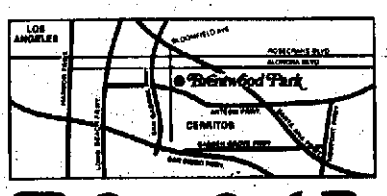

Every home at Brentwood Park comes complete with eight-foot-high adobe finished security walls.

You'll see only as much of your neighbor as you want. And, you'll never have a border war over someone's do-it-yourself picket fence.

But the walls are just one important difference. Come step through the gate. Check the Spanish tiled raised entries, skylights, shag carpeting that's really thick, indoor built-in gas barbecues, and continuous cleaning double ovens. They're all on a long list of things that come with that house.

Then go back outside and look at the variety of exciting architecture you can pick from.

You'll wish every neighborhood measured up as well.

STANTON PARK TOWNHOMES . . . completely furnished

Stanton Park in final stage of sales

Stanton Park Townhomes, a 70-home development of the Anaheim-based Armour Development Company, is in final stage of sales.

The model homes in the development are being sold completely furnished, reports Dick Kurth of Kurth & Associates, exclusive sales agent for the community of all-electric homes.

Each of the one-bedroom-and-den, two-and-three-bedroom homes is situated on a corner lot, a design which has resulted in the granting of numerous awards to the builder, including the coveted BIA's Gold Nugget Award for design excellence.

Included in the full purchase price are amenities characteristic of the quality of Armour Development projects.

The two-story townhomes feature separate family rooms and formal living rooms, and some plans have been designed with separate dining rooms.

The work-saving kitchens have an abundance of storage space (including extra-large walk-in pantries), luminous ceiling panels, all-electric built-ins including dishwasher, and built-in dining bars in some models.

PRIVACY FOR the residents is stressed with access to the front entry of each home through an individual enclosed patio adjacent to the two-car enclosed attached garage.

Exterior maintenance at the community, including the care and upkeep of the "mini parks" (miniature superlandscaped areas), structural exteriors, and fully equipped recreation center is provided through the Stanton Park Homeowners Association.

Immediate occupancy is available at the homes which may be purchased with VA, FHA or conventional financing.

Stanton Park is located between Beach Boulevard (Highway 39) and Western Avenue in Stanton. Sales representatives are on hand daily from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. The remaining townhomes are priced from $24,500, and price information on the furnished models is available at the sales office.

Chapter building in repair

Hugh Carter Engineering Corporation of Garden Grove has announced two new engineering projects.

The firm will do the plumbing design for facilities in Mono Lake Park in Mono County. The park, located off Highway 395 on the route to Reno, Nev., is essentially for picnicking, according to Gary Martin, project engineer.

Air conditioning and plumbing design for a remodeled building of the Long Beach Red Cross Chapter are also being prepared by the corporation. Palmer Power is the architect.

Intercraft opens in Carson

Intercraft Industries Corporation (OTC-NASDAQ) has announced the opening of 160,000 foot manufacturing facility in Carson.

The new plant will produce photo, general purpose and document frames, framed art reproductions and framed mirrors. Intercraft, headquartered in Chicago, is the world's largest manufacturer in this field.

In the new facility represents a total investment in excess of $2 million and consolidates operations previously occupying seven buildings in the Los Angeles area, and primarily will serve the company's fast growing Western Division. Edward King serves as vice president and general manager of the division.

The Carson facility, at 711 Watsoncenter Road, is on 20 acres of land, providing for further expansion. According to King, the current 160,000-foot plant is designed to permit internal doubling of capacity.

Intent letter

PLAINVIEW, N.Y. (UPI) — Veeco Instruments, Inc. said it signed a letter of intent with the Industrial Commission of Corpus Christi, Tex., to lease a 20,000 square-foot building for expansion of its micro-electronic capabilities.

Air Force job

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Pratt & Whitney Division of United Aircraft Corp. has obtained a $6.1 million Air Force contract to develop a prototype of an advanced turbofan engine.

Newest Irvine units set

Ground has been broken and preliminary construction begun for the newest Richard B. Smith, Inc. project in the Turtle Rock portion of Irvine, according to Larry Lizotte, vice president of the Tustin-based development firm.

Lizotte announced the 150 duplex-type units will be called "Broadmoor Turtle Rock" and the models are scheduled for opening in mid-August.

The project is located at the corner of Culver and Campus Drive, directly across from University High School.

LYNWOOD

The Compton-Lynwood Board of Realtors Wednesday will feature as their guest speaker Art Munch, representative from Los Angeles Land Title Company.

His topic will be "Five Sure Fire Closing Technique's."

The breakfast meeting will be held at Bateman Hall, 11330 Bullis Road, Lynwood, at 8 a.m.

Ironwood to be state's newest residential resort development

Pro golfer Arnold Palmer last week officially announced plans for southern California's newest residential resort development, Ironwood Country Club.

Palmer described the project as "one of the most extensive and thoroughly planned residential and recreational resort developments ever undertaken in California."

Located on 900 acres of cove-sheltered desert terrain at Palm Desert, 11 miles southeast of Palm Springs, Ironwood is being developed under a long-range program targeted for final completion in 1982, at a total estimated cost of $100 million.

Model homes are planned for opening this August and approximately 300 condominiums are scheduled to be ready for occupancy in February 1974.

WITH PALMER were Robert Haynie, chairman of Haas & Haynie Corporation, the national contracting firm headquartered in San Francisco, and Ed Wright, project manager for the Ironwood development.

Palmer, Haynie and Jack Vickers, chairman of Vickers Petroleum Corporation, are principals in the Ironwood development. Project contractor is Haas & Haynie (associated with Haas & Haynie Corporation).

Palmer and Haynie said that a total of approximately 2,400 condominiums and about 100 home sites are planned for development.

The community will feature two 18-hole championship golf courses, an executive gold course, 20 tennis courts, one tournament court with stadium facilities and 50 swimming and therapeutic bathing pools.

"We plan to open our model homes this August and make 300 condominium units and 40 home sites available during our first year," Haynie said.

Condominium prices have been set tentatively at $37,500 for one-bedroom units, $42,000 for two-bedroom units and $60,000 for three-bedroom units, he said. Home site prices have not been determined, Haynie said.

One of Ironwood's first residents, however, will be Palmer, who revealed he plans to build a home there and make it his "western residence."

JOHN GALVIN

Kendall operating arm for American

The Kendall Development Company of Newport Beach has been established as the operating unit for the building activities of American Standard Inc., it was announced by Herbert J. Kendall, head of the company's land and shelter operations.

Land and shelter is one of the five basic businesses of American-Standard, a New York-based company that reported sales of $1.3 billion last year.

Through Kendall Development, American-Standard is now carrying on building activities at the rate of $100 million annually, primarily in the single-family housing area.

The new operation is the outgrowth of the reshaping program American Standard carried out in its land and shelter activities over the past year.

That program involved the divestment of the unprofitable phases of the operations, including recreational land and modular home activities.

American - Standard entered the building field in 1968 when it acquired The Wm. Lyon Company and operations were carried on under that name until recently.

KENDALL, who is chairman and chief executive of the Kendall Development Company, has been building in New Jersey since 1946.

John M. Galvin has been named President of Kendall Development. He previously was a financial executive of American-Standard's corporate offices in New York and was transferred to its land and shelter operation in 1971 where he has been heading western operations.

Other major personnel announcements include W. F. Quill, vice president/controller; Elm Weingarden, vice president/marketing; Arthur K. Rothschild, vice president / treasurer and Charles A. PALANT, VICE president/business development, each of whom will report to Galvin.

AT THE SAME time, three vice presidents were named to head Kendall's three building divisions: Jerome A. Gary, vice president/California Division, D. L. Faull, vice president/Arizona Division, and Aaron Kenton, vice president/New Jersey Division.

In its California Division, the company has five on-going projects: three in Thousand Oaks, one on the Irvine Ranch and another in Huntington Beach.

"We are looking for additional parcels of property to develop in Southern California," said Galvin.

"This should continue to be a strong market for many years to come."

The Arizona Division has just started the first phase of a 2100 unit PUD project of single family detached homes, townhouses, patio homes, multi-family units, commercial and recreational facilities in Phoenix.

Additionally, they have a 120 unit multi-family rental complex under construction in the same area.

After we build the remaining few homes here at Oceanaire there won't be any more. Period. That's a promise. Sorry about that—but we're all out of land on which to build them.

So to make up for it, we're putting in six new floor plans and a wide variety of new exteriors. And you'll still get the same quality Sunkist-Built homes we've been building here in Huntington Beach, close to the ocean and surrounded by good schools, shopping and expensive established neighborhoods.

These new homes are large two, three and four bedroom plans, on extra-large lots rear fenced and completely built-in and ready to live in. Features like patio kitchens with pass-thru bars, eye-level range and ovens, dishwashers and nylon shag carpeting make it easy. Some homes have fireplaces.

If you come early, you'll be able to choose your color scheme. Come out today, the end is almost here.

Directions: Take Beach Blvd. offramp from the Garden Grove or San Diego Fwys. then drive south on Beach (39) to Adams. Turn left on Adams to Bushard then left on Bushard to Yorktown, then right to the models and sales office.

THE APOLLO . . . thin-pillar Buick sedan

WORLD OF WHEELS

By ART STEPHAN
Auto Editor

Long Beach area dealers are proudly displaying the newest member of the Buick family — the Apollo compact series — which comes in a hatchback coupe, a thin-pillar coupe and a thin-pillar four-door sedan.

George R. Elges, Buick's general manager and vice president of General Motors, described the Apollo "as a new model that fits the description of a compact in size and price, but is something that the Buick dealer will be proud to sell, and will be entirely in keeping with the Buick image of quality, class and luxury."

Interior dimensions are only slightly less than comparable Century models.

Innovative plans at Park Place, Huntington Beach

Another 63 luxury homes are being offered at Park Place in Huntington Beach, bringing the number of homes in the new community to 137, according to Bill Nugent, project manager.

"Since we opened here last September, we've sold 82 Park Place homes," Nugent said, "and we continue to average about three sales a week."

Homes in the new unit sell for $41,990 to $55,990. The builder is Ponderosa Homes division of Kaiser Aetna.

"We offer a half-dozen innovative plans," Nugent said, "providing a variety of one- and two-story elevations."

Designed for affluent buyers, each plan is totally different from the others.

"There's a Park Place home to suit every taste, every lifestyle," he added. "For example, the Barrymore (plan 453) appeals to the buyer with a taste for elegance and a need for space. On the ground floor it offers an extra large kitchen with a dining nook, a spacious family room with fireplace, and a formal dining room. Removed from these activity areas is a very formal step-down living room. Four bedrooms and two full baths are featured upstairs."

Three Park Place plans feature a 3-car garage. One offers a large, finished bonus room. One plan, the Pickford, features three bedrooms; the rest, four.

ALL PLANS come complete with quality shag carpeting throughout, and with built-in electric appliances, including smooth glass ceramic cooktops on ranges in most plans.

The new 30-acre neighborhood is easy to reach via the San Diego freeway at the Brookhurst turn-off, then south to Atlanta and right to Magnolia. The sales office and furnished model complex are open daily from 10 a.m.

Bixby unveils plan

"It is important that residents of the area understand fully that our plans call for a high quality town house ownership development and not a high density rental apartment complex as has been alleged in some quarters during pre-election discussions," he stated.

"The town homes we are planning would be totally compatible with the community and would be designed for an adult market, ranging upward in price from $40,000.".

AS PART OF the 7.85-acre development, Bixby plans to dedicate a one-acre neighborhood public park, similar to Gummiere (Bluebell) and Heather Lampson, Brown added.

Walter Richardson, architect who has been retained by Bixby to design the town house project, said it will be a tasteful and highly attractive architectural plan with first emphasis on what the project will look like from the neighboring single-family residences in adjacent College Park East.

RICHARDSON plans a low-profile development, totally integrated and compatible with the College Park East homes," Brown said.

"There will be abundant and attractive landscaping, restraint in height limitations, careful traffic planning, and all other aesthetic considerations important to our neighbors."

Fereydoon Ghaffari, vice president of Gruen Associates, said:

"THE CONCEPT for the property would permit its development without intruding into the single family residential area to the east. The circulation pattern for the area provides for primary ingress to and egress from the project on Lampson Ave.

"It would also include consideration of building heights and orientation on various parts of the property," he concluded.

L. Nelson speaker for NAA

L.B. Nelson, president, National Apartment Association, will be the guest speaker May 17 at 7:30 p.m. at Yamashiro Restaurant, Hollywood, for participating members of Apartment Associations in Southern California, California and the National Apartment Council.

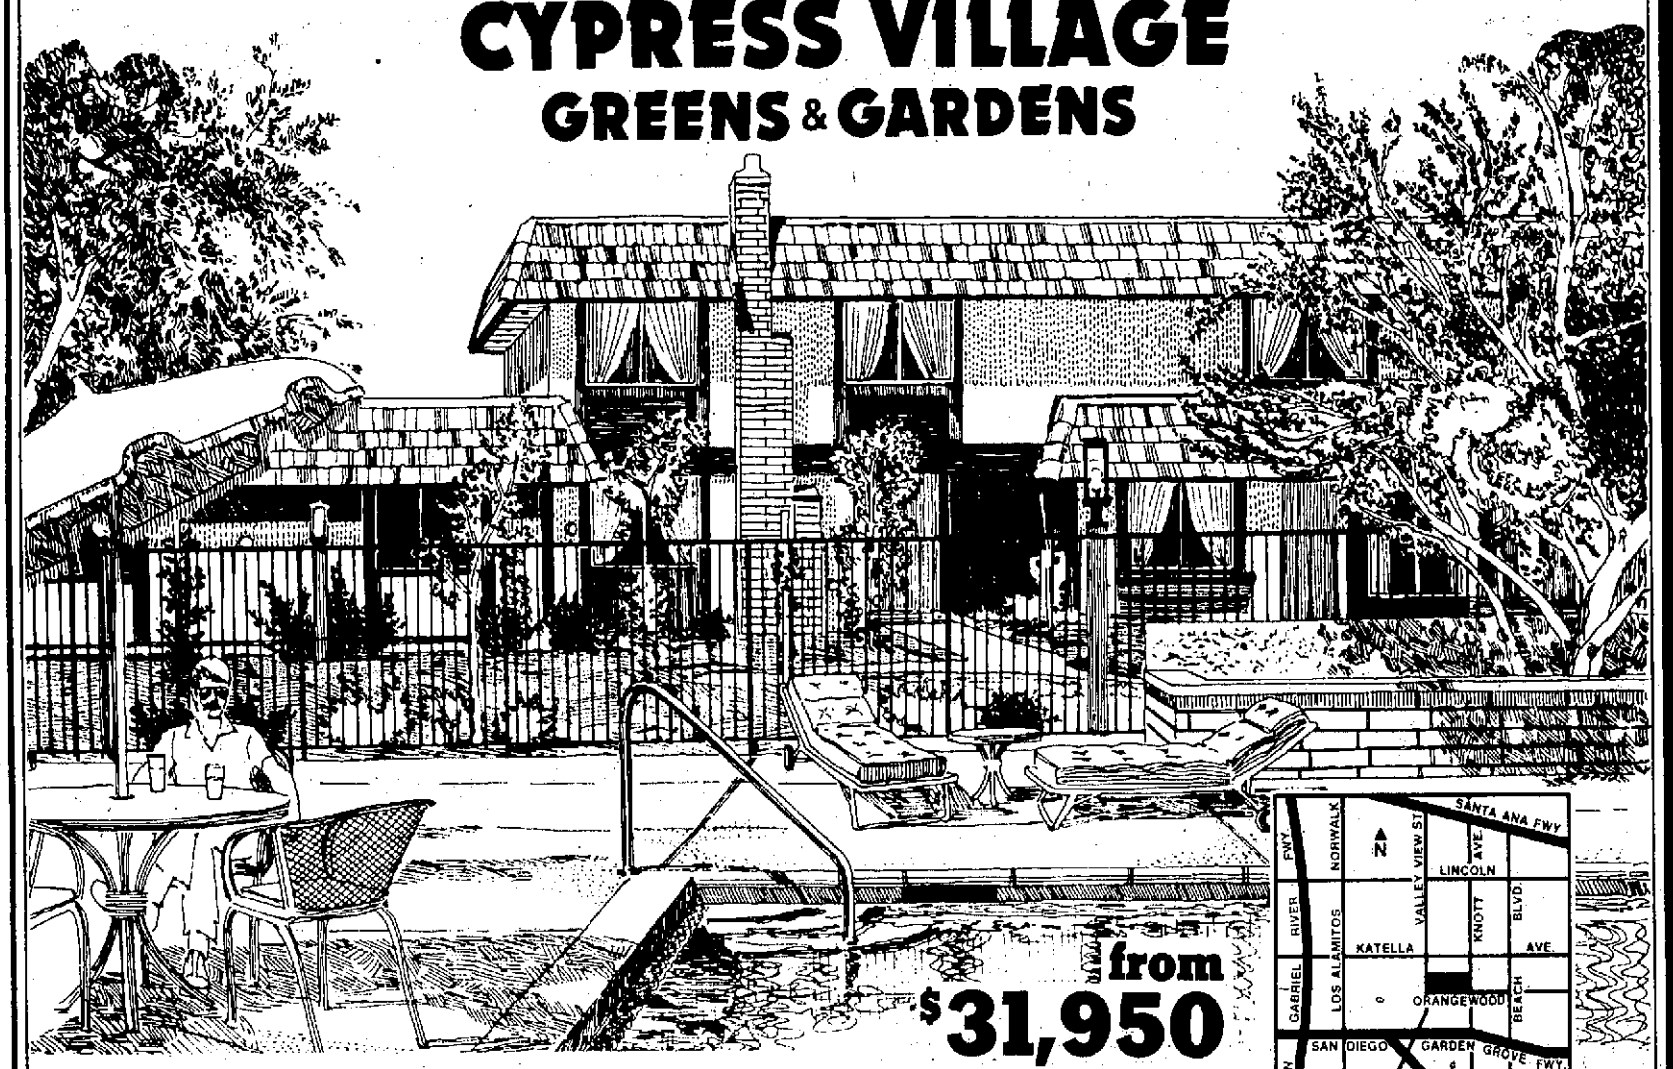

Nelson will speak on "National Apartment Association, You and Survival."

Dinner meeting tickets are on sale at the apartment associations in each area. Checks are to be sent directly to the Association: $12 for single tickets or $22 per couple. A no-host cocktail hour is scheduled for 6-7:30 p.m.

To: Richard Dealer 2338 Poppy, L.B. 90805 DMEAR Rick,
Me & Uncle Andy wanted to write & tell you what a fantastic job you did spraying that acoustic stuff you used. They look beautiful! Clara next door had hers done last week and even she said mine looked 10 times better. And you only charged me half the price she had to pay. Imagine a 12 by 12 room for only $25. Terrific! Not to mention the 10 year written guarantee and free glitter you gave me. But what I REALLY ENJOYED WAS THAT AFTER YOU LEFT I had absolutely no mess to clean up. The phrase that suits your work is that you give "THE BEST FOR LESS". Keep up the good work, Rik. Love, Aunt Bea

Business Opportunities 940

DON'T READ THIS AD
Unless you mean business... We are now considering qualified applicants in your area to become a working part of our National "Hot Food" Distributor System. You are not applying for a job! You are applying for a very high profit business of your own. NO EXPERIENCE NECESSARY - NO SELLING INVOLVED. This business can be started part time - no need to quiet your job. Can be expanded full time with company financing. We need people we can depend on. Our products are nationally famous "Hot Food" items made by Heinz. We have over 36 varieties of Hot Soups and Hot Entrees, such as Beef Stew, Chicken & Dumplings, Chili & Beans, and on and on. We have all of America's favorites. All these delicious products are sold from the latest in automatic vending equipment. Your route will be established and installed by us. Your age is not a factor, if you qualify. Perfect for a nice couple to operate as a family business.

It's time to put a new face on the old place

By JUDY HAZLETT

Editor,
Special Sections

Southern California residents are gathering paint brushes, power tools, saws, hammers, buckets and brooms as they prepare to start "fixing-up the old place."

Whether it is adding new light fixtures, installing new floor tile, remodeling the kitchen or building a garage, countless Southlanders are in the fix-up, clean- up mood to improve their homes.

Exterior improvement could include beautifying patios, building carports and garages, installing new roofs and sidings . . . while, inside the house, kitchen and bathroom remodeling are heading the list, plus family room additions, wall paneling and acoustical ceiling installations.

An attractive patio, for instance, can make a big difference in a home's appearance. Most homes today have patios, and most patios look the same. They're dull-looking, simple slabs of concrete. Yet, this is where a great deal of entertaining is done — especially in Southern California.

Why not make your patio beautiful? If it's made of concrete, surround it with flower beds, gravel or a rock garden. Fix-up the rear of your house, too. Add shutters and foundation plantings. Decorate the back door with molding, paint it an interesting color and surround it with the same trim used around the front door. It'll make a world of difference for your next barbecue!.

Siding is growing in popularity due to the many choices now available. These include aluminum, hardboard, mineral, plywood, redwood, steel and vinyl. Many of these come prefinished, eliminating the need for painting from 10 to 25 years.

Vinyl siding, probably the newest addition, comes in horizontal-clapboard and vertical styles. At least one company has introduced a version that looks like striated wood shingles. Vinyl is available in several colors and also comes with insulated backer boards.

Remember — before you begin any remodeling or building on your property, check with the Department of Building and Safety at your local City Building. Each community has strict codes and it's better to check before you begin than to complete a project and find that you have violated a local building code.

This includes installing patios, changing doors, roofing a patio, fencing etc.

Like siding, today's roofing materials come in many versatile designs and textures. A shingle color can be chosen to accentuate or harmonize with any home decor.

There are heavyweight asphalt tiles for beauty and durability, aluminum shingles appearing like hand split shakes and fire-resistant asbestos shingles.

The kitchen is today's most remodeled room in the house. And, no wonder it's at the top of the list. Family members and party guests have a way of always wandering into it.

Natural wood and wood-like vinyl kitchen cabinetry has replaced the sterile "laboratory" look. A wide selection of beautiful vinyl floors and attractive wallcoverings is available to greatly enhance the kitchen. Many of these have the plus feature of being easy for the do-it-yourselfer to install.

The family room can be improved with indoor-outdoor carpeting to quiet the noise and result in better safety for children's games. A stereo system and bar would make it ideal for parties. With the addition of a half bath and convertible sofa, the family room can serve as a guest room.

Wall paneling is another favorite project. Paneling can transform monotonous walls into a gracious background, improving any design theme. There's a color, woodgrain pattern and texture for any room. Easy to install, the home handyman can do the job himself.

If your home has become too noisy, then consider an acoustical ceiling. Both the comfort of quiet and indirect lighting can be combined in the popular suspended ceiling. This ceiling tile is washable and grease and soil resistant for easy maintenance.

Other popular fix-up projects today include exterior and interior house painting, adding shutters and outdoor ceilings, replacing gutters and downspouts, installing wall insulation and adding new entrance doors and matching side lights.

Each home is different with individual needs . . . so take a took and decide what would perk up your house for the summer months.

Care recommended in financing projects

Since pre-historic man first drew pictures on the walls of his cave, man has sought to improve his dwelling.

However, the majority of home owners today, after they have made a decision to modernize or remodel their home, face the hard reality that money must be provided in one way or another to pay for the improvement.

If the home owner has surplus cash, of course, there is no problem, but if he must borrow the funds then careful consideration should be given as to the best sources available to him.

According to E.T. Butler, vince vice president of FBS Financial, Inc., home improvement lending specialists, today's home owner is more fortunate than his predecessors in that he probably has a wider selection of finance plans than any other prospective purchaser of goods or services.

What he should do, Butler advises, is to determine his needs and then select the best type of financing to suit those needs. His choice of a plan will depend largely on the extent of the job and its cost, and the size of the monthly payments his budget can handle.

If his property is not already mortgaged and the job is a large one, he might consider the possibility of obtaining a mortgage. If he has sufficient equity, he could perhaps refinance his present mortgage. Sources for these funds can be banks, mortgage institutions, savings and loan associations, or other lending agencies who specialize in real estate mortgages.

The mortgages can be either the type that is insured by the Federal Housing Administration or the so-called conventional type. After the home owner determines his needs he merely makes application to the lending institution of his choice. Terms of repayment and rates of interest may fluctuate with the lending institution. However, those mortgages insured by the Federal Housing Administration carry rates and terms that are fixed under FHA regulations.

Whether the home owner is obtaining a new mortgage or refinancing, he should quire as to additional costs such as title insurance, attorney's fees, recording fees, and other such charges incidental to the mortgage which the lending institution normally collects over and above the interest charges on the mortgage itself.

The most popular type of home improvement financing, Butler said, is the shorter term installment credit that has become such a part of modern American living. This means terms of say, up to 5 years and amounts up to $3,500.

Probably the best known plan of this type if Title I of FHA. These loans are made by installment sales finance companies, banks, savings and loan assocations, some employee Credit Unions, and other approved lending institutions.

Generally speaking, they cover the improvement or modernization of any existing structure, and also the construction of certain types of new structures such as garages, service building, etc. Terms may be had up to 5 years for eligible improvements except where the property is for the use of 2 or more families. Then the term may be extended to 7 years.

Maximum amounts are $3,500, except for multi-family dwellings when the amount is $2,500 per living unit, with a maximum of $15,000. The finance charge if 5 per cent discount per year up to $2,500 and 4 per cent discount per year from $2,500 to $3,500. This rate is fixed under FHA regulations.

New galley radiates glamour for family

For most families, the kitchen is the heart and center of home. Not every kitchen keeps pace and each year thousands of women throw up desperate hands and call for surgery, if not a radical transplant.

Redesigning within existing space is less expensive and preferable, but sometimes drastic action is the only real cure. One family otherwise happy in their 40-year-old house voted to abandon their undersize, ailing kitchen in favor of an all-new casual living wing.

Exterior lines called for a steeply pitched roof for the addition, allowing for an impressive high ceiling with saw-textured decking exposed over heavy structural beams.

The result, in modest floor space, is a great, open "keeping room" where the cook comes out of isolation and meal-making is only one of many informal activities.

End walls in the new wing are vertical 1x4-inch tongue and groove cedar, rising dramatically to unite work and play areas with the accent on carefree beauty, not chores.

Direct as a ship's galley, the corridor kitchen lines cabinets along the center of the square addition. Cedar walls define each end of the island and support cabinets above open pass-through space to the informal dining area.

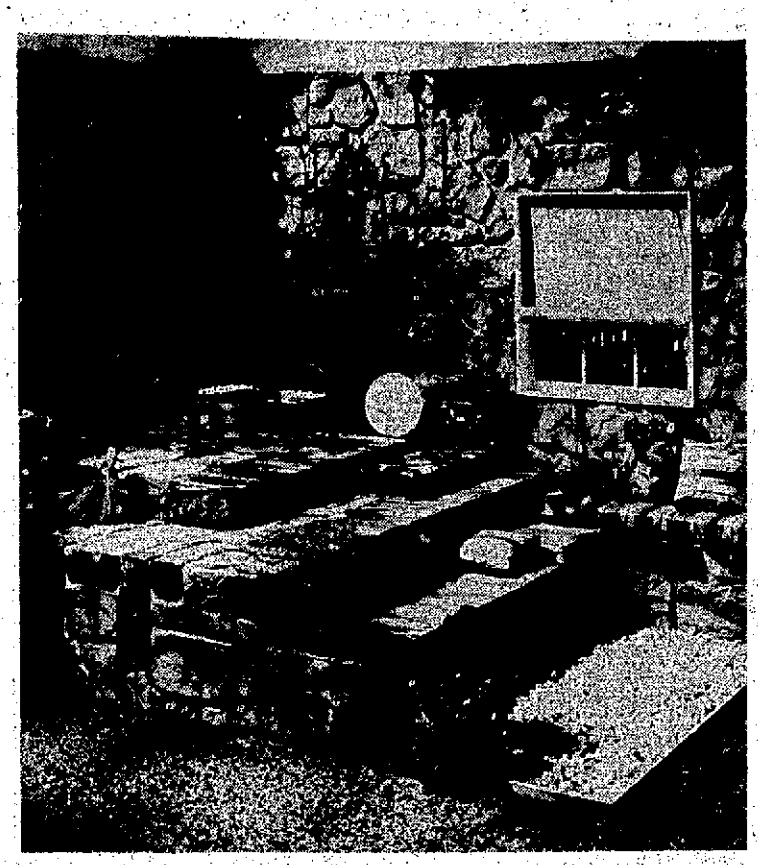

No steps are wasted in the compact corridor, yet the whole family can spread out at long counters to prepare weekend meals or party fare.

From the family living side, the cook can keep one eye on dinner and the other on her needlework or rug loom from a comfortable seat in front of a warming fire.

Now a lead-in to the new wing, former kitchen space is a natural spot for built-ins homemakers dream about — a laundry/sewing clothes care center, special closets for linens, dining and bridge accessories, cleaning needs, hobby gear — even a half bath, or a walk-in pantry with a niche for the family freezer.

Some too slim

Select ceiling or base moldings that are wide enough. As a rule of thumb, a traditional cornice should be 1¼th the distance from ceiling to floor. An eight-foot ceiling calls for a three to four-inch base; a nine-foot ceiling, a base of four to five inches..

Planning a patio is like planning a room

Proper siting for a backyard patio is a little more complicated than backing a cement mixer up near the back door and pushing the "pour" button. Planning a new patio is just like planning a new room — the object is to get as much return as possible for the investment.

To make an outdoor room pay dividends in hours of pleasant open-air lounging, dining, reading or sunning, walk over the most likely site with compass in hand to determine the exposure.

An ideal angle captures morning sun for systematic tanning and healthy container gardening on deck or patio, then becomes a haven of shade on hot afternoons for cool dining or relaxing.

If the site isn't perfect, and few are, then stack the deck with environment controlling screens and sunshades to offset nature's deficiencies.

One family recently visited built its patio in the area between house and garage. Dimensions were right and location was central, accessible from all critical areas: kitchen, dining room, garden, side yard and garage.

Closeness to the two main structures lends a sheltered feeling but still the spot was subject to prevailing winds and strong sunshine.

To created needed cover, corrugated plastic roofing panels were fastened to a framework of 2x6-inch Douglas fir stringers over 4x4-inch posts on 2x8-inch beams spanning the patio from house to garage.

The attractive wood and plastic theme set by the roof continues in a side wall facing northern exposure. Sixteen rectangular opaque panels form a neat four-row pattern in light-stained 1x2-inch fir framing.

Translucent panels admit light but block the wind and effectively screen a neighboring yard. Clean framing lines which repeat the spacing of roofing stringers add balance and continuity to the design.

Design year 'round oriental garden

Maybe you've always wanted an Oriental garden for your very own.

Don't waste time wanting.

Build one yourself. Build it to enjoy the whole year 'round.

You can begin by looking for any unused corner space that isn't earning its keep. This could be an outside corner of the house, or inside on one end of an enclosed porch; in a corner of a large living room; a family room, or, just anywhere.

The outside-inside garden story can start by using a reproduction of one of nature's oldest materials. Stone. The stones shown here are modern, man-made tricksters which feel no shame in fooling people.

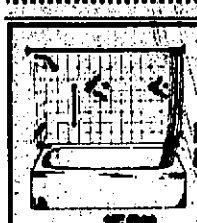

Called Dacor Stones and made by Dacor Manufacturing Co., Inc., they are a lightweight polyester product with the look and feel of nature's own gift to man.

Because stones are lightweight, even a novice do-it-yourselfer can handle them easily. They go up on any clean, solid surface; are non-porous so dirt won't seep in, and come clean with the swoosh of a damp cloth.

In addition to the outdoorish wall and floor treatment, note how seating area is covered with these easy-on stone charmers. Special corner stones fit neatly over corner edges.

Interior designer Peggy Walker planned this timeless garden corner using pillows and other accessories in subtle oriental colors of greens, yellows, red-browns, red and black. Plants, ferns and a graceful young tree add more color and beauty.

Indoor-outdoor carpet in palm green gives liveliness and more clean-casiness.

Indoor-outdoor scene secluded

Do-it-yourself project:

It's a well-known fact that good breakfasts make better days. It's also true that an old-fashioned breakfast room can be a great place to start each day.

With plenty of light, a cheerful outlook and space for the whole family to sit down together, you'll feel the difference, whether you wake brisk and chipper or rely on steam from that first cup of coffee to unseal your eyelids.

When one family with four teenagers and a communal breakfast habit outgrew the kitchen nook and moved to the formal dining room for daily meals, all missed the casual note in the morning ritual.

In their case the family eating area was restored when a wall adjoining the small side entry came out and that space was joined with the breakfast nook.

Another wall fell, visually, when sliding glass doors and a screened patio were added to give the new room delightful outdoor dimension.

Fencing of 1x2 cedar slats was jogged around three sides of the patio, creating a secluded setting for indoor and alfresco meals while blocking front yard exposure.

Comfortable slant-back benches around a permanent center table invite use. Seats are 2x4-inch cedar laid flat, backs are 2x4s and 2x8s bolted to the screen through wood triangles (cut from 2x8s), which rest on stringers.

The small patio is a constant pleasure for reasons as simple as ABC — accessibility, built-ins and complete privacy.

New labels, replacing ink, tells lumber type

Grade stamps on lumber may be mostly colorful paper labels a few years hence, replacing today's markings that are inked on with rubber stamps, sometimes illegibly.

Predicting this change is Western Wood Products Association, which conducts a quality control program for nearly 40 per cent of U.S. softwood lumber output.

An Idaho producer soon will be first to use the printed labels, reports WWPA, largest lumber trade group, which adds they'll be printed and applied under strict supervision.

Labels will be color-coded for the various grades of boards, framing and other sizes of lumber. To prevent fraudulent re-use on lower-grade items, they'll shred if removed.

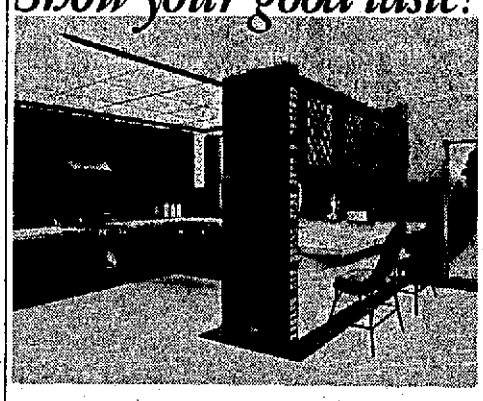

PROTECT YOUR INVESTMENT

A careful yearly examination of your home can prevent serious, costly termite work. The inspection is conducted by a California licensed structural pest control inspector. He carefully examines all structural members subject to damage by termites, beetles and dry rot. He checks for excess moisture from plumbing leaks which can lead to a serious dry rot problem. Yearly control service plan available.

Check wall before you use nails

Ever made the mistake of hammering a nail or driving a screw into an inside wall in your house for the purpose of hanging something?

Unless the nail or screw just happens to go into a stud in the wall, it's only a questions of time before it works itself loose. And down comes whatever was hanging on the fastener.

There are two reasons for the failure of the nail or screw to retain its holding power, assuming the wall, as most are, is either plaster or gypsum board. One is that the wall is hollow and so has only a limited grip on the fastener. The other is that the plaster or gypsum around the nail or screw begins to crumble when weight is applied.

If the object to be hung is light in weight, such as a small picture, you can get by with one of the adhesive-backed hangers which do not require that any hole be made in the wall. The strength of the wallpaper or paint on the wall determines the strength of the hanger, since if either pulls away it will take the hanger with it.

When much weight must be supported, such as cabinets, side shelves, mirrors and the like, it is imperative to use fasteners which will not give way. You will find various types of plastic, lead and fiber anchors which are placed into drilled holes in the wall. Screws are then driven into the anchors, a procedure which expands the anchors inside the wall, setting them firmly. The anchors come in different sizes; obviously, the larger sizes are meant for supporting heavier weights.

Sometimes it is necessary to know exactly how thick the wall is. Drill a hole in the wall where it won't be seen. Take a piece of wire and bend up one end to form a small hook. Insert the hooked end through the hole and jiggle it around until the hooked part catches the back of the wall. Hold it there and place a mark on the part of the wire that is even with the front of the wall. When you remove the wire, the distance from the point of the hook to the mark will tell you how wide the wall is.

Masonry easy for you

Need to repave your driveway? Install a patio? Construct a garden walk or wall?

You can do it yourself. It really isn't difficult as you may have imagined. Working in concrete and masonry is relatively simple — if you have the knowhow.

And in a new book, "Easy Things to Make with Concrete and Masonry", author Richard Day provides all the information you'll need.

Starting with rock-bottom basics, Day explains what raw materials and tools are required, methods for good mixing, when to use pre-mixed concrete, how to build concrete forms and how to lay brick, block and stone. Each project in the book is illustrated with photographs, scale plans and drawings. The directions are clear and include sound advice on avoiding problems.

Day's projects range from constructing a simple barbecue to installing a swimming pool (a considerably more advanced project.) He offers ideas for a number of different walks and driveways as well as fences and walls.

Here are instructions for casting decorative pieces, tables, planters and birdbaths. There are also instructions for making both brick and concrete patios. And the wide variety of finishes, effects, colors and textures available are explored in detail.

Stretch hours of outdoor recreation

For lighting steps, pathways and borders there are a wide variety of outdoor and garden lighting fixtures available. Fixtures can be of the portable type with cord, plug and ground spike or wired for connection through a junction box to the underground cable.

Depending on the size of the fixture and what its lighting function will be, light bulbs will vary in size from 10 to 100 watts. Select fixtures, especially those for use at steps and walks, which have no annoying bright glass or plastic parts since glare can hamper vision.

Lighting of trees, shrubbery, walls and fences can be done by locating fixtures on the ground and aiming them upward. To maintain an unbroken expanse of lawn, place fixtures either partially or entirely below ground.

To produce a dimensional shape, rather than a flat appearance, direct two or more uplights at an angle on the feature being lighted.

There are also lighting fixtures that can be used for accent lighting of statuary, reflecting pools, small trees, flowers, tables and umbrellas. Small scale fixtures using 30 or 50-watt reflector bulbs can be used for up or down accent lighting.

Another important use of outdoor lighting is for the safety and security of your home and surroundings.

Post lamps or surface-mounted lanterns on either side of the front door will provide sufficient light to identify callers and also help light the front step so callers will not trip or slip. You can also use recessed units in the ceiling or roof overhang.

Adjustable, weather-resistant floodlamps mounted high on the eaves of your house, or on tall trees will give broad illumination to the entire property.

Lighting can brighten your out-of-doors just as it does the inside of your house. Well-planned outdoor lighting can not only make your home and yard a thing of beauty, but it can also provide safe passage for friends and neighbors as they come to call, to perhaps borrow a cup of sugar, or enjoy with you a warm evening on your patio, in your backyard, or around the pool.

When you light the outdoors around your home you do many things: reveal the beauty of the trees, bushes and gardens; expand the hospitality and comfort of your patio or porch; stretch the hours of outdoor recreation; and at the same time provide visibility to guard against an accident.

For outdoor lighting, start with the fixtures. They range in design from strictly functional types to those which are truly works of art, with in-between models to satisfy any outdoor lighting need.

Generally, fixtures are made of aluminum, brass, steel, copper or bronze. Select fixtures of sturdy construction and good fin-

Indoor greenhouse adds touch of outdoor beauty

Bringing the beauty of blooming plants indoors for all seasons also can solve the problems of a picture window without a view, simply by adding a lean-to conservatory.

Choosing an area with a large window or a door for this addition also reduces the amount of framing that has to be removed.

A prefabricated lean-to greenhouse can be added by the handyman, or a simple frame of 4x4 and 2x4-inch wood will hold double-pane wood windows. In mild climates, single pane glass will do.

Platforms of 2x4-inch wood, slightly spaced for ventilation, allow variety in arrangements, while other plants may be hung from the 4x4-inch window supports.

Folding French doors may be added for better temperature and humidity control. A floor sloped to an inconspicuous drain makes misting and watering of plants easier.

Divider can add storage plus - - -

Open plan interior design and wide window walls compound the home storage problem, as closet opportunities become fewer.

The solution often is a free-standing unit, such as a double-access divider in the kitchen-dining area.

Framed with 2x4-inch western fir or spruce, this unit is a series of cabinets above and below a serving-work counter on both sides. Two center doors match those of the cabinets, but open to provide a pass-through.

The same approach in an entry area offers family and guest coat storage at the door, and a home entertainment center on the living room side.

The cabinet doors can be built of stained or painted board paneling, trimmed with frames of wood molding, or faced with other material to match room decor.

Boy's room doesn't have to look messy

Sometimes a boy's room appears to be beyond improvement!. Yet, any room can be given an effective face-lifting, especially if advance planning is done.

A small room can be given an uplift with a new interior treatment tucking convertible beds into the corner. This opens up the center of the room and allows the youngster to use it as an informal spot to visit with friends while watching TV or listening to records.

To create a feeling of spaciousness, textured planks can be alternated on the main wall. Wallboard adhesive and concealed metal clips are used to secure a strong bond right over the old walls.

Only an occasional washing is needed to keep the prefinished hardboard paneling looking like new.

Note, too, a new window treatment can be blended into the overall decor.

Movable deck pads dress courtyard, entry

Entry courtyard features movable deck pads . . . each six feet square. Laid in herringbone pattern, can be listed and re-arranged. Courtyard is shielded by fence on property line, screen by entry. Raised planter box, shrubs, graveled areas assure easy maintenance.

Moldings can bring richness to the kitchen, other rooms

The richness of wood moldings helps transform a drab, older kitchen into a bright, gracious area, creating a pleasant environment in which to prepare the day's meals.

Many kitchens past their prime don't need major remodeling, just a facelifting, and that brings a project within the limits of many more budgets.

Drawers and cabinet doors take on a new look with added frames of wood molding set in slightly from the perimeter of the door or drawer face. Moldings are available in dozens of patterns at home building supply centers.

Larger wood molding frames carried over to walls and ceilings of the kitchen lend a custom-finished appearance. Color can be introduced by using patterned wallpaper behind the frames or by painting the molding a contrasting color.

Other areas of the house gain beauty through applications of moldings in new and different ways. The mood or decorating theme of a house can begin in the entry way with solid wood molding on walls or ceilings.

For example, a chair rail used with other patterns below gives the wainscoting effect now enjoying renewed popularity. This treatment can be continued on stairways, to provide a distinctive focal point.

A formal air may be achieved in a dining room with wall panel designs repeated above and below the chair rail, and a ceiling decorated with stock moldings.

Flush doors can be brightened with wood moldings. For a decorator touch, these moldings can be painted a slightly lighter or darker shade of the door's color.

Display case lights entry

Brightening a dark entry while flattering a favorite collection is the dual role of a lighted display case attached to a wall.

The frame is of 1x8-inch wood such as pine. Grooves in side boards hold a one-eighth-inch translucent plastic sheet, set behind 1x4-inch shelves.

Two fluorescent tubes are mounted behind the plastic to supply back-lighting for displayed items and to lighten the entry.

Carpet tiles are easy do-it-yourself project

Carpet tiles are squares of carpet with their own built-in backing of foam rubber. They are installed like ordinary tiles, but they give you a soft pile fabric underfoot like broadloom. You save the cost of installation and you do not need a separate underlay thanks to the backing. The tiles come with shag or smooth surface piles.

Only simple tools are necessary to install carpet tiles. Your tool kit should include a razor blade knife and spare blades, a yardstick and a cutting board. You may also need some carpet metal or double-faced tape to use in doorways. If the tiles you choose are not prepasted, you will also need an adhesive, or additional double-faced tape.

When you begin to install tiles, start by making sure your floor is perfectly clean. Then, find the center of your room by measuring its length and width, and drop a chalk line through the middle of both, bisecting at the center.

Arrange your carpet tiles along the chalk lines, making sure that the border tile, the one that fits against the wall, is trimmed to an approximate even width on each side. You can easily cut the bordering tiles to size with the razor blade knife. Use a cutting board and a straight edge when trimming the files for best results.

After you have gotten the measurement of the border tiles, it's very simple to fill in the rest of the floor.

If you are using the self-adhesive tiles, simply press them into place. Those without the self-sticking backing can be put down with an adhesive spray or double-faced tape.

On the exposed edges of carpet — those in doorways particularly you may wish to further secure the carpet tiles with metal or tape. Either will protect the carpet against popping up or becoming unravelled.

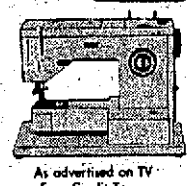

Tape, adhesive, or carpet metal strips can be purchased in most carpet stores.

Sewing center simple to add

Because sewing centers are compact, one can be added wherever it's handiest for the user — in a family room utility area or bedroom.

A wide closet can be converted, or a corner of the room or end of a hallway can be framed in to hold sewing table and storage.

Folding louver doors enclose the work area neatly between work sessions, and require little clear area for closing.

How's your power tool I.Q.?

Millions of power tools are in use across our land as never before helping America's homeowners in countless ways. But with this growing usage comes concern on the part of manufacturers as to the proper, safer operation of these tools.

What do you really know about your power tools? Are they using you? Test your acuity in these ten questions prepared by the experts of the Power Tool Institute, Inc. (PTI).

Grades for each question are indicated in parenthesis. Rate yourself severely. Only a perfect score indicates a safe power tool operator. 85-95 means you're only near perfect and open to the possibility of an injury causing accident.

Below 85 — well, good luck to anyone near you when you're using your power tool and good luck to you, too. You'd better read or re-read your owner's manual.

TRUE OR FALSE:

1. If tool is equipped with a three-prong plug, clip off third prong and plug in tool. (10)
2. If bystanders are near work area, stand them behind you. (10)
3. When operating table saw in your business suit, throw tie over your shoulder. (5)
4. If ground is damp, wear rubber-soled footwear for safety when using tool. (15)
5. Your own eyeglasses are adequate protection for cutting small stock. (5)
6. Remove adjusting keys and wrenches from tool before starting work. (10)
7. Never use a push stick on a table saw. (10)
8. Be sure to sweep all work scraps from saw table onto floor prior to operating the tool. (10)
9. Make sure your ladder is on solid footing before climbing up and using power sander to remove old paint from house siding. (15)
10. You should disconnect power tool when not in use. (10)

ANSWERS:

1. FALSE — never remove third prong. It is the ground to prevent electrical discharge. Use an adapter for two-prong receptacle and attach adapter wire to a known ground.
2. FALSE — never allow any onlookers near the work area.
3. FALSE — your tie or any other loose clothing, jewelry, etc. is not the proper dress for a workshop.
4. FALSE — although rubber-soled footwear is advisable for work with power tools, never operate a power tool in damp or wet areas.
5. FALSE — safety glasses are the proper eye protection when using power tools.
6. TRUE — form habit of checking to see that keys and wrenches are removed from tool before beginning use.
7. FALSE — the use of a safety push stick is recommended for cutting short pieces and for finishing cuts on long pieces of stock.
8. FALSE — sweep all work scraps from area entirely. Loose scraps could mean loss of footing.
9. TRUE — yes, your ladder should be on a solid footing, and positioned so that it will not slip when you climb it.
10. TRUE — there are countless ways the tool could be activated accidentally.

Look around for ideas if you need more storage

Extra storage locations, in demand by most families, may be sitting idle around the house waiting to be discovered.

If there's a recessed area in the living room or family room, it can be framed with 1x2-inch wood, shelves can be installed, and the unit enclosed with folding louvered wood doors.

When there isn't room for a full size closet in an entry, addition of a tall, thin closet will provide stowaway space for card tables, ironing board, skis and similar items.

Often, there's just "no place" for laundry equipment, but a sharp look may find space in the master bathroom for a combination or stacked washer and dryer.

Hidden behind louvered doors, the laundry will blend into the decor. If it's been moved from garage or basement, new storage will become available there.

Shades of enjoyment for outdoor summer haven

The trouble with a parklike yard is that the average citizen can't call the Park Department to come out and mow it.

Effective yard planning allows for gardening, games and outdoor entertaining while holding down upkeep time and costs.

Sunny, well-drained areas should be set aside for garden, and lawn planted at a distance where lively games of badminton, croquet or tag will not echo through the house.

Space nearest the house might be reserved for a roomy patio or deck where the family can enjoy open-air dining or entertain friends. Plantings and an arbor or two will make the area cool and livable during day and evening hours.

Decking works especially well for garden living because wood is completely compatible with plant materials. Existing beds or trees can form a pleasant scheme of cut-outs, color highlighting the deck.

A practical decking species is fir, for strength and availability. It wears and weathers well and its medium tone takes a full range of stain colors for coordinating house and garden decor.

Surface pattern of boards is entirely optional but can be used to suggest a longer or wider area if the deck must be a dull square. Parquet blocks are eye-catching and easy to do by pre-cutting and nailing boards in modules before laying and toenailing them together.

An arbor can widen walk to front entry

If first impressions mean so much in relationships, what does your entry say to visiting friends and family? If a blank stare looks out where a welcome is called for, it may take a heap of interior decorating to offset that lifeless greeting.

When this is the case, as it recently was in one suburban home due for a face-listing, enlarging on the existing scheme may be an excellent way to get started and keep the project within the scope of a do-it-yourself crew.

With no porch, just a straight and narrow path from the driveway to the front door, the entry was definitely flat and uninviting. A merely perfunctory overhang caused more dripping than cover in wet weather. But simple remedy proved notably effective.

Retaining the convenient path was practical, considering the cost of alternatives. Widening it to allow two people to walk without a balancing act also added much needed visual dimension.

Solid roofing built out from the original keeps the walkway dry, and a parallel arbor of spaced 2x2-inch cedar (which may, but need not be attached underneath) lightens the effect. An evergreen vine, such as the clematis armandii, is an attractive planting choice, blooming spectacularly in spring and requiring little care but pruning after a good start.

Extending the arbor over 4x4-inch posts sunk outside the walk emphasizes the entry on the house front, improving proportion.

To solve a third problem, lack of a window near the entry to lend a glimpse of the welcome within, a door may be selected to suggest the warmth and personality of the interior.

Whether painted, antiqued, or finished with a rich stain, a hand- carved wood door enlivens any siding pattern. Stock carved doors of fir or hemlock are available too, in a surprising variety of elegant patterns — at reasonable prices, thanks to improved machine carving techniques.

Focus on innovations with a screen of horizontal 2x2-inch cedar, built out from a post supporting an arbor. It's the perfect background for a planter garden or wood carving to complement that new door.

Remodeling creates sheltered entry on porchless home. New 4x4-inch posts sunk outside narrow front walk support arbor of 2x2s, extending roof overhang. Along end wall, screen of spaced horizontal 2x2s frames entry, adds lattice-like background for plantings.

Recycle an older house

In these days of escalating prices, young families are discovering good buys by "recycling" older homes, saving added dollars by doing much of the remodeling themselves.

New walls of paneling are the answer to cracked, out-of-plumb plastered walls. Furring strips for paneling can be attached directly over the old walls.

Older homes often have basements and attics with space for an extra bedroom or family room. Decks and benches of fir cover cracked concrete patios and provide outdoor living areas.

Enrich house with book wall

A library wall adds both utility and character to a room.

Shelves of books ease the formality of living or dining rooms and serve as a sound barrier on walls adjoining kitchen or laundry room.

Library walls also provide attractive display areas for small art objects or cut flowers, and hold record changers and other sound equipment.

Shelves are built easily of western wood boards, and many imaginative variations are possible for supports and combinations of other materials, such as bricks. The boards can be painted or stained readily to blend into the room.

Mini-desk

A rectangular box of 1x12-inch pine boards with fold-down door makes a convenient wall-hung desk for kitchen or family room.

A deck is tops for the sloping yard—

Small pleasant deck of 2x2-inch fir rests on posts above sloping yard, screened by tall sections of 1x1s on 4x4-inch and double 2x4-inch posts. Planter and rail form third wall of outdoor sitting room; steps lead down to garden.

Living on a hill can be a mixed blessing, particularly in a traditional style home. The wide sweeping lawn, so gracious an approach, may be just a slope out back that puts yard activities on a slant — not the best angle for action.

One way to get lawn chairs and picnic table on level ground is to turn the slope into an asset by developing a series of level areas connected by steps.

The number of levels depends on the extent of the grade and the owner's imagination. First step might be an outdoor sitting room, with stairs leading down through a terraced garden to an activity deck below.

Concrete retaining walls and landfill are a common means of holding on to a hill, but they seem a bit cold and staid in a colonial setting.

Decks offer a natural and versatile medium, built on posts over uneven ground without additional fill. Open space below allows for good drainage arrangements, too, often a problem for hill-dwellers.

Two by two-inch fir over 4x4-inch and double 2x4-inch posts creates a more formal look than wide boards, suits the traditional mood especially well when stained to harmonize with house trim.

As a precaution, posts to be set directly in or on concrete or the ground itself should first be treated with a decay-preventing preservative such as pentachlorophenol, either commercially or at home.

Codes in many areas require safety railings around a deck four feet or more off the ground. Their usefulness can be doubled by building-in sections of bench seating or edging the deck with a long planter. Brightening the view with a bank of flowers also ties the upper level to the landscaping theme below.

Where close neighbors overlook the sitting deck, strategic fencing assures the privacy of the family and adds protection from wind and weather in changing seasons.

Vertical fir 1x1s, repeating the close-patterned example of the decking, form neat screening over 2x4-inch and 4x4-inch posts, with sturdy 2x6 cap.

—and decks make a grand entry

More hillsides, both steep and slight, are becoming homesites. And people are loving the trend.

When they have a choice, they're passing up flat-land tracts with straight-on views of neighbors. And this is forcing builders to more ingenious site planning or to develop sloping land, which favors privacy and a view.

Small clearings in what natural areas remain yield irregular lots angled for the best view and sheltered exposures, plus privacy hard to achieve in waffle-grid subdivisions.

Natural siding such as cedar well suits semi-wooded areas, and any number of light, semi-clear shades of stains blend with these surroundings.

One popular plan puts a house below grade with drive-up access to garage or carport, and a flight of stairs down to living level. This secludes the home from street view while back windows open onto a private downhill vista.

To reinforce their hillside and improve the view from the street, ("our house appears to sink below the horizon!"), one family decided to build a strategic deck where a tiny lawn struggled in too much shade.

Retaining walls were erected to prevent washouts and edge the deck area. Plantings for a rockery and bank garden further secured the soil.

Roofing over the entry was extended to cover the walkway full-length. Meant to be practical, this also serves to link house front with the street above, adding visual interest with no sacrifice of privacy.

Laid parallel to the house, 2x3-inch fir decking matches siding, and boards cut to progressively shorter lengths follow an interesting curve in the bank, rather than a blunt, cut edge. The semi-circle of decking is gracefully filled by patio table and chairs.

Decking seems to hold the bank at length, countering the closed-in feeling which formerly spoiled the dining room view. The same warm gold stain for both emphasizes the deck as an extension of the house — a much-used extension during the season of open-air entertaining.

Leftover 2x3s, treated, were used to build decorative planters for either side of the entry walk. Casters roll to take advantage of sunny spots on a basically shady deck.

Window seat adds storage

A storage window seat added in a youngster's room provides a well-lighted place to sit and read, or just daydream as many do.

A simple box framing of 2x4-inch wood 18 inches deep will hold several drawers or a large cabinet for storage below the seat.

Extending the unit a foot on each side of the window allows addition of bookshelves on each side, reaching from seat to ceiling.

Book aids in growing vegetables

There is no taste like the delicate sweetness of corn picked a few minutes before boiling it, or a sun-ripened, succulent tomato right off the vine.

Home grown crops save money, garden-ripened fruits and vegetables taste better, and families eat more of these vitamin-rich foods when a supply is large and readily available. These reasons, plus the unequalled satisfaction of sowing, growing and harvesting crops, justify growing your own food.

The reason behind the difference in taste, texture and value of supermarket versus home grown produce is the fact that produce does not travel well. Yet it takes several days in transit from the farmer to the supermarket. Vegetables and fruits should be eaten right after picking to capture their peak of nutrition and flavor.

This spring many home gardeners will strive to improve the quality of produce by setting out with spade and hoe to cultivate their own vegetable patch.

"How to Grow Your Own Vegetables", written by Michael Kressy for Creative Home Library in association with Better Homes and Gardens, was published just in time to meet the need when more homeowners than ever before are searching their lawns for a garden plot.

High fashion hits the floor

The do-it-yourselfer can customize his tile floor by using two colors to achieve geometric effect.

A revolution of style and economy has hit the floor tile industry.

The do-it-yourselfer no longer has to settle for second best when it comes to highly-styled, quality flooring. With the array of patterns now available in low-cost, vinyl-asbestos tile, the luxury of high fashion underfoot is within reach of every pocketbook.

The tired old checkerboard patterns and uninspiring colors that once characterized tile flooring have vanished. In their place have emerged dozens of exciting new visuals aimed at the fashion-conscious homeowner.

New designs stress color, pattern and texture, while deemphasizing the individual tiles themselves. So skillfully concealed are today's tile seams that it's difficult to distinguish the finished job from a professionally installed sheet floor.

Current trends in home decorating indicate a wide appeal for natural materials. Anticipating this, tile manufacturers have been able to simulate many of nature's own designs.

Armstrong, for example, offers patterns with the look of marble, brick, slate, wood, ceramics and stone. These new tile floors achieve a high degree of realism, thanks to improved manufacturing processes.

Whether the homeowner prefers traditional or modern decor, the wide variety of tile floors allows free expression of personal taste. Tile floors make a good background for area rugs, whether they be costly Orientals or bold modern styles.

Certa-nly one of the key advantages of tile is its economy. Vinyl-asbestos flooring for an average 12-foot x 15-foot room can cost as little as $60. And since you do the work yourself, there's no added expense for labor. This improved value allows you to spend more money on furnishings and accessories.

Tile floors are easy to install. A few cartons of material, adhesive and an investment of several hours of free time are all it takes. Recently, installation has been made even easier by the development of new techniques such as one that permits new tile to be installed directly over existing tile or sheet floors.

The core of this system is a clear adhesive which can be spread directly over securely-bonded and properly-prepared old resilient floors. This adhesive, when correctly applied, permanently bonds the new tile to the old floor, eliminating the mess and expense of removing the old material.

Modern tile floors can be used in family rooms, kitchens, baths, basements — in fact any room where beauty and practicality count.

Backyard fence leads double life

If you have double trouble — like there's nowhere to store the outdoor tools and your lot is overlooked by neighbors, here's a two-edged solution in the form of a storage fence for tools.

Height of a property line fence may be limited by the local building code, so the first step is to check that out at City Hall. Some codes allow only up to four feet, but nay permit more.

If the situation required a higher fence than the code prescribes, it's often possible to get a variance if there's no objection from the neighbors.

To win neighborhood approval as well as for your enjoyment the fence must be attractive.

You'll want to design it as an efficient storage unit, too. It should be wide enough to house the items you intend to store there. If they include large implements like power mowers and wheelbarrows, three feet is not too wide. Double doors will make it easy to move equipment in and out.

If it's meant merely to store smaller tools like rakes and shovels, a much narrower structure will suffice.

In a natural setting, unfinished tongue-and-groove fir or red cedar will blend with the landscape. Boards may be random width or of a uniform size.

Color-stained lumber will usually look better in an urban situation. It may be stained to match or accent the color of the house exterior.

Carport holds storage bonus

The decision to remodel an existing home or sell and move is always a painful one for a growing family, with costs weighed carefully for the better value of two alternatives.

If remodeling wins the toss, often a practical approach is to insulate and finish the interior of an attached garage, especially if there is a connecting enclosed hallway, wiring for electricity, and some nearness to the primary heat source for new ducting outlets.

With the family room or additional bedrooms on the drawing board, next step is replacement shelter for family cars and new storage for gardening, shop, and sports equipment.

Pure economics loads the argument in favor of a carport at this time, possibly a do-it-yourself project, which, with certain planned custom features, can be a quite livable replacement. Of course, before any plans are carried out, check with the local building department to vertify specific codes in your area.

Diagonals kindle casual decor . . .

It's been decided — the car is moving out and a family room, with great plans for parties, crafts projects and ping pong tournaments, is moving into the garage.

Tapping garage space gives the addition a financial heart start: foundation, framing, siding and roofing are in place. In this ready-made shell, finishing can follow a do-it-yourself pace with professional help called in as needed.

Before you start however, check with the building department at City Hall. There are codes, especially in Long Beach, that require off-street parking on your lot for family cars. If you don't have the additional room for a carport, this additional space idea may not be for you.

Whatever the budget, talk the proposed room out on paper early. Build in a measure of beauty so decor won't depend on expensive extras, paintings or bric-a-brac clutter.

Focus a plain plan with a paneled accent wall. Drama doubles with boards applied diagonally or in a herringbone pattern, and it's easy to follow installation advice available from any lumber or building materials dealer.

A knotty grade is less expensive than clear grain and sets a casual tone the family room will thrive on.

Cherish open space (remember the ping pong table), but don't skimp on storage or the special amenities that make it convenient and livable.

If you add a fireplace, brick by brick or a free-standing portable, plan enclosed double-access storage for a warm, dry wood supply. Before walls go up, install telephone and stereo speaker jacks. Build in some shallow shelves for stacks of paperbacks.

Leave lumber decking and beams exposed for a spacious, open ceiling which may not be possible elsewhere in the house. Brightening beams with paint connects them to a lively color scheme below.

Think convertible — it will be easier to live with afterward. That means lightweight furniture to arrange in a dizzy circle around the hearth or a wallflower line when the rug rolls up for dancing.

Pre-entry lock alarm developed for home

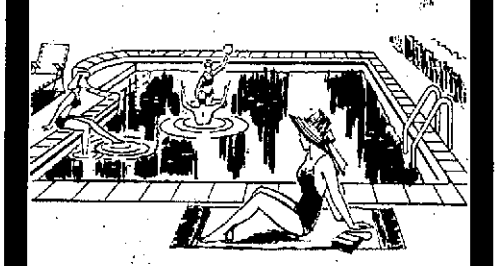

A new, versatile pre-entry lock alarm developed for patio and sliding glass doors, has been introduced by the 3M Company.

Called the 3M Outkeeper Lock Alarm, the unit features an electronic solid state sound module and speaker powered by four AA penlight batteries. Attempts to force the door result in a shrill, pulsating police-like siren.

Patio, camper, swinging and sliding doors are secured by a cylindrical steel bolt. This bolt rotates when hacksawing is attempted and activates the siren when pressure — from any direction — is applied to it.

The pre-entry patio door lock alarm system has been developed for home, boat, camper and office security. Other lock alarms in the line include high security door locks, some with a heavy duty dead bolt and locking chain.

Shelter stretches season for patio

When the weather turns warm and the air indoors seems stuffy and confining, most families head outdoors to work, play, and relax while the sun shines.

An open air life-style develops with the season, especially when entertaining moves outdoors and yardwork seconds housework as a prime concern.

Pick-up lunches and barbecue suppers multiply, for convenience and to take advantage of the coolest spot, the garden armoas. An innovation, the outdoor refreshment center has practical appeal when snacks and cold drinks are in demand.

It may be quite a simple project, a serving counter with cupboards below for tableware and barbecue accessories, but location is all-important.

A kitchen dining deck is a likely site, and if the counter is built out from the house wall, it may also serve as a divider between patio table and the busy area off the kitchen.

One home recently visited was beautifully geared to its active family with a plumbed-in serving bar off the dining patio — great for keeping guests outside for pre-dinner drinks or serving a buffet brunch.

A wet bar isn't essential but if a water line is accessible, a drain may be hidden under a wood deck. Not just for entertaining, this addition will eliminate a thirsty gardener's compost trail, or, if there's a backyard pool, keep drip dry swimmers out of the kitchen.

Built between house and garage, the counter has sides of 1x8-inch boards overlaid with 1x2-inch battens and stained cocoa brown to match cedar siding. A tall section at its open end forms a doorway to the service court beyond.

Quantities of ice are just steps away in a freezer in the garage, and food and drinks are shaded by an attractive beam construction formed of 2x8-inch planks on either side of a 2x6, with 2x4-inch cross pieces supporting a section of flat roofing.

Space seekers

More young house hunters are shopping for the most floor space for their money, costs being what they are, and figuring they can add storage, paneling, other amenities later.

Build a bench

Workbench for garage or basement is constructed easily of 4x4-inch legs, bolted together with 2x4-inch top and bottom bracing, two 2x12s for work surface.

Pick the perfect spot for a livable patio

Tall screen of 1x2-inch pine in 4x4-inch post framing sets off patio for brunches, afternoon snacks. Table top is 2x6-inch fir laid flat, on 4x4-inch legs. Bench seats are 2x-4inch fir on edge, backrests 2x2-inch fir. Screen blocks view of service area.

A sun-splashed patio offers a perfect setting for informal brunches, afternoon coffee klatches and supper parties.

With added lighting, this versatile outdoor living area even accomodates the spillover of large buffet dinner or cocktail parties.

Built-in benches for seating and a large table built of wood makes patio serving easier, but there are several factors to remember when adding an outdoor living area to a house.

Placing the patio at a far corner of the lot, where there may be lovely shade trees, should be resisted. For a fully useful living area, access should be from the house right onto the patio, not a long hike away.

The area should be accessible easily to the kitchen, but a door off the living or dining room will cut down guest traffic through the kitchen.

Orientation may be dictated by placement of the house on the lot, but generally in Southern California the most livable is on the south or west side of the house.

This offers earlier use in the spring and later in the fall. They're the hot sides in mid-summer but this may be tempered with sun screens or louvered shades.

One way to counter small or otherwise limited locations for a deck or patio is to be imaginative about the shape. A narrow strip across the back of the house or an ell-shaped area around a corner may be used or the entire backyard utilized, eliminating a lot of lawn care. A wood deck also puts a sloping lot to greater use.

One pleasant patio visited recently was set off with a screen of 1x2-inch slats nailed flat on a frame of 4x4-inch cedar posts. An ell-shaped bench was built along the screen and the house wall, using 2x4-inch fir, with an open back rest of four 2x2-inch fir strips.

The large patio table, also built of fir, has 4x4-inch post legs with 2x4- inch horizontal supports, topped with 2x6-inch fir boards laid flat.

Be first to pick tomatoes

Few gardening pleasures can match the enjoyment of being the first on the block to pick ripe tomatoes, and there's many a good gardener who feels he's a miserable failure if he doesn't pick his first sun-ripened tomato by July 4.

Choosing the right varieties is important, since tomatoes are generally classified as early, mid-season, or late.

When buying seed, read the color packet or the catalog description to see how many days are required to reach maturity. An early variety will average 60 days from setting out foot-high plants — and that means starting the seed indoors another 45 days ahead of transplanting to get the required size plants — perferably with flowers already blooming.

Hybrids will also give you a better chance of reaching that early-ripening date, since they have stronger vigor and greater productivity.

Another booster is to use black plastic as mulch. It keeps the soil warm, maintains an even soil temperature. It also conserves the water and keeps down weeds. Once you've tried black plastic you'll never raise tomatoes without it.

A fertile soil is another must, and a general-purpose fertilizer should be applied at least twice during the growing season — when the plants are first set outside; and when the fruit has started to form.

Disease-resistant tomatoes are also more likely to produce early results, and these are identified by the initials, VF, meaning Verticillium and Fusarium Wilt resistant, the most common tomato diseases.

Follow these guidelines, and there's a good chance you will be the first on your block to pick ripe fruit.

ish so they'll withstand all types of weather.

Large areas such as the patio, terrace, flower bed, driveway or lawn can be illuminated by fixtures hung from tree branches or attached to the trunk.

Others are designed to be placed at ground level or mounted on the house. Use 60 to 150-watt bulbs. Fixtures should be placed at ground level on a scale and design so as to spread light patterns over an area 20 feet or greater in diameter. They should be from 30 to 65 inches tall with shade diameters 15 to 23 inches.

A swimming pool or other possible outdoor hazards should be clearly illuminated (see photo).

Any enclosed passageway adjacent to your house tends to be a favorite hangout for prowlers. Discourage them by installing lights of no less than 60 watts every ten feet.

The garage is another place intruders like to hide in. Have at least a 100-watt bulb on each side of a one-car garage, or three lights for a two-car garage.

According to the Electric Energy Association, these are only some of a multitude of tips to help you put outdoor lighting to good use. Though some people do install outdoor lighting themselves you're wise to use a qualified installer of outdoor lighting.

You can also check with the local electric utility for recommendations on the best way to plan your outdoor lighting so you'll be as proud and secure about your outdoor areas as you are of the inside of your home.

Tree rose excellent anywhere

To many people, all roses belong in just one outdoor area — the rose garden. Actually, that is not true of any rose, particularly specialized types such as the tree rose.

Tree roses are an elegant, man-made form, comprising generally the root of one species, the trunk of standard of another, and the top of any one of the gorgeous modern rose hybrids.

While tree roses do add greatly as accent points in a rose garden, they are equally at home and appropriately serve the same purpose in many other areas of the home grounds — along the drive or a walk, particularly with low evergreens planted around their bases, to accent terraces or steps, entrance areas, in fact almost anywhere a tall, formal, elegant plant will add to the beauty and design of the area.

Let house set style

Choice of wood siding material and applications for a house should depend on size and design of the particular model.

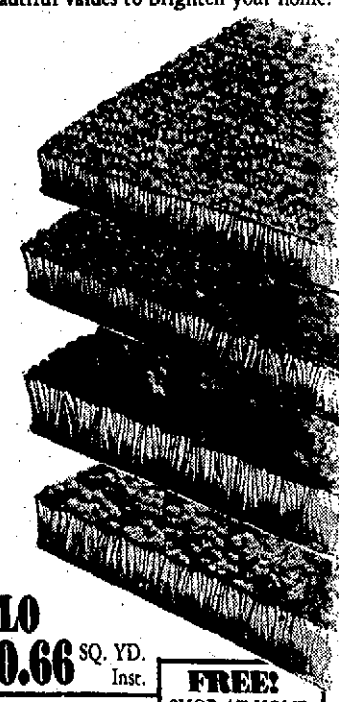

Single-story homes are most effective with vertical sidings, although horizontal sidings can be used to emphasize low, sweeping lines.

Horizontal lap siding deemphasizes verticals in two-story designs, and split-levels look best in horizontal clapboard coverings.

Growth rate curves are shown through the full twelve months. In lower half, note the season changes in the hours and temperatures.

Time lawn care to season

The home gardener is aware of the relationship between plant performance and seasonal change. But the real importance of this for lawn beauty and easier maintenance is often not understood. Fertilizing, weed and insect control, watering and sometimes even mowing are involved.

Cool-season grasses include the blue grasses, fescues, bents and ryes of many varieties. Seed packages in your nursery usually contain a blend of many of these seeds. The growth curve in the chart above shows an upward surge in the spring and fall and a typical decline in hot weather.

There can be difficulty with some of these grasses during the summer in Southern California. High nitrogen fertilization at this time can be very damaging.

The mighty bermuda and the much more shade tolerant St. Augustine are our usual warm-season grasses. Zoysia is planted less frequently here. Again, more than minimum fertilization in hot weather is not a particularly good practice.

As shown in the chart, there is good growth at this time. Consequently the stimulus of fertilizer merely means more mowing than is desirable unless the home gardener wants good, healthy exercise. Supplying nutrients in early or mid-spring, however, helps recovery from winter dormancy. Fall fertilization services to maintain color longer into the winter season.

A glance at the chart confirms that April and May are ideal months for planting warm-season grasses and dichondra. Seed germination is disappointedly slow with earlier planting because of low temperatures. At a later and hotter time of the year there will be the extra labor of more frequent light waterings to keep the seed bed moist, but the results will be much more rapid.

FOR YOUR PORCH

Let's pot-up some color

The plant population explosion is being heard throughout the land. In Southern California, where favorable weather and an unsurpassed variety of plant materials make this a year-round phenomenon, more and more Californians are into growing color in containers.

Interest in plants, today, is phenomenal and carries over into the featuring of flowering favorites in containers. A fun and challenging experience is to shop for a discover unique or extraordinary container, or contemporary contrivance in which to showcase the beauty of plants.

Equally exciting an adventure is to come up with combinations that reflect a creative flair. Happily, there is no lack of containers or color bearers to provide spring and summertime enjoyment. The possibilities are limited only by one's imagination.

Growing Ivy Geraniums is a moss-lined wire basket is hardly an innovation. But, combining Dwarf Marigolds with the Geraniums, and adding white Alyssum for accent — implanted on the sides of the basket — produces a refreshing creation. This can be suspended as a delightful hanging basket on the porch or patio.

Oval earthenware containers have pockets for planting small-growing plants — similar to Strawberry Jars. Create a decorative accessory by tucking-in tiny Zinnias. There are Thumbelinas, Peter Pan and Button types to use in small pots or in containers with limited space. And, the creation will dazzle onlookers into fall. Zinnias are excellent choices, too, for gaily-decorating Mexican pottery planters.

Petunias are favorite summer flowers and the individual members of this huge family lend themselves to growing in containers. The large single-flowering types cascade beautifully from hanging baskets, or over the brim of a large tub. Feature carnation-flowering and double Petunias in small pots for up-close enjoyment.

Standbys for any sunny deck are pots of yellow or white Marguerites. Nurseries will have various sizes available, along with ready-to-enjoy pots of Coleus, basket-type Fuchsias and Tuberous Begonias.

Offbeat vegetables can become family favorites

One of the delights of gardening is to discover an offbeat vegetable that becomes the favorite of the whole family.

There are lots around, and since you'll never find them in the supermarket produce counter, the only way to enjoy them is to grow your own.

Rhubarb chard, for example, is the kind of unusual vegetable that's easy to grow, and makes a delicious change on the dinner menu. The thick, succulent stalks are a bright crimson, and the leaves are a dark, nutritious green. Healthy and full of vitamins, the leaves can be cooked like spinach, and the stalks served like asparagus.

Everyone knows there are green-podded beans and yellow-podded beans, but did you know there's a purple-podded variety?

Called Royalty, there's more reason to grow it than just its unusual color. First, it's considered by many bean experts as the best flavored of all bush beans; second, bean beatles seem to avoid it; third, it is the best bush bean variety for freezing; fourth, it is a source of fascination among children since the purple color miraculously disappears as soon as the beans are added to boiling water, and the beans turn a beautiful green.

Yellow peppers, yellow beets and yellow pear tomatoes make a change from the usual. Yellow peppers are smooth, crisp and sweet, growing just as big and blocky as the red varieties.

Yellow pear tomatoes are fine in salads, or as a cocktail snack, and they make good preserves and pickles. Yellow or golden beets are sweeter than the red, they don't bleed like a red beet, and the tops are tastier served as cooked "greens."

A topnotch producer anywhere, Patio Pik Cucumber is especially good where land is at a premium. Thrives in tubs as any well-lighted area, delivers cukes ideal for pickling.

Plant food by the spoonfull

A new plant food is being introduced by 3M Company which releases liquid nutrient over a three to four month period — thus ending the never-ending feeding of house and garden plants.

"Precise" Timed Release Plant Food, an all-purpose plant nutrient encapsulated in a biodegradable shell, releases liquid nutrient through microscopic pores in the capsule walls.

The plant food can be applied as a top dressing directly from the container or may be mixed in with the soil. Typical application is a tablespoonful for each six-inch flower pot, or two or three tablespoons per square foot for outdoor use. Plants are provided with a balanced supply of primary nutrients as long as the soil is moist.

The controlled release nutrient (12 per cent nitrogen, 6 per cent phosphorus, 6 per cent potassium) is recommended for essentially all household and garden plants. It gives a deeper green color to plant foilage and allows the plant to grow larger and more numerous flowers.

Start early for pretty Snapdragons

For a magnificent display of snapdragons the most important rule is "start seed early." In most areas that means the seed should have been planted the early part of March in order to have good size plants to transfer into your garden early this month.

Snapdragon seed is tiny, and a packet will produce hundreds of plants. Sensational in the garden, they are even more beautiful indoors as a tapering cut flower for graceful flower arrangements.

In recent years, hybridizing has produced some spectacular new varieties. They are vigorous and produce long spikes up to 3 feet tall with as many as 100 flowers and buds on a single stem.

Even newer forms of snapdragons are the Butterfly and Bellflower varieties. These have flared wide-open throats instead of the tight-lipped flowers more common among snapdragons. They look especially lovely in flower arrangements.

Finally, there are dwarf bedding snapdragons. These are fine for creating a low-growing "carpet of color" in a garden landscape. The Floral Carpet strain from Japan grows only 6 to 7 inches tall, each plant producing up to 25 tiny 3 inch spikes.

All-American Rose Selections for 1973

Seldom have three new roses received more favorable comment than the trio of tea roses which swept the All American Rose Selections awards this year.

The three winners are entirely different in color and each has its own individual and each has its own individual outstanding for it an award over many competitors gathered in from around the world.

It is a tribute to the outstanding abilities of American hybridizers that two of the three winners were bred and borne in this country.

Medallion has by far the largest individual blooms of the three, reaching, in some areas, the huge diameter of seven to eight inches. The very broad, heavy 35 petals making up the bloom are a distinct soft apricot-pink, varying in intensity with the weather, but always maintaining their pleasing pastel shadings.

The vigorous, erect, well-branched, four to six foot plants, thickly set with their enormous blooms, will attract a great deal of attention, not only because of the size and distinct coloring of the flowers, but because the plant itself is attractive.

Well-clothed, with oval-shaped light green leaves, it is a prolific bearer of bloom. This is somewhat surprising for a variety with such large blossoms, but as many as 45 roses have actually been counted at one time on a single plant.

Medallion blooms have a mild, subtle, fruity fragrance, and are borne usually individually on 12-18 inch stems. The shapely, two to three inch, long pointed buds open to roses that vary greatly in color with the season — delicate apricot-buff in the spring and summer, gradually deepening and adding pink until, in the fall weather, Medallion becomes definitely a distinct apricot-pink.

William Warriner of Tustin, director of research for the Jackson & Perkins Company, is the hybridizer of this new beauty, whose parents are South Seas and the golden Kings Ransom.

The plant of Medallion has good resistance to the rose diseases and is lightly thorned. The blooms last well on the plant, aging attractively and dropping cleanly.

Electronic Hybrid Tea

Gypsy, another award winner, bears its continuous bloom on a growing plant of average height. The classic, urn-shaped flower buds are roses of slightly cupped form. Their brilliant color is retained throughout the life of the bloom, regardless of weather. The roses have a light, spicy fragrance, over 36 petals, and are usually borne one bloom to a stem.

The foliage is large, leathery, glossy deep green, and has very good resistance to black spot and above average resistance to mildew and rust.

This winner comes from a lineage which explains her fiery brilliance and makes the name, Gypsy, most appropriate. The father is Comanche, a natural to bring the strong plant growth and the warmth of the orange tones. Gypsy's mother is a mixed breed of Happiness, Chrysler Imperial and El Capitan.

Here we have an unusual heritage of red shades, combining in a distinctive new, vivid scarlet. The vigor of Comanche and El Capitan join forces to give Gypsy an outstanding plant. The foliage has the color and density of Chrysler Imperial with the leathery texture of El Capitan. Bud and flower form get a hefty lift from Happiness and Chrysler Imperial, as do the lasting qualities.

Electron, having already won a long string of victories on the European continent, swept on through the trials to complete the trio of award winners.

Well it might, with its large, bright, rose-pink blooms that, on a dull day, seem to have a neon glow of their own to brighten them up.

The plants are vigorous, bushy, broad, and well-shaped with an abundance of dark green foliage. On this framework, the very large and very fragrant blooms are thickly set singly or in clusters, during the entire blooming season.

Electron gives every indication of becoming a most popular garden rose and should win many trophies in the exhibition halls as well.

Tips for the unusual in garden

Want a quick temporary hedge in your garden?

Kochia, or burning bush, is a fast growing foliage plant resembling an ornamental evergreen. But the remarkable advantage is that it can be easily grown from seed to form a lovely hedge three feet tall.

In fall, it turns red, and is killed by frost, but while it lasts, kochia makes a beautiful background for flowering annuals.

Young cactus plants regularly sell for a dollar each, but did you know that they are fun and easy-to-grow from seed, and a 50 cent package will grow dozens of different kinds?

Cactus like a sandy starting soil, and a little patience, since the seed is sometimes slow to germinate, but it's a fascinating sight to observe the baby cactus sprout perfectly formed from those tiny inexpensive seeds.

Do you know why seedsmen are breeding all-female cucumbers?

Because on a normal cucumber plant only half the flowers are females capable of producing fruit. On an all-female cucumber plant all the flowers can yield fruit. It just needs one normal cucumber plant to be grown near the all-female "harem" for pollination of the all-female flowers.

If you have space in your garden, then seedless watermelons are worth a try. They're a little more trouble to grow than regular watermelons, but well worth it, and once you've been successful you'll never want to try any other kind. They need starting indoors in a temperature of 70 degrees, and a normal watermelon must be grown nearby to ensure pollination.

Checklist for May

1. Deep watering encourages deep roots. After watering, dig down and see how far the moisture has penetrated.
2. Set-out annual flowers now for summer color. There are many to choose from, including Asters, Dwarf Dahlias, Petunias, Marigolds, Periwinkle, and Zinnias.
3. Feed Azaleas and Camellias this month with an acid type plant food. Water them frequently during warm weather.
4. For a distinctive accessory, grow a Dwarf Citrus in a redwood tub on the sunny porch or patio.
5. Set-out plants of tomatoes, eggplant, peppers and lettuce this month.

Get on good terms with gardening

By EDDIE KING

Gardening and landscaping, like other fields, have their own language. There would, otherwise, be hopeless confusion in a world of thousands of plants and complex soils, nutrients and growing conditions. The terms below are defined as briefly as possible, not alphabetically, but by relationship.

ANNUAL: A plant that completes its life cycle with in one year.

BIENNIAL: Growth only the first year. Blooms, sets seed and dies the following year.

PERENNIAL: Life span more than two years.

HERB: (1) Plant, pr part thereof, with medicinal, culinary or aromatic qualities. (2) Soft-tissued as compared to woody shrubs or trees. Despite a possible height of 20 feet or more, the banana is a perennial herb.

HERBACEOUS: (1) Soft-tissued. (2) Dies to ground, regrows each year.

DECIDUOUS: Shedding all leaves sometime during the year. Some plants are deciduous or evergreen depending on climate.

EVERGREEN: Foliage is shed gradually rather than at one time. Less accurately, the term is often used to refer only to plants such as juniper, pine, cypress and cedar with needlelike, narrow or scale-like leaves. (The bald cypress, however, is deciduous).

BROAD-LEAFED EVERGREEN: With leaves larger than those above.

BROAD-LEAFED WEEDS: All except grassy types.

TREE: Woody plant, usually with single trunk and elevated head.

SHRUB: Woody plant with stems from the base. While the above definitions are widely accepted, the distinction between shrub and tree is not always easily determined. Multiple-trunked tree seems an acceptable term.

PARASITE: Grows on and takes nourishment from another plant as dodder, mistletoe.

EPIPHYTE: Grows on another plant, but only for support. Many orchids.

PLEACHING: Pliable branches are woven together to form hedge or arbor.

POLLARDING: Drastic yearly shearing results in knobby stubs that regrow long shoots each spring. Most common with London plane trees.

Other terms include:

NUTRIENT: Any of 16 known chemical elements needed by plants. Carbon, hydrogen and oxygen are obtained from air and water.

PRIMARY NUTRIENTS: Nitrogen, phosphorous, potassium most needed by plants. Referred to as N, P, K. Usually labeled conspicuously.

BALANCED OR COMPLETE FERTILIZER.

SECONDARY NUTRIENT: Sulphur, calcium, magnesium. Usually enough in soils.

MICRONUTRIENT OR TRACE ELEMENT: Boron, manganese, copper, zinc, iron, molybdenum, chlorine. Needed in small amounts.

CHLOROSIS: Yellowing of leaves with veins remaining green. Often iron deficiency, but also zinc and manganese.

Eddie King, landscape designer and horticulturist, is offering home gardening and landscaping classes each Thursday morning and Wednesday evening.

Daytime classes, from 9 a.m. to noon, are held in Central High School, Downey, at Imperial Highway and Woodruff Avenue (near the 605 freeway). He teaches landscape theory, soils, fertilizers, lawns and sprinkler systems, garden maintenance and other related subjects.

Evening classes from 7 to 10 p.m. are held at Downey High School, Firestone Boulevard and Brookshire. Designed for both homeowner and newer professional, the classes offer a season approach to all-year Southern California gardening.

Additional information may be obtained through the schools.

Close porch

A summertime screened porch can become a bright, year-around family room or entertaining center.

One wall is replaced with wood-framed sliding glass doors leading onto a deck; another is built-in with shelves and cabinets for TV set, stereo and storage.

If there is a third screened wall, it can be enclosed or replaced with large windows.

Different origins of some flower varieties

New seed displays are brightening up stores across the country — and some fascinating stories surround the origins of many of the flower seed varieties on display.

Most have been discovered by plant explorers who risked life and limb in strange countries in their search for new flowers to beautify our gardens. Indeed, the greatest voyage of discovery before man went to the moon was sponsored by a botantist, Sir Joseph Banks, who 200 years ago financed the expeditions of Captain James Cook, which resulted in the discovery of New Zealand, Hawaii and Alaska.

More modest plant expeditions are in progress today, and since 1956 the United States Department of Agriculture has sent 13 plant expeditions around the world.

China has been a rich source of new flowers, including hollyhocks, oriental poppies and asters. Africa has yielded carnations and snapdragons, while Europe gave us sweet peas, foxgloves, and shirley poppies. From South America came nasturtiums, petunias, morning glories, scarlet sage, portulaca and verbenas, while in Mexico the Spanish Conquistadors first set eyes on ageratum, zinnias, marigolds, cosmos and dahlias.

What makes good organic gardener?

In recent years we have come to hear a great deal about the advantages of organic gardening. Organic farmers are suddenly doing big business because more people realize that vegetables grown naturally are not only more flavorful, they are free from toxic compounds, and the environment is left clean for future generations to enjoy.

In spite of all the publicity about organic gardening, however, many people are still bewildered about how to become a good organic gardener.

Actually, there are three very easy-to-follow rules which most successful organic gardeners practice. Copy these, and you will be a long way along the road to becoming an expert organic gardener.

Rule 1 is to grow all your vegetables from seed. The purest and healthiest form of plant life is seed. Nothing in this world is more organic than a simple seed. Natural, untreated seed is free from disease, and is the basis of all strong healthy plant life.

Rule 2 is to start a compost pile. Compost is a natural fertilizer, and an excellent soil conditioner, adding valuable humus to the soil. Choose a corner of your garden to start piling kitchen wastes, grass clippings, shredded leaves and anything else that will rot down easily. Egg shells, potato peelings, spoiled bread and even chicken bones will break down over a period of months for spreading over your garden in spring and fall.

Rule 3 is to use mulches to control weeds and keep the soil an even temperature. The occasional weed will defy any kind of mulch, but those that do break through are easily dealt with by hand. Shredded leaves, straw, black plastic strips — and even old newspapers — all are good mulches that make it tough for weeds to penetrate, and conserve moisture in the soil.

For the average gardener insects need not be a big problem. A sharp eye will usually detect insect eggs or the start of any damage, and the offenders can be easily removed by hand.

Ask any good organic farmer, and he'll confirm that 90 per cent of good organic gardening practices consist of seed, compost and mulch. It's as easy as one-two-three.

Red Baron—bright red, early blooming, compact, and weather tolerant.

We can always use another red petunia

Does the world (one might ask) really need another red petunia? After all (one might answer), to the non-professional eye, red is red, petunia is petunia, and to the weekend home gardener, it's all pretty much the same.

The total answer to this poser is that, yes, indeed, the world of horticulture could certainly use another red petunia; one with a striking, deep red; a petunia bred not only for color but for quick comeback after heavy weather; compact habit; early blooming, long-lasting glowers. A red petunia with these characteristics is the answer to a gardener's prayers. It's called Red Baron.

An early-blooming red petunia can be planted in bloom. No wait, no suspense. Buy them, take them home, plant them — instant garden. From there, one must look into compact habit. A compact plant will remain upright all season with no droop. And no matter where one lives, bad weather will come along. A rain-pounded garden is hardly a joy to behold. Fast comeback flowers, such as Red Baron, can take the worst the elements offer, and show their sparkling colors soon after.

Mum's the word for fall color

'Mum's the word.' Or, at least it should be with gardeners in Southern California, these days.

Though May has just arrived, it is time to consider Chrysanthemums — and their color contributions to the fall season.

In that nurseries offer blooming Chrysanthemums all months of the year, it isn't proper to link 'Mums strictly to fall months. These have been encouraged to bloom under controlled conditions, and with the exception of a few of the early-blooming varieties, 'Mums are fall-blooming flowers under natural conditions.

The pots of blooming Chrysanthemums, available all year, can be used as indoor decorations, or sunken into garden bare spots to brighten-up the surroundings.

After the flowers fade, the five plants to be found in the container can be cut back to 4-6 inches, separated and planted in sunny sites. The plants will bloom again in fall.

Chrysanthemums seem custom-made for the autumn season. The yellows, golds, and bronzes herald the arrival of fall; other shades — ranging from white through the reds to lavenders and purple — make up for any lack of fall garden color.

The gardener who fails to plant blooming 'Mums now, can always obtain flowering-size plants in nursery containers later in the year. But, he will enjoy more bloom for his money by setting out young, rooted transplants which are available at local nurseries this month.

With large-flowering exhibition-types and Spider 'Mums, the interest is in bloom size; pinch back the last time in mid-July. You'll obtain a less shrubby plant with longer stems and larger blooms.

Pompons, anemones, daisy and button-type Chrysanthemums can be re-pinched in July.

Select a sunny planting site for 'Mums. Water generously; drainage is most important. Help assure it by incorporating an organic planter mix with the soil as you set out the plants.

Run for Roses a romp for Secretariat

Winner's circle reunion

Feuerbach tops shotput record

SAN JOSE (Special) - A "relaxed" Al Feuerbach threw the shotput 71 feet, 7 inches Saturday in the San Jose Invitational track meet to break Randy Matson's seven-year-old world record.

The 6-foot-1, 250-pound Pacific Coast Club colorbearer got his record on the second throw of a six-put series that was the best in track history - 70-10, 71-, 69-5¾, 69-1, 69-6 and 70-7¼, an average of 70-2.

After his second throw, Feuerbach was confident he could throw even further, but officials took 15 minutes verifying his record and by the time competition had resumed, he had lost his edge.

"If they hadn't held the event up so long, I really think I could have gotten off a great put," said the 25-year-old Feuerbach, who finished fifth in the Munich Olympics last summer.

"I've been waiting for this for so long," said Feuerbach, who was in the second week of "relaxation after a hard eight-week workout.

"I started the training program after George Woods took away my indoor record," said Feuerbach. "I knew that I had the strength, but I needed mental relaxation.

"I was very relaxed today and being relaxed is the key. If I don't throw 73 feet this year, it's because I eased off mentally somewhere. This wasn't a phenominal put. No way, I was capable of it."

Feuerbach indicated his period of relaxation was over, that he was going back to more hard workouts.

"I could be satisfied," said Feuerbach of the record, "but it would be against my philosophy. I just beat Matson's record by a lousy 1½ inches. If I said I was satisfied, it wouldn't say much for my guts and determination.

"Now I'm going to train even harder and try to accelerate the record past the rest of the field. I want to be the greatest shotputter in the world."

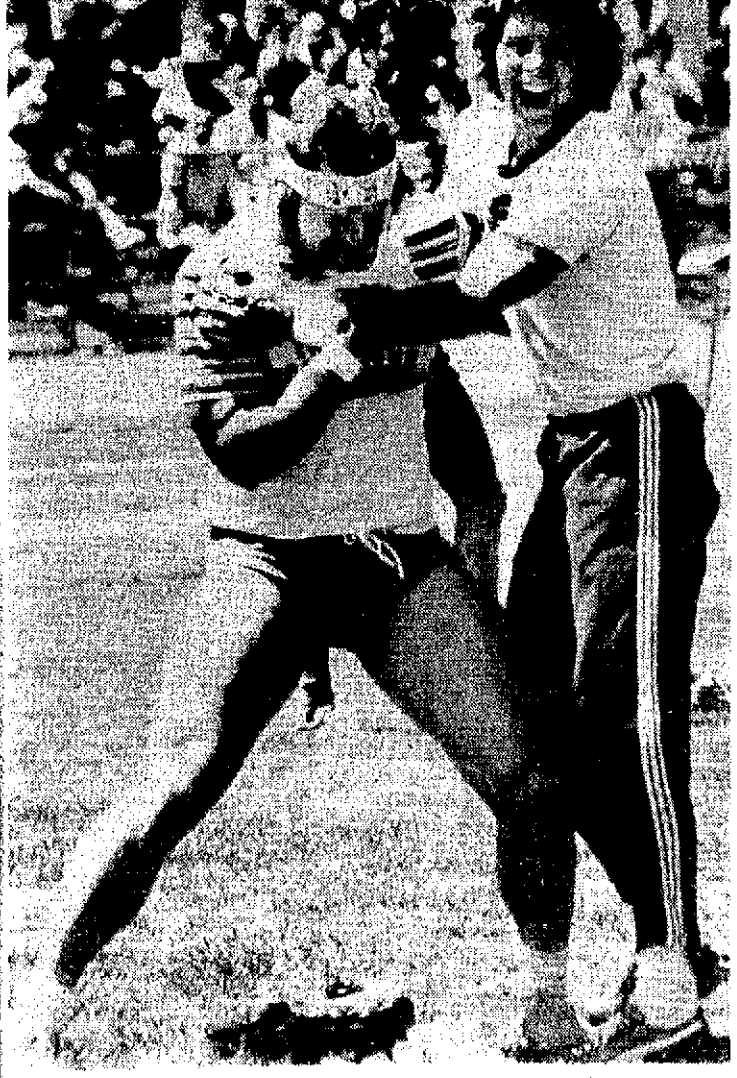

Feuerbach's record was the pacesetter in a day of heady performances.

Feuerbach's PCC teammate, John Powell, threw the discus a world best 218-7; Long Beach State's David Tucker triple jumped 53-7¼; Norbert Payton of the Bay Area Striders won the 100 in 9.2; Reynaldo Brown of Cal Poly leaped 7-2 to lead a pa-

Troy no match for No.1 UCLA

By JOHN DIXON
Staff Writer

In collegiate competition, UCLA's basketball record is unmatched. UCLA's track team has climbed the same pinnacle.

The Westwood whippets crushed the last pretender Saturday. The national championships? Just a Louisiana holiday for the Bruins.

USC threw everything it had at the Bruins Saturday, but the Trojans were no competition. UCLA led 20-3 after three events, 45-14 after seven, 89-55 after the penultimate mile relay.

If UCLA wants some serious competition, it will have to challenge Russia — or the world.

Threatened by their strongest foe of the 1973 campaign, UCLA responded with five lifetime bests, four meet records, two best-in-the-world performances.

James McAlister and Benny Brown got the biggest applause for the biggest achievements.

McAlister won the long jump with a line drive of 27 feet, ½ inch — a personal peak, meet and stadium records, No. 1 in the world this semester, and seventh on the all-time world list.

A junior with all-America potential as a football toter, McAlister had another long leap of 26-3½. He had to peak-out to trim Randy Williams, USC's Olympic Games gold medalist, who leaped 26-6¾.

An hour later, McAlister finished third in the 100-yard dash in 9.6, another lifetime best.

"McAlister waited a whole year for this one," chuckled UCLA coach Jim Bush. "I honestly thought that McAlister — or McAlister and Williams — would be over 27 feet today. I'm sure he can go farther. He's just getting it all together."

Benny Brown was the meet's workhorse — and point pacesetter.

He ran on victorious quarter-mile and mile relay teams, finished second in the furlong (20.6), and looked like the world's best in winning the 440 in the world's best time for 1973, 45.0, seventh on the all-time quickest list.

Brown ran comfortably a stride behind USC's Earl Richardson on the backstretch, trailed by a yard off the final curve, but exploded like Secretariat down the long home straightaway as

Derby king aims for Triple Crown

LOUISVILLE (AP) — Taking dead aim on the elusive Triple Crown, Meadow Stable's Secretariat charged to the front in the final sixteenth of a mile Saturday and won the 99th running of the Kentucky Derby-horse racing's most prestigious event.

It was the richest Derby of them all, more people than ever before—134,476 of them—watched the race, and Secretariat topped it off by running the 1 ¼ miles in 1:59 2-5, clipping three-fifths off the record. More money was bet on the 99th Derby than ever before.

Secretariat was the first colt ever to come into the Derby as the Horse of the Year. He also was the first horse to enter the Derby as an odds-on favorite in the winter book.

Although the victory is credited to Meadow Stable, it also started flames in the hearts of the shareholders who paid more than $6 million in the colt's breeding syndicate.

"There are a lot of happy coowners here," Mrs. John Tweedy, who manages Meadow Stable, said after the rade.

It came on the heels of a week of rumors and a few hard feelings about the son of Bold Ruler.

"I had more pressure on me today than I ever had in my life," trainer Lucien Laurin said.

It all began two weeks ago when Secretariat suffered his first defeat since his debut as a juvenile last season. Both his stablemate, Angel Light, and Sigmund Sommer's Sham put him down in the Wood Memorial.

"The horse had to redeem himself (in the Derby) and he did," Laurin said, adding that the track record came as no surprise, "I knew all along he could do it."

The tension heightened in the final pre-Derby days when Sham's trainer, Frank (Pancho) Martin told the world he was angry with Laurin and would never speak to him again.

Martin apparently misunderstood a comment by Laurin in a news article before the Wood.

Then, in the final pre-Derby hours, the rumors began to fly. Some said Secretariat was injured, some said he was ill. All of them said he was to be withdrawn from the race.

"Someone came up today and said he was sorry for me," Laurin said. "I asked why and he said because we had to scratch Secretariat."

But the 1972 Horse of the Year — only the second two-year-old ever so honored — made it plain in that final, charging sixteenth of a mile that he was anything but out of the race.

For perhaps three or four strides, he raced alongside Sham, then burst to the front and finished with 2 ½ lengths of daylight with Our Native another eight lengths back, and Northern Dancer's two-minute record of 1964 was a thing of the past.

As expected, jockey Larry Adams, riding in his fourth Derby, sent Shecky Greene out quickly, with Gold Bag, the longest shot in the field of 13, going with him head and head for the first half mile.

Sham, meanwhile, was

Ch C by Bold Ruler-Somethingroyal by Princequillo. Trainer L Laurin. Bred by Meadow Stud Inc. (Va.). In gate 5:37. Off at 5:37 (EDT). Start good, won handily Secretariat relaxed nicely and dropped back last leaving the gate as the field broke in good order, moved between horses to begin improving position entering the first turn but passed rivals from the outside thereafter. Turcotte roused him smartly with the whip in his right hand leaving the far turn and Secretariat strongly raced to the leaders, lost a little momentum racing into the stretch where Turcotte used the whip again, but then switched it to his left hand and merely flashed it as the winner willingly drew away in record breaking time. Sham, snugly reserved within striking distance, raced around rivals to the front without need of rousing and drew clear between calls entering the stretch, was under a strong hand ride after being displaced in the last furlong and continued resolutely to dominate the remainder of the field. Our Native, reserved in the first run through the stretch, dropped back slightly on the turn, came wide in the drive and finished well for his placing. Forego, taken to the inside early, veered slightly from a rival and hit the rail entering the far turn, swung wide entering the stretch and vied with Our Native in the drive. Restless Jet saved ground in an even effort. Shecky Greene easily set the pace under light rating for nearly seven furlongs and faltered. Navajo was outrun. Royal And Regal raced well for a mile and had nothing left in the drive. My Gallant was not a factor. Angle Light gave way steadily in a dull effort. Gold Bag had good speed and stopped. Twice A Prince reared and was hung in the gate briefly before the start and then showed nothing in the running. Warbucks was dull.

Angels snare fourth in row

By DON MERRY
Staff Writer

BALTIMORE — In the long, desperate summers of 1971 and '72, Bill Singer kept scanning the obituary columns. He reasoned, and rightly so, that he would see his name in there at any moment.

The Dodgers finally gave Singer up for dead last winter.

This is to report that rumors of Bill Singer's demise have been grossly exaggerated.

Singer is making the Angels sing.

And probably making Dodger general manager Al Campanis cry a little.

On Saturday night in Baltimore, Singer pitched a masterful two-hitter and registered his fifth victory of the season - one less than he won all last year - as the Angels ran their modest winning streak to four in a row with a 3-1 triumph over the Orioles - baseball's newest version of the hitless wonders.

Afterward, Singer had a confession.

"I really didn't know for sure if I could come back," he said, "and I told Harry Dalton so. All he told me in return was that if he had faith in me I should have faith in myself."

ANGELS OF DAY

BILL SINGER hurled two-hitter and BOB OLIVER drove in two runs as Angels defeated Baltimore, 3-1.

Singer's nagging self-doubts were predicated on his two previous summers with the Dodgers when he won only 16 games while losing 33, figures which aren't exactly confidence builders.

Reading pays dividends for hot Crawford

By GORDON VERRELL
Staff Writer

Pitchers have a book on hitters, right?

Well, Willie Crawford has a book of his own, on pitchers.

"It just reminds me where pitchers throw me and what pitches they throw in different situations," he said of his book. "I check it every night before coming to the park.

"But," he added, smiling, "I forgot it on the last road trip. I was only 4-for-18."

Willie C. has caught up on his reading since returning home.

Saturday night he slammed his first home run of the year, a three-run blow in the first inning, singled three times and drove in four runs in leading the Dodgers' 11-3 romp over St. Louis before 17,462 at Dodger Stadium.

For the homestand Crawford is hitting a robust .500 (10-for-20) and his four hits against the Cardinals jumped his average 32 points, to .273.

He has been the leader in a big week for Dodger batsmen. The O'Malleys, for the week, batted at a .312 clip.

"It's a matter of relaxing and putting the bat on the ball," Crawford said of his part in the week-long outburst.

"That," he added, "and swinging the bat. Tommy Lasorda keeps yelling at me to swing that bat."

Crawford, by no means, was not the only one to swing away Saturday evening against the Cards' young Jim Bibby, the brother of former UCLA basketball star Henry Bibby, who was making his first start of the season.

He was double-dribbled off the mound in the second.

The Dodgers nailed him for four runs in the first round — Crawford's homer accounted for three of them — and Joe Ferguson highlighted a five-run blitz in the second with a bases-loaded double, giving him 19 RBI and tying him with Willie Davis for the club lead.

Clearly, Bibby took a cue from his brother and was tossing free-throws toward the plate. All the Dodgers, even winning pitcher Tommy John, were on base at one time or another as they clouted out 14 hits. Only Ron Cey failed to get a hit but he did walk.

"I can swing the bat," snapped John who got his first hit of the year and also sacrificed successfully to help toward his third victory in five decisions. "Who needs the designated hitter? You might laugh, but when I was with the White Sox they even let me pinch hit for other guys."

John's big bat wasn't required as the Dodgers put the game away early, jolting to a 9-0 lead after two innings and adding single runs in the third and fifth innings for their biggest run output of the year.

Dave Lopes, the hero in Friday night's 10-inning triumph over the staggering Cards, got into it with two more stolen bases. He's now 8-for-8 for the year and, in the majors, is a perfect 12-fir-12.

But it is the emergence of Crawford which has been the most startling.

He was batting only .129 April 16 and as late as last Sunday in Pittsburgh was only at .206.

DODGER OF DAY

WILLIE CRAWFORD homered, had three singles and drove in four runs in 11-3 victory over St. Louis.

It was in Pittsburgh when Lasords took Crawford aside, talked to him, told him to relax and even took him to dinner.

"I just wanted to let him know no one had forgotten about him," the Dodger coach said, explaining his invitation to dine.

"We just talked and I told him some things he should be doing he hasn't been doing. The big thing was to just relax. It was really worthwhile. I thought so, anyway."

Crawford must have thought so too. He responded with three hits against the Pirates the next day, and hasn't stopped hitting since.

"The tab?" asked Lasorda with a grin. "Oh, it went for fifty bucks. But it was worth it."

DODGER DOPE: Claude Osteen gave his left arm the whirlpool treatment Saturday night. The muscle above the elbow is swollen after being struck by a liner off the bat of Ted Simmons Friday night but he says he won't miss a turn. "I even threw a little and it's not too sore," he said. . . .

Dave Lopes entered Saturday night's game with a perfect 10-for-10 stealing bases in the majors. He was 4-for-4 last September after being promoted from Albuquerque. He stole his 11th base (seventh this season) in the first inning Saturday night. . . .

Casey Stengel will be at Dodger Stadium June 3 for Old-timers Day. . . . Bill Russell took a seven-game hitting streak into Saturday's game. . . .

Pitching the concluding game of the series today will be Al Downing, 2-1, for the Dodgers and Alan Foster, 0-2, the former Dodger, for St. Louis. Iede to come

Byers sparks Whalers, 3-1

BOSTON (UPI) — Mike Byers scored two goals on passes from Tom Earl Saturday night as the New England Whalers whipped the Winnipeg Jets, 4-2, to take a commanding 3-1 lead in their best-of-7 series for the World Hockey Association championship.

The Whalers, who set a league record with their 10th successive victory at home including all eight in the playoffs, could wrap up the WHA's first title at Boston Garden this afternoon.

Lead Russian series, 3-1

DiGregorio guides U.S. cage win

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Little Ernie DiGregorio of Providence fired in 20 points to pace the United States National team past the Russian National team 83-75 Saturday night, giving the Americans a 3-1 lead in the seven game basketball series.

DeGregorio, a 6-foot-1 guard, hit 16 points in the first half as the U.S. pulled away to a 43-32 lead after four ties. The second half was all United States.

The U.S. built its biggest lead at 66-44 with 10:41 remaining in the game and the final margin of eight points was as close as the Russians could come.

The Russians were led by Alexander Belov with 17 points. Belov, a 6-7 forward and the hero of the Russian Olympic victory at Munich, was held to only five points in the first half. He was apparently not hampered by an ankle injury that kept him out of the Americans' 83-67 victory at Albuquerque, N.M., Thursday night.

The game was punctuated by 88 fouls, 44 for each team. Six of the Russian players fouled out as did four Americans in the continuing rough series.

George Karl, a 6-3 guard from North Carolina, was the only other American in double figures with 13 points. All 12 Americans got on the scoreboard.

The only other Russian in double figures was Ivan Dvornii with 11.

The U.S. won the board battle 54-44 with Len Elmore of Maryland, added the roster Friday to help the rebounding, leading the way with 11. The 6-9 Elmore was aided by another recent addition, 6-8 Marvin Barnes of Providence, who pulled down seven rebounds. Belov led Russia with 12.

The U.S. hit only 30 of 74 field goal attempts for 40 per cent, while the Russians dropped in 29 of 70 for 41 per cent.

DeGregorio, who was voted the Most Valuable Player for the game, handed out a game high eight assists including several flashy passes that had the sell-out crowd of 14,956 on its feet.

DeGregorio said, "I think they're a tough team. They know how to play this way (international rules) better than we do."

rade of four high jumpers over seven feet; San Jose State's Dennis Maas won the 440 intermediate hurdles in 48.2 and former Garden Grove High School star Mark Schilling, now running as a freshman for San Jose State, won the mile in 4:02.5.

Tucker's leap was a Long Beach State, meet and stadium record and was the 49er sophomore's best effort since he set a schoolboy record of 52-6 as a junior at San Juaquin Memorial High School in Fresno three years ago.

Tucker's teammate, Rayfield Dupree, finished third in the triple jump at 50-8 after having a measured foul of 52-6.

Long Beach State's quartet of Ed Barnett (51.3), Phil Moses (48.0), Don Skala (48.6) and Phil White (48.1) beat San Jose State's mile relay team in a photo finish so close that it took judges 15 minutes of studying a photograph to determine the winner.

Long Beach's John Gloud had a liftime best of 9.5 while finishing second in the second heat of the 100 and the Pacific Coast Club's Steve Smith won the pole vault at 17-3.

Track highlights

STANFORD — Emerson Davis led a sweep in the steeplechase and sprinter John Nichols upset Ken Curl in the 220 to spark California to an 84-70 victory over Stanford. Nichols outdueled Curl in the 220 21.2 to 21.4 after the Stanford star had taken the 100 in 9.9. Davis led the steeplechase sweep at 9:11.0. Freshman Terry Albritton of Stanford won the shotput at 61-6¼.

CORVALLIS, Ore. — Hailu Ebba of Ethiopia won the mile in 3:58.1 for Oregon State but it wasn't enough to upset Oregon as the Ducks took an 86-77 decision. Oregon's Steve Prefontaine clinched the meet with a 13:27.1 three-mile victory.

SEATTLE — Dan Murphy won the three-mile to help Washington State defeat Washington 91½ to 73½. Washington's Keith Anderson finished second in the featured race at 13:42.8 to Murphy's 13:30.2. Dean Clark of WSU won the steeplechase in 8:49.0 and Rick Albright of Washington took the mile in 4:06.9. In other highlights.

QUANTICO, Va. — Greg Geracl ol Vineland, N.J. set a Marine Corps Relays record with a 273-8 javelin throw. The United Boys Over the Hill Athletic Assn., with Byron Dyce running a 1:50.6 anchor leg, took the club and service sprint medley in 3:24.6. Saints 2nd; Pius X wins track title

Pius X High pole vaulter Randy Chavez set an Angelus League record with a leap of 13-6¾ as the Warriors captured the team championship in the league track finals Saturday at UC Irvine.

Pius X outscored St. Anthony, 49-41, en route to the Angelus League track title. Bishop Amat finished third with 36 points.

The Warriors and St. Anthony each won four events. Ken Sam was the top point winner for Pius X, winning the 220 in 22.3 and finishing second in the 100 at 10.0.

Don Johnson was a double winner for the second-place Saints. Johnson won the 120 high hurdles in 15.0 and took the 180 lows in 20.0. He also placed second in the long jump with a 21-6 leap.

Even Brown surprised by 45.0 in Bruin breeze

By GARY RAUSCH
Staff Writer

About the time Secretariat was making its homestretch drive at Churchill Downs Saturday, Benny Brown was crossing the finish line at Drake Stadium, a world-best quartermile mark in his grasp.

The bespectacled sophomore speedster from Sunnyvale received no wreath of roses for his dash in the sun, but he basked in the excitement of the moment with a long, piercing "wooooeeeeeee!" when the 45.0 time was announced.

On a spring Saturday when USC trudged home from Westwood happy to have held UCLA under 90 points (89-55), Brown performed yeoman chores in the service of Bruin coach Jim Bush.

He warmed up with a leg on the 440 relay (40.2) and, after winning his one-lapper, chased Trojan Don Quarrie for second in the 220 (20.6w) and anchored the victorious mile relay team with a 46.0 dash.

"I had no idea I was running that fast," Benny said of his 440 victory, one of 11 Bruin blue ribbons. "When I heard the slow 330 time, I expected to come in about 45.7. But 45-flat...wow!"

Brown, whose season best was only five-tenths slower than his brilliant effort Saturday, seemed to be caught up in the snowballing euphoria that personifies the annual Bruin-Trojan spike-tacular.

"You bet I get up more for this one, but they're all big from now on," he said of the upcoming Pac-8 and NCAA meets. "Now I'll have some people thinking about me.

"If I'm at my best in the prelims, they'll have to go out fast. That means they'll kill themselves off for the finals."

Asked what his goal was when the season began, the third-place finisher in last year's NCAA 400 replied, "To get as close to the world record as possible."

He's not far from it right now.

Brown's was one of five meet records and 10 lifetime bests rewarded a crowd of 12,213. Four other personal marks were scuttled by winds which hovered around 10 mph all afternoon.

One of those suffering a wind-aided disappointment was James McAlister who placed third in the 100 at 9.6.

"I made up my mind this morning I'd either win the long jump or 100 and I don't really care about the 100 now," he said moments after bounding over 27 feet (27-½) for the first time in his spectacular career.

"Actually, this was the first time over 27 legally. I had a close foul once. I owe it all to the protein diet I'm on—baked potato, lots of meat and salads. No fried foods, soft drinks or candy. I'm no sweet freak but I like my candy.

A month ago McAlister pushed the Toledoes to 208 pounds one day and assistan nt coach Tom Tellez suggested a crash diet.

"I'm between 195 and 200 and the past week was perfect," related James, who's also tried date sandwiches and vegetarian regimes. "I dedicated myself to mental preparedness my not eating a lot."

Teammate Dave Schiller, who launched the lone UCLA sweep with a 60-7½ shotput triumph, has had the opposite problem. He's a lightweight in a heavy weight's event.

"I've put on about 15 pounds, but I think the level of competition has been the biggest reason for my improvement," said the mustachioed former Long Beach City College strongman.

"I was hitting in the 57s in September and I placed my goal this season at 60-0. When I hit 60-3½, I had to enlarge that goal to 63-0," he smiled. "Now I'd like to win the Pac-8...the NCAA, we'll look and see there."

Schiller was hindered by a slight cold and blamed his lack of total concentration on allowing McAlister's performance in the nearby long jump pit to distract him.

"There's so much mental preparation in this sport and I guess I was lucky not to have needed my best put of the day to win on my final throw," said the junior psychology major. "In high school (Millikan) I respected Sam Cunningham more than any other athlete for the fantastic ability he had to always come from behind and pull out a victory."

The freckle-faced Schiller didn't need Sam Bam's determination or concentration Saturday. Neither did most of the other Bruins. With a record of 17 successive dual meet wins, 35 of their last 36 and back-to-back NCAA titles, UCLA hasn't been forced to come from behind too often lately.

49ers drop twin bill to Aztecs

SAN DIEGO (Special) — Long Beach State nearly matched San Diego State in the hit department Saturday, but couldn't keep up when it came to runs and the 49ers dropped a Pacific Coast Athletic Assn. doubleheader to the Aztecs, 11-7 and 5-2.

The 49ers had 18 hits in the two games, including three apiece by Brad Keehn, Jim Gmur and Lloyd Michelson, but still saw their overall record slip to 15-28-1 and their PCAA record to 4-10-1.

Long Beach concludes its season this week with a Tuesday game at USC and with a three-game PCAA series with UC Santa Barbara Friday and Saturday in Long Beach.

Klecker nets 2-0 shutout in Jets win

Lakewood Jets hurler Ed Klecker tossed a two-hit shutout at San Bernardino as the Jets won, 2-0, Saturday night at Mayfair Park. Klecker's league record improved to 10-1 with the shutout.

Lakewood scored both of its runs in the first inning when Bill Hardy and Ralph Smith hit run-producing singles.

The first-place Jets meet second-place Burbank at 7:30 p.m. today at Mayfair Park. Lakewood leads the Western Softball Congress with an 11-2 record.

BRUINS

Richardson tied up and fell back to fifth.

"He could have run faster if he had any competition," said Bush. "He'll break the world record (44.5) before he graduates. Benny is the greatest prospect I've ever had. He's accomplished more as a sophomore than (Olympians) Wayne Collett and John Smith."

Rory Kotinek earned second place points for the Bruins in the javelin with a 237-8 throw despite a painful back injury. He took only two long jumps, finishing fourth at 23-11, and finished fifth in the high jump, missing 6-10.

Jamaican Olympian Don Quarrie was USC's outstanding athlete. He was rewarded with polite applause from the near-capacity throng of 12,213 for winning the 100 in 9.4 and 220 in 20.3, aided by the gusty breeze.

USC's faint victory hopes evaporated in the first race when USC's Jerry Wilson, running No. 2 in the 440 relay, developed a severe cramp in the back of his hamstring muscle and collapsed on the track.

Bush lauded USC as "a fine team. We know when we meet the Trojans, we're meeting the best."

Fike finishes 5th in national gym contest

SEATTLE (Special) — Debbie Fike, a member of the Long Beach Kips, finished fifth all-around Saturday night in the U.S. Gymnastic Federation's Elite National Finals here.

Miss Fike, a 15-year-old sophomore at Kennedy High School in Cypress, was second on the balance beam, fourth on the bars and fifth in vaulting on the way to her all-around placement.

Her efforts earned Debbie a berth on a U.S. team that will participate in an exhibition match with a Red China team in two weeks in Madison Square Garden.

Monzon scores knockout despite family tragedy

ROME (AP) — World middleweight champion Carlos Monzon, tuning for his June 2 title defense against Emile Griffith, floored Roy Dale of Cincinnati in the first round and then knocked him out in the fifth of a scheduled 10-round non-title bout Saturday.

Monzon, whose younger brother was shot to death in Argentina Friday night, appeared distracted as many of his punches missed their mark.

Dale showed only a left jab, survived a slow first round and then opened a cut on the champion's nose in the second. Monzon bounced back and decked the American with a left hook and then began battering him with hard lefts and rights.

In the fifth, Monzon cornered Dale and knocked him out at two minutes, 40 seconds of the round with a left hook.

Monzon weighed 163½ pounds while Dale scaled 161.

Immediately after the fight, Monzon's manager, Amicar Brusa, said the champion would not return to Argentina but would continue training in Rome for his bout in Monte Carlo against Griffith, the former five times welterweight and middleweight champion from New York.

"I thought there would be a little understanding for me," Monzon said about the crowd which booed and jeered his lackluster performance. "I felt fine physically but my mind was not with the fight. My brother's death emptied my heart and my head of all other thoughts."

Monzon, who was wounded in the right arm in a shooting mishap three months ago, said his arm "is as strong as ever."

Mark Harmon injured in UCLA scrimmage

With about seven minutes left of a two-hour scrimmage, Harmon was buried in a pileup, causing the break. Before the injury, Harmon completed five-of-six passes for 99 yards and ran five times for 40 more to lead his team to a 28-13 win over the Jeff Dankworth-led team.

Dankworth completed 3-of-8 passes for 69 yards while picking up 87 yards on the ground in 13 carries.

Kermit Johnson and Eugene Jones were Bruin standouts. Johnson gained 60 yards on six carries, including a 27-yard touchdown run. Jones caught five passes for 111 yards, one reception a 31-yard TD pass from wide receiver Steve Monahan.

Broken leg sidelines 49er Leanell Jones

Long Beach State lost tailback candidate Leanell Jones for a year Saturday when the 6-foot-4, 220-pound transfer from Laney College suffered a broken leg during a spring football practice scrimmage.

Jones broke the femur (thigh bone) in his right leg just above the knee when was hit while running a sweep early in the scrimmage.

Jones' collision set the tone for a rough afternoon that was dominated by the play of the 49er defensive unit, led by Louie Lauriano and Dana Hogan, a pair of former Long Beach City College stars.

The day's only touchdown came on a 75-yard run by another junior college transfer, Tommy Nathan, from Eastern Arizona. Nathan gained 125 yards in 17 carries.

Humble Howard's finally gonna get his Tickets to the Howard Cosell benefit "roast" Monday night, May 14, at the Beverly Wilshire Hotel are $100 and $50, or $1,000 for a preferred table for 10 and $600 for a lesser table for 12.

They may be purchased from the Southern California Chapter of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society, 135 N. Screenland Drive, Burbank 91505.

"I never studiously developed a style. I just do my own thing. The kind of publicity and recognition that I've gotten is ridiculous." — Howard Cosell.

"But I was, as a former lawyer, very sure of my grounds — and I was proved correct."

Ali will be among those taking their best shots at Humble Howard, along with Don Rickles, Bill Russell, "Dandy" Don Meredith, Totie Fields, Carroll Rosenbloom, Alex Karras, Milton Berle, Steve Allen and Burt Reynolds.

From that lineup, Howard can drop enough names to last him through a millennium of Monday nights . . ."I had dinner the other night with Muhammad, Don, Bill, Dandy, etc."

THEY MIGHT WELL say the same. Cosell has become relatively late in life the best-known — if not necessarily the most popular — sportscaster in the world. He is not kidding when he says he was once a lawyer.

"I practiced law for 10 years," explains Howard, who describes his entry into TV-radio journalism as "a freak."

"I had clients in the broadcasting business and I also happened to have been the attorney for Little League Baseball in New York City. They (the broadcasting people) wanted to do a summer replacement radio show with Little Leaguers and they wanted permission to use the name Little League in the title of the show.

"I granted that permission on the grounds that the show be non-commercial. They asked me to emcee it as a hobby, which I did, and it stayed on the air for 5½ years, during which time they offered me a radio contract."

One week from Monday — May 14 — several sports and show business personalities will find themselves in the presence of greatness when they get together for dinner at the Beverly Wilshire Hotel.

The main course will be something special. They're going to roast Howard Cosell.

The theme is "Humble Howard and Help MS," because the affair will benefit the National Multiple Sclerosis Society.

"I think it's fine," says Cosell from his ABC-TV office in New York. "They can do whatever they want to me. That's not important, as long as the cause prospers — and it couldn't be for a more worthy cause."

Merlin Olsen and Chicago White Sox executive Roland Hemond are co-chairmen.

"Merlin asked me if I would do it," says Cosell, "because he's interested in the cause and, by a curious coincidence, so am I.

"A very dear friend of mine's wife has multiple sclerosis. That's Frank Gifford's wife. Also a member of Asa Parseghian's family. So I'm much interested and I'm delighted to do it."

IT'S BEEN SAID that criticism rolls off Howard Cosell like water off a sponge.

"I have received over the years tens upon tens of thousands of letters calling me a nigger-loving Jew bastard because of my support of Muhammad Ali on Constitutional law grounds," Howard says.

Obviously, somebody liked his style, which he insists is not artificial or a deliberate attempt to be controversial.

"I never studiously developed my style," he says. "I just do my own thing. If it works, fine, and if it doesn't, that's the way it is in life.

"But I think the kind of publicity and recognition that I've goteen is ridiculous. I have been in show business, which I enjoy as an escape from my regular functions, but I'm mystified by the kind of emphasis that's been placed on me in terms of publicity. I really am."

IN OTHER WORDS, Cosell sees himself primarily as a reporter who, perhaps, simply performs his duties with more expertise, insight and directness than his colleagues, occasionally to the point of trampling his subjects.

One of his notable interviews was the one with the U.S. Olympic track coach who blew the sprinters' starting times.

FEEL A LITTLE LIKE

DROPPING HIM, MERLIN?

The coach was literally in tears, but Cosell denies feeling bad about how it turned out.

"Bad!" he retorts. "I felt bad for two young men who had spent 18 years of their lives, accumulatively, working for one opportunity, one of whom underwent great physical hardship to get there and never did get there.

"Out of 216 track events, in only one case did athletes fail to make the starting blocks. That happened to two young men out of the ghetto."

In reflection, Cosell adds, "That was one of my weaker interviews. The transcript of that interview will be carried in my book coming out in October, plus my commentary.

"Journalism is not a popularity contest. It never was, never will be and it's not now. That's why two men fought for a telephone in the back of a car that was right behind Jack Kennedy and Connally in front of the (Texas Schoolbook) depository building."

COSELL DOES NOT feel handicapped at all by the lack of athletic distinction on his own part. He admits that he was not athlete.

"Not to speak of. I won some medals in track for the broad jump when I was in grade school and I ran cross-country in college, but I've never been an athlete.

"I don't think one has to have been an athlete to understand an athlete or to disclose what an athlete is all about to the American public.

"That's like saying that Walter Cronkite and Harry Reasoner can't report politics because they've never held public office, or like saying a theater critic has to be an actor, or a music critic has to have been a cellist."

Cosell, one senses, is warming up to a point, which is the growing practice of networks to hire sports and show biz celebs as commentators.

"I think that's ridiculous," says Howard. "I think to make the ex-jock a quote all-purpose sports reporters end quote is a debasement of my profession."

It is pointed out that he shares the Monday night football microphone with two ex-jocks, Frank Gifford and Don Meredith.

"I see nothing wrong in using Don Meredith in the way we use him. That's right — and good and I don't refer to people like Gifford or Pat Summeral because they've been in the business for 14 years and must be accorded as qualified now.

"But the principle of taking an ex-athlete and putting him on the air as a reporter defies every precept of jounalism, frustrates the young people and frustrates the free enterprise notion. Young people studying communications and journalism in the colleges and universities would be the first to say this.

"The ex-athlete has no training in the who, what, when, where, how and why of a story. He doesn't necessarily have any training in speech and articulation."

COSELL'S MANNER of speech and articulation makes his delivery unique and widely imitated. Who is his favorite imitator? "Bill Cosby," Howard replies. "He did it in Tahoe when I was there."

Then Cosell proceeds into an imitation of Bill Cosby imitating Howard Cosell:

"Flash floods in Iowa . . .300 killed . . . they deserved it. "

BUD TUCKER

They're chortling in Orange County

As you know, one wishing to be socially accepted in this day and age is careful to avoid certain violations of the code of decent behavior.

That is, you do not stuff hors d'oeuvres in your pockets or spill drinks down the bosom of the hostess or ask the piano player to kindly remove his boxing gloves. Neither is throwing guests in the pool likely to get you invited back.

However, the totally unacceptable act, the true mark of a slob, is to discuss a baseball trade in May. The first thing a debutante learns is that such discussions are avoided until October.

Still, in Orange County, heretofore a center of no little culture and refinement, the conduct on the part of a regrettable number of citizens is becoming quite shocking. Almost openly, a baseball trade is being discussed.

THE OFF-SEASON piece of business involving the California Angels and Los Angeles Dodgers is mentioned and the inhabitants of the community commence chuckling up the sleeves of their jackets and winking knowingly and digging one another in the stomach with their elbows.

Inasmuch as more names were involved in the deal than in the Watergate affair, you will doubtless appreciate a recap. The Angels sent Andy Messersmith, a pitcher, and Ken McMullen, an infielder, to the Dodgers. In return the Dodgers uncoupled Frank Robinson, a super star, Bill Singer, a pitcher, Mike Strahler, an alleged pitcher and Bobby Valentine and Bill Grabarkewitz, infant infielders.

The reasoning of both sides was uncomplicated. Messersmith would win more than 20 games and McMullen, who had not played third base for the Dodgers in several years, would plug that tormenting hole and Los Angeles would win the National League pennant.

Robinson, Singer and the two children would improve the lot of the Angels, largely because there was no way it could get any worse.

SINCE THE two franchises are located freeway close, there was great early compulsion to drop the names into the martinis at cocktail parties and talk about the trade. The Dodger faithful, sophisticated and conscious of class, resisted from the outset.

The Orange County crowd, it must be admitted, held off until one thing led to another and statistics began appearing in the newspapers.

As this was composed, for example, Singer had won four of his first five decisions and displayed an earned run average of 1.73, which was good. Messersmith had triumphed in only one of his first five starts and was burdened with an ERA of 3.40, which was not good.

Robinson was limping to the plate and hitting home runs. Valentine was among the top ten hitters and Grabarkewitz was talking American League opponents to death. The whereabouts of Strahler, which actually had nothing to do with anything, were unknown.

McMullen had not vacated the whirlpool bath at Dodger Stadium. Ken was curing a bad back and ruining his skin with the hot water and chemicals.

AL CAMPANIS, who represented the Dodgers in the trade, was looking up and around for improvement. Naturally, he expected Messersmith to approach his potential and McMullen to regain his health.

Harry Dalton, the Angel mouthpiece in the deal, was afraid to look up lest he discover it was midnight and his little team was turning into nine pumpkins.

It being only May and the Dodger sufferers dignified and prideful, they went about their business.

The folks of Orange County, despite the risk of upturned nostrils from outside society, were assembling in small groups and talking. Some of them were going so far as to consider returning to Anaheim Stadium as active spectators.

A reporter worth his salt, however, digs deeper. It seemed the thing to do was to contact some of the principals in the transaction.

"Ask me in October," said Andy Messersmith.

Obviously, a man with class.

"Oh boy, oh boy," said Bill Grabarkewitz.

Clearly, not the sort you would invite to a social function.

Shot at Ram job a dream come true for Ed Giles

Ed Giles, a Long Beach Poly and City College product, is the Cinderella man of the Ram football team today.

Giles, who won all-America prep honors while a running back at Poly in his junior year, was the first candidate signed by the Rams after their unique tryout camp a few weeks ago.

Two months ago, Giles, 23, who was Utah State's starting fullback two seasons before he laid out a year from football to work for the Long Beach Recreation Dept. as general supervisor at Ramona Park, thought his chances were slim and none to attain his lifetime goal of playing for the Rams.

Today he looms the greatest rags-to-riches football story since Johnny Unitas was pulled from a semi-pro team by the Baltimore Colts for the simple price of a telephone call.

LET'S GO BACK TWO MONTHS and recall Giles' sentiments as expressed here then.

"I tried to get a real shot with the Rams," said Giles last March, "but then I got a letter back from Mark Duncan (director of player personnel) saying the Rams wouldn't have any trials this season.

"But I know I'm in shape and can do a job for the Rams as a running back. I believe I'm a better running back than either Willie Ellison or Bobby Thomas were for the Rams last season.

"Why? Because there's no way either of them could have trained as hard in the offseason as I'm doing now."

Ed's Spartan schedule was outlined then and it daily began at 8 a. m. and wound up at 10 p. m. or later.

Giles' parting remark to us in March was: "Just let the Rams know I'm in shape and that I just want a chance. I think the Rams will be happy with what they see. But I just want the chance."

THE CHANCE CAME and the Rams were obviously happy with what they saw.

After Giles was signed by the Rams off their Coliseum tryout field, Ram administrator Jack Teele, also an ex-Poly athlete, made this remark:

"You were right about Giles. If determination and desire mean anything, Ed's got a head start on every other newcomer who'll be trying to make our '73 squad.

HOW DOES GILES FEEL ABOUT EVERYTHING two months later? Let him tell you.

"I feel so great you wouldn't believe it. I told you if I got the chance, I'd make the best of it. I wasn't bragging. I was just 110 percent confident."

Was being a pro football player truly your major goal and if so, for how long?

"It's one of my major goals. But I have others. I know ever since I started playing football for keeps in high school that I wanted to play professionally."

How did you feel when you weren't drafted after your 1971 college season

"I had mixed feelings. Originally, when nobody drafted me, I wasn't sure if I really wanted to be a pro after all, even though I'd thought about it for nine years. Then after the first hurt was over, I realized I did graduate with a B. A. degree and I felt within myself that pro football wasn't the ultimate. But after staying out a year, I really missed football. I didn't even go to a game because I couldn't bear to just sit in the stands and watch. It hurt too much."

WHAT PROBLEMS DO YOU THINK you'll encounter?

"I know I need experience on the pro level. I'm not kidding myself there. But when I learn the Ram system, I think I can overcome that problem."

What honestly do you think your chances are of making the Rams?

"With Ellison and Thomas gone, my chances are particularly good. The No. 1 man who's ahead of me, and he's a good one, is Jim Bertelsen. But my main objective is to beat him out, too. I want to play, not sit on the bench."

But what about your job with the City? Will leaving it to play pro football jeopardize that position?

"I don't think so. I know I'll be better able to relate to kids after being in pro football. Kids love a good athletic image. Even though I work for the City of Long Beach, I'm on a furlough grant with them. I'm paid through the government, not the City. I wouldn't know until June anyway if my furlough grant would be extended. The City has been very good to me and I know my capabilities, too. I've never been out of work and I've always been able to work."

WHEN YOU FIRST APPROACHED THE RAMS, Duncan said you were out of luck because the Rams wouldn't have any trials for free agents. What caused a change of heart?

"Well, I took my films from Utah State to them, and they were kind enough to review them. Then a few articles by you helped immensely. I guess the clincher came when Mr. (Carroll) Rosenbloom thought it might be a good idea to have a tryout camp. A few things here and there put on the pressure and opened their eyes. Maybe it proved a point that special tryout camps aren't useless. At least I'm very glad for the chance that camp gave me."

Were you impressed by the Rams' tryout camp?

"If this had been my first tryout camp, maybe I'd have been more impressed than I actually was. But I was prepared for the Ram camp, which I wasn't when I reported several months ago to George Allen's Washington Redskin camp in Memphis. I felt more comfortable at the Ram tryouts. For one thing, the Rams watched me more closely. I was confused with the Redskins because I didn't expect so many people to try out way back in Memphis. I KNEW there'd be a lot trying out in L. A. The weather was about 15 to 20 degrees in Memphis, too, while it was 75-80 in the Coliseum. Then, I knew 25 or 30 people who were at the Ram tryout, while I was all alone in Memphis. The Rams all around were more congenial than the Redskins."

WHAT DO YOU THINK of new Ram coach Chuck Knox?

"I talked very briefly with him, but he made me feel at home immediately. He congratulated me on being signed out of the tryout camp and said the entire team welcomed me. He made me feel good. He's different than George Allen."

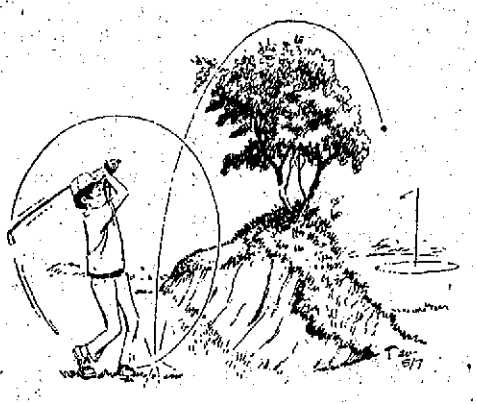

While you're still on cloud nine, what is your conclusion today?

"First, I think I'm extremely fortunate to have gotten this chance in the first place. I feel very fortunate, too, to get to play behind an offensive line with people like Tom Mack, Joe Scibelli, Ken Iman and Charley Cowan. I've thought for the last couple of years that the Rams had the best offensive line in pro football. I'm lucky to break in behind the people I've mentioned.

Time will tell if the Rams turn out to be the lucky ones, too.

By Lee Trevino

Aw, cut it out!

There'll be times when your path to the green is blocked by a young forest. A grubworm couldn't squeeze through 'em. And there's a bunker between you and the flag.

The cut shot — a high floater that hits and digs in — is the only answer. It ain't the easiest shot around, so hitch up your belt, open your stance, and hit it crisp.

The secret to a good cut shot — getting the ball up in a hurry, then stopping it the same way — is to NEVER release the right hand.

AIM SLIGHTLY to the left to compensate for the open stance. Come through the hitting area with the back of the left hand to the target. If the right hand comes over — oops! — you won't cut it.

This shot requires a good, grassy lie. Don't attempt it off hardpan or a tight lie. You'll skull it.

Hit down on the ball firmly with the clubface opened. The best way to spin a ball (so it'll stop) is by keeping it on the club face as long as possible. The more it spins, the quicker it'll rise and the faster it'll stop on the green.

Aaron cracks No. 681

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Hank Aaron, moving to within just 33 homers of Babe Ruth's record, cracked three hits including the 681st homer of his career Saturday night to lead Atlanta to a 7-0 victory over Philadelphia and Steve Carlton.

Dick Dietz drove in his first two runs of the season and Dusty Baker chipped in with a homer to back the seven-hit pitching of Carl Morton, who is now 2-2.

Aaron hit his homer in the first inning and Baker connected in the sixth. Aaron, closing in on Ruth's record of 714 homers, now has eight homers this season although he has just 15 hits. He also had a double and a run-scoring single in the game.

Carlton, who allowed nine hits and six runs in his six innings of work, is now 4-4 this year. Last year he was 5-6 before he rallied to post a 27-10 mark by winning 22 of his last 26 decisions.

The Braves batted around in the fourth, scoring four times. Marty Perez singled and took third on Aaron's double. With one out, Baker was intentionally walked, but Darrell Evans singled to score one run and Dietz singled to score two more. Morton capped the rally with a single that scored Evans.

Aaron singled in the final run of the game in the ninth inning.

ANGELS—

pitched the last two years I thought I might have lost it," Singer said. "I thought about it all winter. But by opening day I knew it was back."

In his last three starts - all complete game victories - Singer has come up with a four-hitter, a five-hitter and now the two-hitter. His record is 5-1 and his ERA is down to 1.60.

"I just feel physically stronger," he said. "Outside of that, I can't pinpoint the reason why I'm pitching as well as I am. My history has been that I'd tire in the late innings but I haven't been doing that this year. Tonight, for example, I felt stronger at the end."

He pitched like it, too, retiring 16 of the last 17 batters he faced.

Offensively, it was the booming bat of Bob Oliver that provided the margin of victory.

After a struggling Singer had given up a run to the Orioles in the first inning, Oliver got the Angels even with a fourth-inning homer off Mike Cuellar and then drove in what proved to be the winner, lashing a two-out single to score Bobby Valentine in the fifth.

When the Angels left home last Monday Oliver was carrying a meager .162 batting average. In four games since, Oliver has contributed nine hits in 17 at-bats, boosting his average 130 points to a highly acceptable .292.

Two of those hits have been home runs, three of them doubles and he has driven in seven runs in the four games.

"I still don't feel comfortable in the batter's box but my swing feels fine," King Ollie remarked.

Oliver says he is also getting better pitches to hit this year and the reason is the presence of Frank Robinson.

"I've been looking for somebody like him to hit behind or in front of all my life," Ollie smiled. "When he's in the lineup they can't pitch around me."

Cuellar didn't try to in the fourth. Oliver led off the inning and Cuellar served up a fat one. Ollie reciprocated by depositing the ball in the left-field seats for his third homer of the year.

Valentine opened the fifth with a single and two outs later, Ollie got the run home with a solid single to left.

Art Kusnyer's two-out double and Sandy Alomar's ensuing single gave the Angels their final run in the sixth.

Singer had a rough first inning. Al Bumbry led off with a triple and scored as Bobby Grich reached first on a Valentine throwing error.

Singer struck out the next two but then walked Boog Powell and hit Don Baylor with a pitch, loading the bases. When Singer got Brooks Robinson to fly out, it was all downhill.

Singer said no-no to the Birds the rest of the evening.

Santo's HR lifts Cubs past Giants

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Ron Santo drove in three runs with a sacrifice fly and a two-run homer Saturday and Jack Aker pitched out of a ninth-inning jam in leading the Chicago Cubs to a 7-4 victory over San Francisco.

The Cubs took a 1-0 lead into the eighth with starter Burt Hooton pitching a one-hitter and then erupted for four runs and a 5-0 lead.

A double by Jim Hickman, Santo's sacrifice fly, a wild pitch by Giant reliever Elias Sosa and a single by Hooton drove in the runs. But the Giants rallied for four runs in the bottom of the eighth to chase Hooton.

In the ninth, Gene Hiser singled and Santo hit his fifth homer of the year off Randy Moffitt for two insurance runs.

Expos halt Reds again

MONTREAL (UPI) — Ron Woods drove in four runs with a three-run homer and a double Saturday afternoon as Montreal picked up its fourth victory in a row by defeating Cincinnati 8-6.

The Expos were trailing 5-3 in the seventh inning when Ron Hunt and Tim Foli hit one-out singles. Woods followed with an opposite-field home run over the right-field fence off Cincinnati starter Don Gullett to give Montreal a 6-5 lead.

Surging White Sox win eighth in row

CHICAGO (AP) — Eddie Fisher and Terry Forster scattered eight hits in pitching Chicago to a 4-0 American League victory over the New York Yankees Saturday, the White Sox' third consecutive shutout and eighth triumph in a row, the team's longest winning streak in six years.

The White Sox scored single runs in each of the first two innings off loser Fritz Peterson and added another off Peterson in the fifth and one off Fred Beene in the sixth.

The White Sox mound staff boasts 28 consecutive scoreless innings and five shutouts in the eight-game winning streak. The victory for knuckleballer Fisher was his third against one loss and the save for Forster was his second in 24 hours following a combined shutout with Stan Bahnsen Friday night.

Astro hurler beats Mets but loses Derby pool

NEW YORK (UPI) — Don Wilson won one and lost one Saturday but he still came out ahead.

The strapping 6-foot-3, 205-pound righthander turned in his "best performance of the season by far" when he threw a four-hitter and contributed a booming three-run double in the Houston Astros' 9-2 route of the New York Mets in a nationally-televised contest.

Wilson drew a blank, however, when My Gallant, the horse he drew in the Astros' pool for the Kentucky Derby, finished out of the money.

Gaston hit beats Bucs

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Clarence Gaston singled home a run to break a 5-5 tie in the seventh inning Saturday night and give the San Diego Padres a 6-5 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

John Grubb and Nate Colbert hit singles before Gaston connected to drive loser Dock Ellis, (3-2), from the mound. It was Ellis' first loss in nine lifetime decisions against San Diego.

The Bird Ensenada winner

BY DON CULPEPPER
Staff Writer

Allen E. Puckett sailed his sloop, Black Bird, carrying the colors of the California Yacht Club of Marina del Rey, to an overall victory in the 26th annual Newport Beach-to-Ensenada Yacht Race. His time was slightly better than two other yachts in the Ocean Racing-A Class, although all of the top three, when handicapped, had just over 21 hours.

Even though Robert Hanel's Seabird (Cabrillo Beach YC), a catamaran, finished first in elapsed time, he had to give so much time away in the handicapping that he wasn't even listed in the first three of the catamaran division.

The highly favored Ragtime, 62-foot sloop owned by a syndicate of Long Beach YC men, was fourth to finish in elapsed time, but Ragtime also was handicapped heavily and didn't finish in the top five of her class.

Runners-up to Puckett were Interlude, Forrest E. Olson's Newport Harbor YC sloop in second place, and Harry C. Moloshco's Gypsy (Long Beach Yacht Club) in third position. In that same class A of Racing, Al Cassel skippered his Warrior (Bahia Corinthian YC of Corona del Mar) to fourth place just ahead of Jack Holleran's Tribute of the Long Beach YC.

Two other Long Beach skippers finished well up in the standings. Dr. John Holiday had second place in Ocean Racing-D with his Aquarius for the LBYC. Carl W. Coe, skippering Impetuous in Ocean Racing-E, had a second place for the Navy YC of Long Beach.

Alexander van Dyke (LBYC) had a third place in Pacific Handicap-C class with his Serena. P. H. Nododdorsky (Navy YC of Long Beach) finished right behind him in Trident.

Taylor Holmquist, also of the LBYC, picked up a second place in Midget Ocean Racing-B in his Dauntless. Walt Godshore (Seal Beach YC) had a fourth in that class with his Manu Kai. Seal Beach also had two catamarans in the first-to-finish group.

Complete results of the 13 classes, in which 558 boats participated:

OCEAN RACING-A — 1. Black Bird, Allen E. Puckett (California YC); 2. Interlude, Forrest E. Olson (Newport Harbor YC); 3. Gypsy, Harry C. Moloshco (Long Beach YC); 4. Warrior, Al Cassel (Bahia Corinthian YC); 5. Tribute, Jack Holleran (Long Beach YC).

Jofre wins WBC crown

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — Brazil's Eder Jofre punched out a majority 15-round decision over Jose Legra of Spain and won the World Boxing Council featherweight championship Saturday night.

American referee Jay Edson scored the fight 146-141 for the 37-year-old Jofre and Brazilian judge Newton Campos tallied it 148-143 for the winner.

Lakers resume series with N.Y.

By DOUG IVES
Staff Writer

NEW YORK CITY — Wilt Chamberlain ambled up 58th Avenue, looking just smaller than the Empire State Building, when a lad of 12 stopped him with a moving screen and said, "You gotta turn in on Reed and put the ball up."

Chamberlain, garbed in practice attire and heading for a workout one block from his hotel, shook his head incredulously and replied:

"I'm the greatest scorer the game has ever known and everybody still tells me how to play, even kids. You would think I would get a little credit for my intelligence."

Wilt should know better. He is the all-time fall guy in sports. When the Lakers lose, it is always because he didn't shoot, or didn't assert himself on defense, or didn't go to the offensive boards.

Sometimes that really is why his team lost. Most of the time it isn't.

The third game of deadlocked NBA Championship series will be staged between the Lakers and Knicks in Madison Square Garden today before a national television audience (Channel 7, 11 a.m.) and advice for Wilt has been cheap here.

"Steaming Wilt to be more offensive-minded," writes the Daily News. "Knicks expect Wilt to get into the offense more," says the Post. And so it goes. Wilt's on everybody's mind.

Will the Big Dipper really shoot more?

You couldn't find a clue by watching him practice Saturday at the New York Athletic Club, an exclusive all-male bastion which costs $1,000 for the right to sit in the lobby. In a 20-minute scrimmage, Wilt did not attempt a shot.

Most of the drill was light and breezy, and because there was nothing an enemy spy could learn, coach Bill Sharman did not lock the doors. About 100 watched, mostly club members. There is no way the brash kids could crack the security guard at the NYAC.

Or is there?

Jerry West had his warmup jacket stolen. It must have been some kid. How can you question the integrity of an NYAC member?

West was in an irritable mood, which is a good sign. He plays better when he's this way. But it could be he is concerned about the hamstring pull he suffered in the second game.

Typically, West didn't mention it after that game. He's no alibi-Ike and, what the heck, he scored 32 points.

"When the hamstring bothers him, he doesn't drive the basket, and we need his driving," points out Dr. Robert Kerlan, who says everyone is disgustingly healthy for this time of year.

Even Happy Hairston says he feels strong. He wants to play "if I can help the team" and Sharman says "maybe." But Pat Riley must be used first, because he might be able to stay with Bill Bradley, the series hero with 50 points.

"Playing aggressive defense," says Sharman, "is our No. 1 priority. We have to get through the picks and challenge the outside shooters. Reed, DeBusschere and Lucas set the best screens in the league, although last game they were allowed to set moving ones."

Sharman is less concerned about his offense, only because it usually straightens itself out after a bad game. The 95 points in game No. 2 was bad. It's the same old story. The Lakers must pass and cut, stay on the move and quit dribbling so much.

Even Sharman is tired of hearing himself mention this.

The Lakers clearly face a serious problem in their bid to gain a split here (the second game is Tuesday night) and regain the home-court advantage. They must contend with the smartest defense the league has known in many years. The Knicks are not only mechanically sound but intelligent enough to adjust to any situation.

For example, in the second game, the Lakers tried to isolate 7-footer Mel Counts on 6-5 Bradley. "Wilt went high to get me on Counts in low," Bradley recalled. But Willis (Reed) yelled for me to "get up high; I'll take Counts." So Bradley went out high, where he knew Chamberlain would never shoot, even if he got the ball, and Reed dropped back to shut off Counts.

Little things like that mean a lot in the Knicks' team concept. They are a thinking man's team on offense and defense, which compensates for lack of size and speed. The Lakers know this, and now they must devise something to test the New Yorkers.

Chamberlain going to the basket more is probably that added dimension. Whether or not this will bog down the Laker offense, or create havoc with the Knicks, remains to be seen.

Oddsmakers here favor the Knicks by three points.

Pacers tip Ky., even ABA series

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — The Indiana Pacers evened their American Basketball Association playoffs with the Kentucky Colonels at two games each with a 90-86 victory Saturday, taking a third-period lead on a midcourt steal and never giving it up.

Before a national television audience, the Pacers resorted to the muscle of George McGinnis, who had 20 points, Darnell Hillman, who had 17, and Mel Daniels, who added 14 more. The Pacers led at all quarter stops, 29-22, 48-45, 74-70.

Perhaps the key play in the game came late in the third period. Robbie Don Buse converted a midcourt steal into a 72-70 Indiana lead and the Pacers never trailed again.

Indiana operated under the tutorship of Gus Johnson in the last half as head coach Bobby Leonard was tossed out by referee Joe Gushue at the halftime buzzer.

Artis Gilmore, who had dominated the series the last two games, had four fouls the first half and picked up his fifth at 9:31 of the third quarter. The 7-2 center wound up with just 18 points and only six in the crucial last half.

Scoring for Indiana was well balanced. Freddie Lewis added 15 and six assists and Donny Freeman chipped in 11. Roger Brown came off the bench for eight crucial tallies in the last half.

The contest was enlivened late in the first half when Freeman and Kentucky's Rick Mount got into a fight emptying both benches. Referees called a double foul with no shooting involved.

The series now goes to Louisville Tuesday and returns to Indianapolis Thursday.

Administrators running Saturday's Moore League track finals at Poly High must have sensed athletes were in a hurry. The meet ended 20 minutes ahead of schedule.

From start to finish the league's best athletes put on a show that for excitement and good times probably hadn't been seen in five years.

Perhaps it was the enthusiastic turnout of more than 2,000 fans crowded into Burcham Field, perched on rooftops across the street or lining the fence along California Ave. that helped spur them on.

Whatever it was, it resulted in:

—J.T. Carr of Compton running a league record 9.6 in the 100 to overtake Poly's Roy Haggerty and Tarbabe Victor Wedlow who were clocked at 9.7.

—Millikan junior Mike Tully upping his own Long Beach and league pole vault record to 14-1¾.

—Ted Hammond of Compton extending out to a major league 25-1 in the long jump, the best prep mark in the state in 1973.

—Poly athletes Haggerty (49.2-440), Greg Moore (22.3-220), Elvie Howard (1:56.5-880), Jeff Haynes (4:19.6-mile), Ricky Wilder (14.9-120HH), Michael Gilliam (19.6-180 LH) and Howard Barbee (54-4½-shotput) turn in a flock of bluechip performances to record victories on their home track.

—Compton equal its CIF leading time in the 440 relay at 42.0 and collect the third meet record.

Carr, the defending CIF champion in the 100 who was only fourth in the league finals a year ago, overpowered Haggerty and Wedlow in the final 20 yards to move from third to first.

Wedlow was the early leader, with Haggerty making his move at 75 yards before Carr burst past his right shoulder.

The previous league record at 9.7 had been run three times in the finals, but not since 1966.

Carr had earlier anchored the Tarbabes' 440 relay team that had seen Poly nearly extend too far on the first handoff. The Jackrabbits were second at 42.5, Jordan third in a school record 42.6.

Hammond fouled on his first and last jumps, but in between had a series measuring: 22-11, 23-2, 24-5, 25-1. His last jump, a foul, was measured at 24-11¼. Breezes, gusting at times, helped his longest effort.

Tully went more than a foot higher than the second place finisher in the pole vault, finally retiring after two misses at 14-5. His winning record height came on his first attempt.

Haggerty, whose previous best in the quarter was 50.8, came from out of nowhere to run 49.2 which places him among the CIF's best this season.

Haynes broke Jim Chaffin's school record in the mile and was only three-tenths off another meet record. His time was all the more impressive considering the second place runner was 80 yards away when Haynes crossed the finish line.

Howard broke away from Reggie Smith of Compton on the backstretch to win the 880. Victories by Moore in the 220 and Gilliam in the low hurdles were considered surprises.

Other firsts went to Poly's Gary Brodie in the 2-mile (9:55.4) and Darryl Robinson of Jordan in the high jump (6-4).

Gliding upward and onward
Moore League track finals Saturday brought out the best in Compton High long jumper Ted Hammond (left) who sailed 25 feet, 1 inch and Poly hurdler Rickey Wilder who captured the highs in 14.9.

Diablos win two

John McGowan spun a two-hitter in the nightcap and John Saunders and Tim Corcoran collected seven hits between them in the opener to carry Cal State Los Angeles to 9-2 and 5-0 PCAA wins over UC Santa Barbara Saturday.

Cormaci hired by El Dorado

Frank Cormaci, a class A PGA pro for 25 years, will teach golf at El Dorado Golf Course, head pro Monty Blogett announced.

"He's one of the finest teachers in the United States," said Blodgett, a former protege.

Cormaci recently left Meadowlark after 23 years. He currently teaches former women's city champion Harriet Glanville and junior standout Marianne Stangeland. In past years he has given instruction to Dave Hill and Tommy Jacobs.

Lakewood captures gym title

Keith Porrazzo and Elliot Schnee turned in brilliant performances as Lakewood High ran away with another Moore League gymnastics championship late Friday night at Wilson.

Porrazzo won the long horse, free exercise and parallel bars while Schnee compiled an outstanding 9.05 on the rings.

Lancer Jim Martin didn't successfully defend his title in the side horse, but the championship still remained in the family as younger brother Frank emerged on top.

Only non-Lakewood athlete to take a first was Poly junior James Taylor on the high bar. Taylor also won all-around honors, nipping Porrazzo 42.8-40.15. Taylor scored enough points Friday (19) to place Poly second to Lakewood (53) in the meet and third over-all behind the Lancers and Wilson.

MOORE LEAGUE GYMNASTIC CHAMPIONSHIPS

Long horse — Porrazzo (L) 8.5, Ifson (W) 8.4, Taylor (P) 8.25, tie between Slocox (W) and Futurron (M) 8.2, Stevenson (M) 8.1.

Final standings (based on dual meets and championships): Lakewood 9, Wilson 6, Poly 5, Millikan 4, Jordan 1.

These are actual photographs of tests conducted up a ski slope at Bromley Mountain in Vermont.

Five cars were entered, all with standard equipment: a Volkswagen, a Toyota, a Datsun, a Pinto and a Fiat 128. In seven tries, only one car ever made it to the top. The front-wheel drive Fiat 128, with standard radial tires.

And it made it seven out of seven times.

Crampton stretches golf lead

HOUSTON (AP) — Bruce Crampton benefitted from a miracle par as he stretched his lead to four strokes — matching the biggest 54-hole margin of the year — with a five-under-par 67 Saturday in the third round of the $205,000 Houston Open Golf Tournament.

The 37-year-old Australian, who held a two-stroke lead when play started on the cool, cloudy, windy day, made one of the biggest saves of his life on the par-four 17th hole — where he could have blown his entire advantage.

He hit his tee shot out of bounds. The tight-lipped, grim-faced veteran then went back to the tee to hit No. 3 and this time, drove it on the fairway. Then, he holed his approach shot from about 115 yards, for a par four. His usually dour countenance broke into a broad smile as the ball hit a few feet above the cup and the backspin carried it in the hole like a rabbit ducking in its burrow.

That saved a three-round total of 205, 11-under-par on the 6,095-yard Quail Valley Golf Club course and a big margin over tour sophomore Lanny Wadkins.

Wadkins, the youthful winner of the Byron Nelson Classic last week, was the only man in the surprising field of 82 able to keep Crampton in sight. Wadkins had a 69 for 209. It was two more strokes back to former PGA champion Dave Stockton, who was alone in third with a 70-211.

Amateur Ben Crenshaw and Leonard Thompson followed at 212. Thompson shot a 69 and Crenshaw, a 20-year-old University of Texas student, matched par 72 despite a double bogey six on the ninth hole.

Prentice, Rankin in LPGA lead

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Jo Ann Prentice and Judy Rankin shot 70 and 72 respectively, Saturday to move into a tie for the lead in the LPGA Raleigh Golf Classic at one-over-par 145.

The two pros hold a one-stroke lead over Sandra Palmer and Kathy Whitworth going into Sunday's final round of the $30,000 tournament at the 6,300-yard Raleigh Country Club course.

Sue Roberts, the first round leader with a 70, found the wind bothersome Saturday and soared to a 79 for a 149 total.

Miss Prentice was one of only three golfers able to break par and no one was able to crack the 70 barrier.

Miss Whitworth, a three-time champion here, had a second straight 73 and Miss Palmer, the 1972 titleholder's champion, had a 72 on the way to their 146 totals.

49ER CREW NIPS BRUINS

Long Beach State pulled to a "decisive" six-foot victory over UCLA Saturday in an intercollegiate crew race in Marine Stadium.

The 49ers improved their dual meet record to 2-3 with the victory while the defeat kept the Bruins winless. No time was kept for the 49ers' sprint down the Stadium's blustery 2,000-meter course.

The 49ers also won the junior varsity and lightweight fours events while the Bruins won the frosh and lightweight eight competitions.

The Long Beach State girls' team finished one-two in a special 1,000-meter race for fours.

Young Ford wins tee tournament

PINEHURST, N.C. (UPI) — Mike Ford of Yonkers, N.Y., son of former Masters champion Doug Ford, parred the 38th hole to defeat Bill Harvey of Jamestown, N.C., one-up Saturday to win the 73rd North and South men's amateur golf championship.

Incredulous victims of a triple play in the 10th inning, Long Beach City College got swift revenge with seven runs in the 11th to beat El Camino 10-3 and run their consecutive win streak to 17 Saturday on the losers' diamond.

Since the Vikings have already clinched the second round of Metropolitan Conference play, the win had no effect on league standings but did serve as a tune-up for next week's playoff with Valley, first round winners, for the Metro championship and the right to move on to southern regional playoffs.

After regulation play ended with a 3-3 standoff, LBCC went right to work in the 10th.

Bill Simpson doubled, and Rick Hamblin and Jack Sagehorn both walked to fill the bases with none out.

Doug Matter worked the count to 3-and-2 and then hit at low screamer towards third.

Warrior third sacker Ron Peake made a scrambling stop to his left, fell to one knee, and then regained his balance to throw home ahead of Simpson.

El Camino catcher Jack Simpson whirled to try for a throw to first to double Matter, but the throw on the forceout was wide and Matter doubled, and a contest which might have been the subject of heated oratory was safely in the win column for the Vikings.

LBCC assistant coach Bob Myers, handling the team during Joe Hicks' scouting assignment for Valley, protested mildly that Bill Simpson had scored because Jack Simpson had dropped the throw on the forceout.

Plate umpire Mal Alexander signaled for play to begin, but then El Camino coach Doug Essick came storming out on the field and engaged in a heated argument with Alexander.

Seemingly Essick lost his argument, the substance of which was not known to fans in the stands.

Just as play seemed ready to begin again, base umpire Ken Wheeler came in from his second base post and engaged Alexander in conversation.

Myers came back on the field and soon was seeen gesticulating wildly and talking heatedly with both umpires.

In the meantime the El Camino pitcher had tossed the ball to third base, and Peake had relayed it to second.

The Vikings, who just a few minutes earlier, seemed still to be threatening with the bases loaded and only one out, then put down their bats and picked up their gloves, and Alexander informed the public address anouncer that Wheeler had ruled that Peake had caught Matter's line shot, that Bill Simpson, who seemingly was forced at the plate was out, for not returning to third after the and that Hamblin who had taken third on the play was out for not returning to second.

No one, including Essick who was questioned about the play after the game, could explain why Peake, whom Wheeler claimed caught Matter's drive, had not tried to double up Simpson instead of throwing to the plate to force him.

With one out in the 11th, Greg Commentz singled, Craig Gioia doubled, Pat O' Sullivan walked, Bob Muenzer, Simpson and Hamblin singled, John Sagehorn reached first on an error and Matter doubled, and a contest which might have been the subject of heated oratory was safely in the win column for the Vikings.

49ers win PCAA net tourney

SAN JOSE (Special) — Neal Bessent and Tom Smith broke a tie with a four-point doubles victory Saturday and Long Beach State went on to end San Jose State's reign as king of Pacific Coast Athletic Assn. tennis.

Bessent and Smith received four points for their semifinal triumph over a UC Santa Barbara team because the 49er duo had drawn a first-round bye.

Those four points blunted a San Jose State bid which had seen the Spartans, four-time defending conference champions, make up a six-point deficit in the team totals to tie the 49ers, 32-32, at the end of singles competition.

Using those points, the 49ers, coached by Dan Campbell, went on to collect a total of 42.

Cougar joins equine elite

Cougar II won his way into the exclusive equine millionaire's club by taking the $110,250 Century Handicap at Hollywood Park Saturday for the second year in a row.

The "Big Cat" from Chile, ridden by Bill Shoemaker, went the 1 ⅜ miles on grass in 2:13 2-5 to earn $65,250 and boost his overall earnings to $1,006,641.

He becomes the 11th thoroughbred in history to win more than $1 million in a racing career.

Susan's Girl, the only girl in the race, set the pace most of the way before Shoemaker on the final turn sent Cougar into the lead to win by 3 ½ lengths with Wing Out second and Life Cycle third with Susan's Girl finishing fourth.

For Cougar it was his 19th victory in 45 starts and for Shoemaker his 97th triumph in races worth $100,000 or more and his 6,479th win overall.

Cougar went off the even-money favorite in the field of 11 despite carrying the high weight of 127 pounds. His victory, well off his own record of 2:11 for the distance last year, returned $4, $3.40 and $2.60.

The longshot Wing Out $9.40 and $5.40 and Life Cycle $5.40.

Big Spruce and Queen's Hustler, who spoiled Cougar's millionaire club bid at Santa Anita in two races, finished out of the money this time.

Susan's Girl, ridden by John Rotz and carrying 119 pounds, took the lead at the start and held it into the turn for home. Life Cycle, making his Hollywood Park debut, remained on her heels with Eastern jockey Frank Ianelli riding.

Royal Owl, winner of the Strub Stakes at Santa Anita, kept the pressure on the two leaders with Dougar in sixth place at the far turn in the race before a crowd of 45,411.

Shoemaker made his move on the turn for home and urged the grass course champion of 1972 into the lead.

Wing Out, with Fernando Toro and 118 pounds, also surged ahead of Life Cycle as all three of the mal runners went ahead of Susan's Girl.

Wing Out finished 3 ¼ lengths ahead of Life Cycle in the sprint out finish of this first hundred-grander at Holly Park.

Mary F. Jones' Cougar also became the third to pass the million dollar mark at Hollywood Park, Citation and Native Diver having done it previously.

The track was fast and the weather sunny for the grass course confrontation of the West's best with five of the 11 runners already a winner of a $100,000 race this year.

Cougar had captured the Santa Anita Handicap, Susan's Girl the Santa Margarita, Royal Owl the Strub, Bit Spruce the San Luis Ray and Queen's Hustler, the San Juan Capistrano, all at Santa Anita.

Ironically, it was the lesser lights which gave Cougar his biggest trouble.

Shoemaker, who has won more races than any jockey ever in the world, had won his 96th hundred-grand win aboard Cougar last fall in the Oak Tree Invitational at Santa Anita but hadn't won a $100,000 race before in 1973.

Shoemaker declared, "Cougar seems every bit as good right now as he's ever been."

Owner Mary Jones added, however, "He really won't have a shot at $2 million. We're definitely going to retire him after this season, but no plans have been made as yet where he'll stand in stud."

Jockey Rotz said of Susan's Girl, "She really gave it her best, but of course I would have liked to have something running in front of me. It was a pleasure to ride her."

Trainer Charlie Whittingham, who saddled Cougar, said, "He always runs better at Hollywood Park than at Santa Anita. You know, a lot of us old men like it better in the summer than in the winter."

Whittingham indicated Cougar would make his next start in the Hollywood Invitational, scheduled Sunday, May 22.

Rosemary wins richest gals' tennis purse

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Rosemary Casals took the largest purse ever in professional women's tennis history Saturday when she beat Nancy Gunter 3-6, 6-1, 7-5 and finals of the Family Circle Professional Women's Tennis Tournament.

The top prize was $30,000 in the $100,000 contest. Miss Gunter took second with $12,200.

Miss Casals termed her victory "one of the most satisfying wins of my career." She credited her victory, for the most part, to her smashes and drop shots.

Denmark star wins fourth bicycle medal

ENCINO, Calif. (UPI) — Reno Olsen of Denmark claimed his fourth gold medal in the U.S. Grand Prix of Bicycling Saturday by winning the 20,000 meter event as the Danes continued to dominate the seven-day competition.

Denmark has won six of 10 races in the Grand Prix, which concludes today.

Jim Ochowicz of Detroit finished second and Ron Skarin, second-leading medal winner, of Van Nuys, Calif., finished third.

Skarin has one gold medal, four silvers and two bronze.

Ed McRae of Canada won the 750 meter handicap, with Ian Ahterly, Trinidad, and Orlando Bates, Barbados, finishing second and third respectively.

Savage just misses 200 Indy warmup

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (UPI) — Swede Savage missed cracking the 200 mph barrier by .05 of a second at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway during 500 practice Saturday.

Savage, from Santa Ana, Calif., took over the speed lead with a top lap of 197.802 mph. His lap was timed at 45.05 seconds. A 45-second flat time would equal 200 mph.

Gary Bettenhausen of Tinley Park, Ill., Johnny Rutherford of Fort Worth, Tex., and Gordon Johncock of Franklin, Ind., also hiked their speeds Saturday, each running in the 195 range.

Dancer toys with 7 rivals

Odds-on choice Dancer George completed a clean sweep in winning the $28,075 Great Southwest Pacing Championship and Bobby Williams all but wrapped up the 1973 driving title Saturday night at Los Alamitos Race Course.

Bet down to the 2-to-5 choice, Dancer George simply toyed with seven rivals to score by 3½ lengths in 2:01 3/5. Kiley Moraka was second with Jim Miller and Jazzy Admiral third with Ray Richmond.

Williams was picking up his third win of the night behind the four-year-odd son of Dancer Hangover who also had accounted for the previous two legs of the Great Southwest. Dancer George, coming off a second-place finish behind Windy Way when he set the track record of 1:57 4/5, was taking his fourth win in seven starts this year.

Dancer George pulled out of third coming off the first turn and took the lead coming past the grandstand after a first quarter of 31. From that point on after a moderate half of 1:01 2/5, it was a battle for second money.

Kiley Moraka rallied out of fifth on the backstretch and was easily the best of Jazzy Admiral in the quarter of mile.

Owned by George Leroy of Skokie, Ill. Dancer George came the final half mile in 1:00 1/5 and paid $2.80 to win and $2.20 across the board. Kiley Moraka returned $4.60 and $3.00 and Jazzy Admiral paid $3.60 to show.

The three wins through the first seven races on the program upped Williams win total to 41. Jack Bailey, second in the standings with 35 victories, was in Chicago and will have to have a hot hand to catch Williams in the final six nights of dancing.

Golden Gate Sunday program canceled

ALBANY (UPI) — The scheduled start of experimental Sunday racing at Golden Gate Fields was cancelled Saturday because of a labor dispute with track janitors and parimutuel clerks.

The Tanforan Racing Assn., which had scheduled the series of seven Sabbath programs to begin today, asked the California Horse Racing Board for permission to reschedule today's races for Tuesday.

COUGAR II broke smoothly, dropped back, saved ground, moved nearer from between horses midway, waited for room on the final turn, rallied from the middle of the track when straightened for the drive, wore down the leaders to take command and won convincingly. WING OUT lacked early speed, rallied wide on the final turn and improved his position in the final furlong but did not really threaten the winner in the closing stages. LIFE CYCLE broke in stride to prompt the early pace, saved something for the drive and held as best he could. SUSAN'S GIRL took a clear early lead without need of urging then lacked renewed energy in the last furlong and slackened. MANITOULIN checked early when blocked on the rail and made up some ground when clear. BIG SPRUCE had no early speed, lost ground and finished in a rally. CICERO'S COURT loomed a threat along the rail at the three-sixteenth pole, checked when in tight and tired. QUEEN'S HUSTLER was outrun. RED ORANGE took up early. ROYAL OWL was an early factor and faltered.

DERBY—

just close behind with Pincay riding easily and waiting for his chance.

After the first three quarters, Shecky Greene still was in front, but obviously beginning to tire as the others began to challenge his sprinting speed in earnest.

But the Derby, as it has for all those years, was run most importantly down the Churchill Downs stretch where thousands of dreams have gone up in dust and sweat.

Sham surged in front as the field straightened out, but Secretariat was taking dead aim by that time just a half a length behind. Our Native had gotten to third, but was still six lengths back of the top pair.

Angle Light, Secretariat's running mate, seemingly had a shot at the golds and glory early in the race, when he was running fifth, but he faded badly and wound up 10th.

However, the bleeding from the nose that he suffered after a gallop on Friday, gave him no trouble in the Derby. He came back to the barn in fine shape and ready to run again for his owner, Edwin Whittaker.

The 99th Derby also answered the feud that had developed between Pancho Martin, trainer of Sham, and Laurin. Martin had been miffed after Laurin said nobody could beat Secretariat without help. His comment after the race: "I have no comment. I have too much headache."

The crowd of 134,476 wagered $7,627,965 on the 10-race program, $3,284,962 on the Kentucky Derby itself.

Last year, also a record season, 130,564 wagered $7,164,717 on the Derby Day card and $2,885,325 on the Derby.

That's the ticket

Turcotte: 'I just let him run'

LOUISVILLE (AP) — Ron Turcotte just let Secretariat run his race in the Kentucky Derby and his fellow jockeys agreed it was overwhelming.

"I still had a lot of horse left, but the other horse was just too much horse," said Laffit Pincay, who rode Sham to a second-place finish, 2 ¼ lengths behind Secretariat at the end of the fastest and richest Derby ever run.

"I never asked him to run," said Turcotte, following his 1 ¼-mile trip in 1:59 2/5. "I let him run, but I never asked him. He was going very easy. In the stretch, I didn't see any challenge, and he just put it away."

"He's a great horse," said Secretariat's trainer, Lucien Laurin, who was under tremendous pressure in the aftermath of Secretariat's upset loss in the Wood Memorial and amid rumors that the 1972 Horse of the Year was not fit.

"I know he didn't run his race two weeks ago," said Turcotte, "but I had confidence today."

Secretariat's victory was $155,050.

Asked to compare Secretariat with Riva Ridge, with whom he had won the Derby last year, Turcotte replied: "I love them both."

"Yeah, I guess so," Pincay replied when asked if he thought Secretariat was a great horse.

"When the other horse came on, he (Sham) just didn't have enough left," said Pincay.

"Maybe next time," he added, referring to the May 19 Preakness, the next race in the Triple Crown series.

"He ran a good race," said Don Brumfield, who rode thirdplace Our Native.

"At the end, he wasn't making any ground on the first two.

"He did everything the trainer wanted but win," said Larry Adams, who rode sixth-place Shecky Greene.

Pete Anderson, who rode Forego to a fourth-place finish, said Secretariat and Sham "would make it difficult for anybody else in the Preakness. It's hard to make up eight or nine lengths."

"Those rumors, I never heard so many rumors," Laurin said.

The trainer of the handsome chestnut champion acknowledged that he had been under tremendous pressure during the past week because of recurring reports that he might be hiding an injury to Secretariat.

There were rumors that Secretariat was being secretly treated for inflammation in the leg with ice packs.

"Someone came up to me before the race and said he was sorry for me," the Canadian-born former jockey related. "I asked him why. He said because he'd heard we had to scratch Secretariat."

Rumors of undisclosed ailments, most of them emanating from Secretariat's disappointing third-place finish in the Wood Memorial at New York's Aqueduct, were only a part of Laurin's pressures the week preceding the Derby.

Frank (Pancho) Martin, Cuba-born and fiery trainer of Sham, had levelled strong attacks at the Secretariat trainer, charging he was a poor loser.

Martin vowed his horse, Sham, would beat Secretariat in the big race and even offered to wager $5,000 of his personal money on a duel between the two favorites.

Laurin, a mild-mannered little man, declined to enter into the controversy and after the race failed to gloat over his victory.

"He's a great horse," Laurin said of Secretariat, "and his knees are in good shape."

Martin was disappointed after the race.

"I have too much headache to talk," he said, refusing to enlarge upon his feud with Laurin.

"It was a good race and everything was fair. I have no complaints about my horse. Now we get ready for the Preakness."

Laurin has said from the outset that Secretariat was a superior horse to Riva Ridge, winner of the 1972 Derby and Belmont Stakes, whom he trained for Mrs. Tweedy.

It was a great triumph for Mrs. Tweedy, although she has syndicated Secretariat for stud for fall delivery in a 6.08 million deal.

Mrs. Tweedy was overjoyed at the triumph.

"Oh boy, I feel marvelous," she said, as the horseshoe of roses was placed around Secretariat's neck. "There are a lot of happy co owners here."

There were 32 shares at $197,000 each in the syndicate deal, with Mrs. Tweedy retaining four shares. The contract goes into effect in November.

Orientation or tryout camp?

Knox meets Ram hopefuls

By RICH ROBERTS
Staff Writer

It wasn't meant to be a tryout camp. That was two weeks earlier.

But the Rams' orientation sessions at Long Beach State this weekend will help determine the football futures of an undersized quarterback, for one, and an oversized running back, for two.

Sonny Sixkiller, rejected in the National Football League draft four months ago, and Andy Livingston, discarded by the Philadelphia Eagles two years ago, were among 65 players, including 38 veterans, who reported to new coach Chuck Knox Saturday.

"I'm just hoping to satisfy myself as to whether I can hack it or not," said Sixkiller, the former Washington U. slingshot who signed a free agent contract with the Rams Friday night.

"I'm just here to prove that I can still do what they thought I couldn't do," said Livingston, 28, who rushed for 761 yards with New Orleans in 1969 after five seasons with the Chicago Bears.

An old pal from the Bears, Dick Gordon, "had a lot to do with me being here," said Livingston, who admitted to packing extra weight around his belt but showed quickness and good leg drive in the no-pads drills.

"I'm a little heavy now, but I feel good," he said.

Livingston's last season was 1970 when he missed all but one game because of injury. The Saints then traded him to the Eagles, who released him prior to the '71 campaign.

Being thin at running back after trading away Willie Ellison and Bobby Thomas, the Rams are overlooking no possibilities. Former Poly High, LBCC and Utah State player Ed Giles, who was signed out of the tryouts two weeks ago, was among those present Saturday.

The absentees were perhaps more noteworthy. They included Roman Gabriel, who wasn't really expected to appear; defensive back Jerry Logan, who hasn't decided whether to retire after the trade from Baltimore; cornerback Gene Howard, who had a National Guard commitment, and linebackers Marlin McKeever and Bob Stein (acquired from Kansas City), who were excused because they are recuperating from knee surgery.

The attention focused on the passers—John Hadl, James Harris, Ron Jaworski and Sixkiller—and their receivers, who included Olympic hurdles gold medalist Rod Milburn, a 13th-round draft pick, and Lance Rentzell, Rentzel, who was not allowing the May 22 sentencing on a drug conviction to interfere with his career.

Hadl, an 11-year veteran of the San Diego Chargers, complained that "my arm's a little stiff and sore, but that's to be expected since we've been throwing all week."

The QBs and receivers have been exercising at Blair Field for several days.

Because of school, Sixkiller was not asked to report until Saturday and did not arrive with artificial optimism about his chances.

"I don't know why you want to talk to me, with all these other guys around," he responded to a request for a brief interview.

The 5-11 ex-Husky believes he wasn't drafted for two reasons: "First, my height and, second, a bad senior year."

Sixkiller led the nation in passing as a sophomore but blames his decline on "pressure from the public and the coaching staff."

He said he was "forced" to submit to a cover story in Sports Illustrated after personally refusing three times.

When the Rams called, he didn't refuse.

"I had called some teams around the league just trying to get an honest opinion," he said. "Most of them suggested I go to Canada, but I don't want to do that. I'm going to see what happens here first."

HOW DO YOU STOP IT?
This is just one of hundreds of signs that are destroyed each year by vandals. The cost of vandalism in California's national forests alone is more than one-half million dollars a year.

DONNELL CULPEPPER

Become involved, look for vandals

The summer travel and camping season draws nearer and officials of the U.S. Forest Service in California are hoping, just hoping, that the public this year will be more considerate of the facilities in the state's 17 national forests and not leave a vandalism damage bill of more than one-half million dollars.

Vandalism has been increasing each year, says Doug R. Leisz, U.S. regional forester at San Francisco. He continues: "The greatest damage has been occurring to developed recreational sites provided by the U.S. Forest Service for public use and enjoyment.

"The areas hardest hit are campgrounds, picnic areas, roadside vista points, beaches, nature trails and boat-launching ramps. Vandalism has occurred to restrooms where doors, shingles and siding have been torn down or shot to pieces.

"Concrete stoves have been broken to bits, fences and gates torn down, campground ticket offices destroyed and rocks and monuments have been sprayed permanently with paint. Much of the damage has been done by rock throwing, pistol and rifle shooting, axes and by automobiles in and around our recreational areas. Vandalism is hurting all of us.

"The tax dollar used to repair public facilities would have built three new 50-unit campgrounds. Some campers have been a big help in reporting vandalism when it is occurring, and we hope that we will have more who are willing to do this."

THERE IS NO REASON AT ALL why decent citizens witnessing littering and vandalism should not report it immediately. There is nothing more infuriating than to spend hours, even days, in reaching a place that you expect to be beautiful and then find the paint sprayers have been there. Perhaps they have written only their names, but in many cases they have added obscene words that are revolting.

Far too many citizens these days adopt that "why worry" and "why bother" attitude. Others are afraid to "become involved." If this country's beauty is to remain, it's about time that everybody who is decent becomes involved in preserving what we have. You can't make a citizen's arrest but you can bring about in many cases the arrest of those who are ruining the countryside.

Changing our pace, but staying with the national forests, Ed Waldapfel, public information officer for the Inyo National Forest, announces that reservations for camping in the Rock Creek Drainage and Mammoth Lakes Basin in the Inyo Forest may be made, starting May 22.

Everett Towle, Inyo's supervisor, says that the following campgrounds have been placed on a reservations basis after June 22: Rock Creek Drainage (west of Tom's Place on Hwy. 395) — Iris Meadow, Rock Creek, Big Meadow and East Fork Campgrounds; Mammoth Basin — Lake Mary, Coldwater, Twin Lakes and Lake George. To make a reservation, go to any Ticketron sales terminal.

RESERVATIONS MAY BE MADE NO earlier than 30 days in advance of a trip and no later than seven days ahead of the arrival time. Towle said that the reservation system was being conducted on a trial basis this year. He added that Inyo was participating with San Bernardino National Forest in this year's pilot program.

The San Bernardino National Forest has placed 15 group campgrounds and 12 family campgrounds under the reservation system. The limit of stay is seven days in most camps, with 14 days in two of the Inyo camps.

At the same time the National Park Service is scheduled to start a similar program for Yosemite, Yellowstone and Grand Teton National Parks in the west, plus one in Florida and another in Maine and a sixth at Grand Canyon in Arizona. However, the National Park Service plans to take reservations through the American Express travel offices throughout the United States. Ramada Inns and some Hertz Rent-a-Car offices also will handle some reservations.

Slowly, but surely the parks and national forests will come into the computerized era that is affecting virtually all of us in America.

However, the computers have done nothing to stop vandalism, and it's doubtful that they ever will, so it's still up to the nature-loving citizens of this country to keep doing their best to keep it beautiful and clean.

Skiers meet on Queen Mary

The Far West Ski Assn., with skiers from California, Nevada, Arizona and Hawaii, will hold its annual convention on the Queen Mary this weekend.

Meetings will be conducted Saturday and Sunday for election of officers and to finalize ski plans for next season.

Local skiers, who are not members of the Ski Assn, are invited to attend the event.

Long Beach Arts Festival

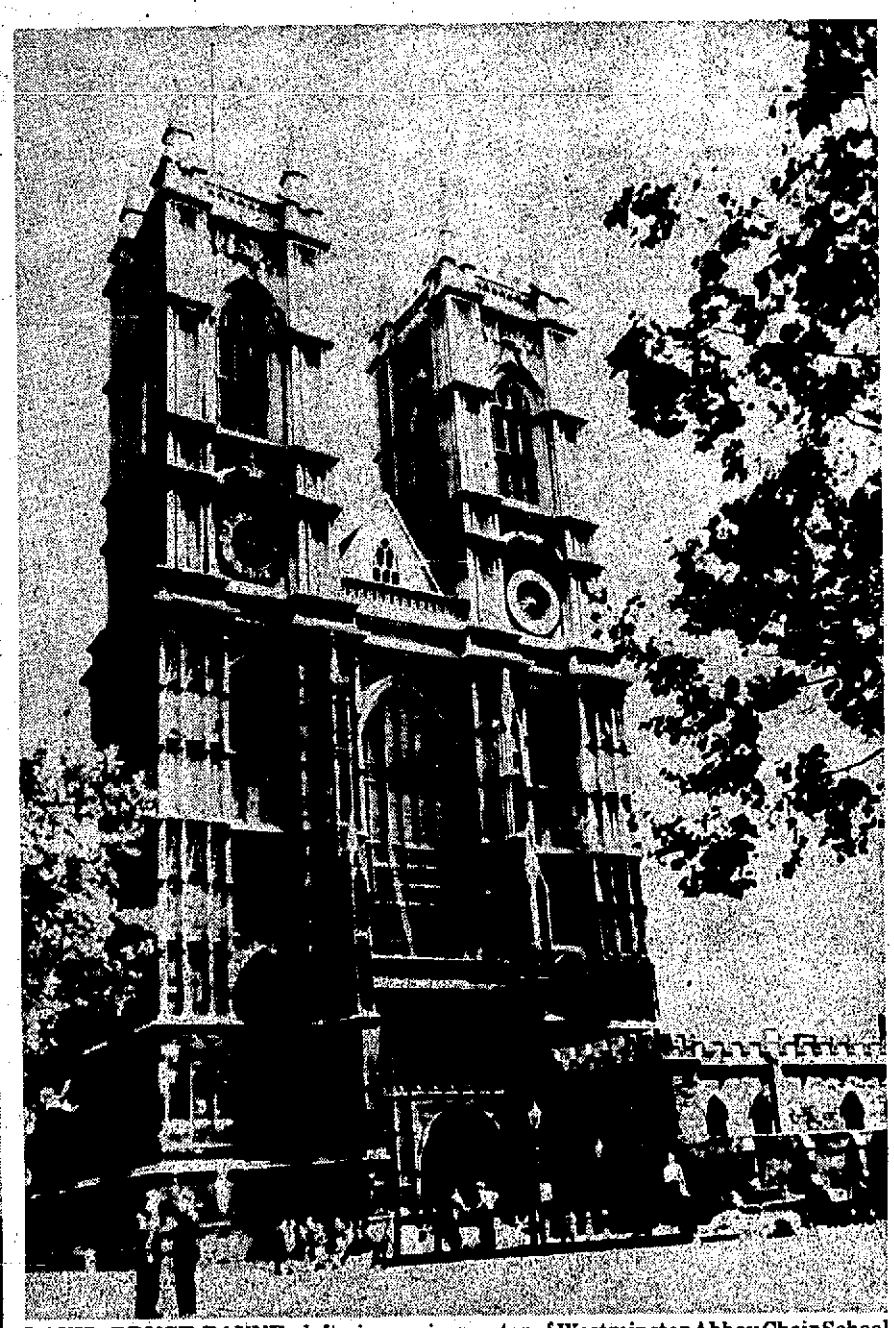

Merry mood for May

The first annual Festival of the Arts, sponsored by Long Beach Regional Arts Council, will open Friday and close May 20—officially.

But this is a festival that can't wait to happen. It's already underway, as a matter of fact, and will speed merrily through the entire month of May. After all, there are 43 member organizations in the Arts Council, each eager to take part in the celebration.

Explains Mrs. Mark Day Miner, Arts Council president, "This festival is sponsored with two aims in mind: to afford a showplace for the various performing and visual arts and to acquaint the community with the wealth of talent and ability it possesses. The basic concept is to provide soul-satisfying enjoyment for viewer and participant alike. It is our intention to have some event occurring every morning, afternoon and evening of the 10 days devoted to the festival.

"To that end, we have encouraged every art and cultural group in the area to take part, whether a member of the Long Beach Regional Arts Council or not. Only by working together can we get to know each other and let the public see what satisfaction and fun can be found in art and culture."

It was more than a year ago that Topper Smith, then manager of the Long Beach Symphony, proposed a festival in which the entire city could participate.

Because the city's landmark is the Queen Mary, a British theme was chosen. The late Burton W. Chace, who was then a Los Angeles County Supervisor, accepted the role of honorary chairman. After his death in a freeway traffic accident in December, 1972, festival organizers dedicated the event to his memory and asked Mrs. Chace to serve in his stead.

In past months, the festival steering committee, of which Marylou Dunn is chairman, has scheduled dozens of art exhibits, musical performances, dramas and special events.

DURING the official festival period, the first formal event will be a concert Friday by the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra which Zubin Mehta will conduct. The program will begin at 8:15 p.m. in Millikan High School Auditorium. Just after the concert, a reception aboard the Queen Mary will offer contrasting entertainment —the Anderson Highlanders Pipe Band, whose lusty bagpipe playing has enlivened such motion pictures as "Hello, Dolly!" and "Young Rebels." They were in Long Beach Civic Light Opera's "Brigadoon" and piped for the ceremonious opening of the Queen Mary herself. A competition band, they will compete in the Highland Games at Santa Monica June 27.

A short dedicatory program will be given by 25 selected singers of Long Beach State University Choir under the direction of Wes Reed. Supervisor James A. Hayes will present the Key to the City of Long Beach to Mehta and Andrew Franklin, British Consul General will make a brief welcoming speech.

That's the official part. Meanwhile, anticipating this gala opening, costumed youngsters yesterday performed the music and dances of Mexico, England and Hawaii at Drake, Wardlow and College Estates parks. Eight similar festivals are scheduled through May 19 and there will be picnics featuring the foods of various cultures.

LONG BEACH'S own Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Alberto Bolet, will play a British Festival Concert next Sunday at 7:30 p.m. in

See FESTIVAL, Page W-8

MICHAEL BURGESS, Richard Foster and John Hickam are members of Anderson Highlanders Pipe Band that will play at Arts Festival reception Friday night aboard the Queen Mary.

Men's libbers cancel costumes

By CAROLYN McDOWELL

THIS IS a story about a costume party that wasn't.

Nightingales sent invitations to a Circus Party at the home of Joe and Laurie Scanlon.

In keeping with the circus motif, they tented the Scanlon's side yard with a gaily striped tent in green and white and hung cut outs of circus animals in cages, everywhere.

They even rented a pop-corn machine to lend authenticity.

Then MEN'S lib got into the act.

Husbands of committee members refused to display their bodies in costume.

So-oo the committee gals rationalized that if they couldn't get THEIR husbands to show up in costume, they couldn't expect anyone else to either.

Nobody really cared, they had a grand time anyway.

Rebels and their committee wives included Bill and Judy McMurray, Bob and Linda Benson, Pete and Linda Gunderson, Charles and Diane Cooper.

Other plain clothes types were Bernie and Nancy Coughlin, Dick and Connie Foreman, Jerry and Carol Edgmon, President Gerrie and husband Gary, Eldred, Bob and Gay McKernie, Glen and Walli Richardson and Dick and Pat Watkins.

More were the Cruchleys, Dr. Ed and Bev and Al and Kaye, John and Lolly Champion, Bill and Ardella Horsfall, Charles and Jan Sparrer and Bob and Tami Dienstag, circus circus all over town.

IT WAS circus circus all over town.

The same night the Nightingales were "Under the Big Top", the GOP Juniors were too.

They had their circus-themed party at Lakewood Country Club and tossed in a Casino ala Las Vegas to aid in fun and fund raising.

Big winner of the evening ended up with a half a million dollars in bogus bills, but like so many tycoons, he prefers to remain anonymous.

Besides, I forgot to get his name.

A life-sized pink (pink?—that's what they said) lion in a cage welcomed guests at the door.

Many of the guests had come from pre-parties at the homes of Phil and Jean Lockwood, Hal and Judy Daniels, Roger and Virginia Wright, Dick and Stella Smith, Richard and Betty Gallup and Juniors President, Jan Hall and Jack.

Jack and Jan returned from Palm Springs at noon the day of the party. They didn't have much to do to get ready for the party.

Just assemble a stero book-case wall that had been delivered in their absence and was in the middle of the floor.

Cope with young Jill, Jody and Jaclyn who came down with the chicken pox. That was easy. The kids weren't too sick to blow up 100 balloons for the party and it kept 'em busy.

Jan produced a half gallon of Swedish meatballs only to discover that she had forgotten to borrow her neighbor's chafing dish and neighbor wasn't home.

Turned out all right though.

Neighbors, Chuck and Carol Greenberg, came to the party and automatically brought it with them as Jan ALWAYS borrows it for parties.

Some of the Hall's guests were Sen. George and Gloria Deukmejian, Dr. Stephen and Nini Horn, Ed and Barbara Bragg, Russ and Pat Loftman, Pete and Nan Drake, Tony and Rosemary Scott, Joe and Connie Ainge, Sumner and Diane Offill, Joe and India Nangano (Sumner and Joe served as auctioneers at the buffet dance later) and Joe and Rose Lozano.

Also Jim and Mary Watson, Bob and Naida Hanson, Jack and Tracy Kittinger, Ray and Phyllis Bredenkamp, Marion Traub and Bill and Nada Davis.

THE MOVIE was rated X.

The party got an A.

Invitations hand painted on glass, by hostesses, Judy Barrick and Tish Kernochan, lured more than two score guests to a showing of "Last Tango in Paris" and a post-movie bash.

Judy, Tish and their respective spouses, Bill and Cliff, engaged the wine celler at Ollie Hammond's La Cienega restaurant for the party.

Movie reviews were mixed but party gaiety was unanimous.

Lynee McCarty and Dick and Carol Swanberg were the lucky winners of original "tango type" paintings by Jeri Poppler.

John and Nancy McNaughton were the lucky (?) winners of a trench coat with Marlon Brando's autograph (forged) on the back.

Barbara Wells took Bobbie Poppler as her "date" because Bobbie was celebrating her birthday that evening.

Other movie critics included Fred and Willie Peters, Dr. Sel and Sherri Beebe, Dr. Dick and Bea Smith, Tracy Claus with Roberta Kenochan, Tom and Jody Ramsey, Don Stewart, John and Jayne Lane, Stan and Marsha Wise and Henry and Gizella Kernand son, Bill.

BOB WHEELER pins nametag on wife, Bonne, so she will know who she is. Nametags were for Nightingales and guests at circus gala. See Socially Speaking for story.

Couples recite vows

Whitley-Kendrick

A first home in Garden Grove awaits newly wed Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth W. Whitley (Kathryn Sue Kendrick) after a wedding Saturday afternoon at Olive Heights Wedding Chapel, Orange.

Kathy Peterson was maid of honor for the bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Kendrick Jr. of Buena Park. The bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Whitley of Los Alamitos, asked Thomas Johnson to be best man.

The new Mrs. Whitley was graduated from Savanna High School. Her husband is an alumnus of Western High and attended Cypress College and Long Beach City College.

They are honeymooning in San Francisco.

Torrey-Mustard

The Queen Mary Wedding Chapel was the setting Saturday evening for the marriage of Constance Mustard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B.L. Mustard of Long Beach, to Christopher Torrey.

Sandy and Mike Torrey were honor attendants.

The new Mrs. Torrey was graduated from Millikan High School. Her husband, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Torrey, also of Long Beach, was graduated from Wilson High and attends Long Beach City College.

They will live in Long Beach after a honeymoon in California.

Merical-Miller

Lakewood High School graduates Pamela Miller and Ronald Merical were united in marriage Friday evening at California Heights United Methodist Church.

Priscilla Miller was maid of honor for her sister. They are the daughters of Mrs. Cecil Miller of Long Beach and the late Mr. Miller. The bridegroom, son of Mrs. Jean Merical of Lakewood and Richard Merical of Cerritos, asked Dale Johnson to be best man.

The newlyweds attended Long Beach City College. The bride is past honored queen of Jobs Daughters.

They will be at home in Long Beach after a honeymoon in Las Vegas.

Austin-Robbins

Calvary Baptist Church, Bellflower, was the setting Friday evening for the marriage of Shirley Ann Robbins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Robbins of Long Beach, to Albert Austin.

Mrs. Robert Vanhaus, sister of the bridegroom, was matron of honor. Robert Vanhaus was best man for the bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Austin of Lakewood.

The new Mrs. Austin was graduated from Millikan High School and attended Long Beach City College. Her husband is an alumnus of Artesia High.

Spencer-Dobyns

St. Anthony High School graduates Nancy Ann Dobyns and William Anthony Spencer were united in marriage Saturday morning at St. Athanasius Catholic Church.

Constance Ann Dobyns was maid of honor for her sister. They are the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. James M. Dobyns of Long Beach. Dennis Patrick Gauhan was best man for the son of Dr. and Mrs. Thomas M. Spencer.

The new Mrs. Spencer was graduated from the nursing program at Long Beach City College. Her husband attends Loyola University where he is affiliated with Phi Kappa Theta fraternity. He is a member of the American Aircraft Owners and Pilots Association.

They will be at home in Long Beach after a honeymoon in Northern California.

AT WIT'S END

Doesn't relish hot dog truth

By ERMA BOMBECK

As a service to consumers, the Department of Agriculture is mulling over a couple of regulations which would tell the public what is contained in hot dogs.

Speaking as a consumer, I don't really want to know.

A little honesty in the kitchen goes a long way with me. I'm the type who never visits a Chinese restaurant on garbage day . . . never peeks in the kitchen when the waiter goes through the swinging door and never wears glasses while eating a taco from a street vendor in Mexico.

When the crackdown of producers of food products first began, I made a list in the kitchen of Column A: Items that were under suspicion of containing harmful additives, and Column B: Food products that were above suspicion.

Column A now snakes to the floor and back to the utility room, while Column B contains three items: hot dogs, Granola and Christmas tree branches (which a naturalist on a TV commercial claims are edible).

FRANKLY, ALL this suspicion and investigating is making a nervous wreck out of people. Diners do not trust anyone anymore. The other night I gave a dinner party and Marge looked up from her plate and said, "What happened to those hamsters your son used to have?"

It wasn't like Marge to be so skeptical. I mean, just because she had never seen an inch and a half drumstick before didn't mean she was being deceived.

"All of us have just got to pull ourselves together," I said. "This is ridiculous. We all know more about our food products than any person who eats three times a day has a right to know. Remember when we used to look for bent cans because they were cheaper? Remember when we used to think peanut butter was vegetable . . . . not animal? Remember when we used to let our kids eat snow, as long as it wasn't yellow?"

IF THE GOVERNMENT wants to investigate the contents of the American hot dog, I say terrific, but don't tell me what they find. I have to believe in something and, frankly, all my heroic illusions are being shattered.

Don't tell me the American flag was made in Japan.

Don't tell me the symbolic eagle is high on pot.

Don't tell me Mickey Mouse wears a Timex watch.

Don't tell me what is in a hot dog. All these years, I thought I didn't feel well because my baseball team lost.

LWV units to study national land use

National land use will be the subject explored by League of Women Voters during May unit meetings.

The Belmont Shore unit meets Monday and May 21 at 12:30 p.m. in the home of Mrs. Arthur J. Gottlieb, 215 Prospect Ave., with Lynn Wallick leading the discussion.

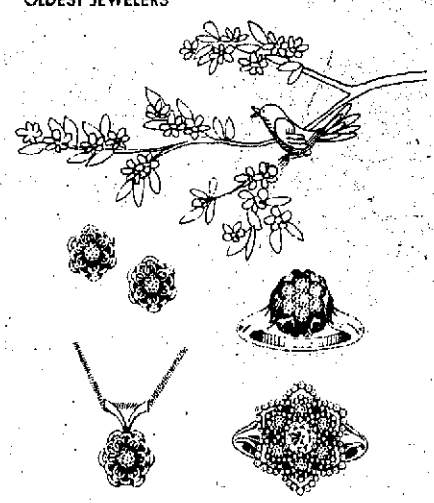

Plaza section members will gather Tuesday and May 22 at 9:30 a.m. in the home of Mrs. Elbert denninger, 1861 College Circle, with Mrs. Arthur Bowman as chairman.

Wednesday sees three groups meeting. Lakewood members convene at 9:30 a.m. in the home of Mrs. Betty Gyler, 3606 Parkview Drive, Lakewood. Mrs. Cecil Cooper is discussion leader. The downtown unit meets at 12:45 p.m. in the League office, 1001 E. Fourth St., chaired by Florence Peterson. The final session is the night section at 7:45 in the home of Marie Griffith, 6320 Vermont St., with Mrs. Robert Gillespie leading the discussion. The Wednesday groups will also meet again May 23.

DAAG revives oldies

An evening reminiscent of the Cocoanut Grove night club years of the 20s, 30s and 40s is planned Saturday at Lakewood Country Club when Dramatic Allied Arts Guild presents its third annual variety show.

"Those Swinging Years" is theme for the black-tie which begins with a social hour at 7 p.m. "Silli-brities" of yesteryear will be on hand.

Master of ceremonies for the show, which was written by DAAG members, will be Ken Delo from the Lawrence Welk Show. He has appeared in numerous Los Angeles Civic Light Opera productions.

MRS. HERMAN Graven is chairman of the fund-raising event, assisted by Mrs. Oliver Connor and Mrs. Gene Durkee. Tickets are $30 a couple.

Dancing will follow dinner and show to the music of Ella Sarka Jones and her Combo.

Members and husbands will take starring roles in the musical production.

Proceeds go toward the DAAG scholarship fund, which awards three grants to students of the arts at Long Beach State University.

Mrs. Myron Poe is president of the group.

The Aces on bridge

by IRA G. CORN JR. TEAM CAPTAIN

Dear Mr. Corn:
We bid these hands as shown in a match-point duplicate game. Can you comment please?

WEST	EAST
♠	♠ J 9 4 2 5/6
♥ A J 10 3 2	♥ K 7 4
♦ Q J	♦ A K 9 6 3
♣ A Q 10 9 8 5	♣ K
1 ♣	1 ♦
2 ♥	2 ♠
3 ♣	3 ♥
4 ♣	4 ♦
6 ♥	Pass

Good Score
Golden Valley, Minn.

Answer: At match point duplicate, six hearts seems the best contract, although six clubs should be safer. I would not have bid as you did — particularly East's bid of two spades. Opposite a partner who has jump-shifted, I like to bid "where my cards are." The jump shift is light but not unreasonable. Here's a possible sequence:

West	East
1 ♣	1 ♦
2 ♥	3 ♦
3 ♥	4 NT
5 ♥	6 ♥

Dear Mr. Corn:
I made a vulnerable small slam doubled and redoubled. Do I not get four times the slam bonus of 750?
Needs Points
Hemet, Calif.

Answer: In doubled and redoubled contracts only the trick score (including over-tricks and under-tricks) is affected. Bonus awards for honors, slams, games or rubbers remain constant.

Dear Mr. Corn:
In response to my partner's Blackwood inquiry, I decided to lie about my ace, since I had responded with only six points. For this I was accused of cheating by the opponents. I know I was giving false information, but was I cheating?
Filing Appeal
Tallahassee, Fla.

Answer: Cheating is a very harsh term, and people should be very careful about their accusations. In the situation you describe, you were definitely not cheating.

You are at liberty to lie about your aces as you can violate other system agreements. However, you are not entitled to have prior partnership understandings which are not known to your opponents.

Dear Mr. Corn:
I've heard the expression, "The Phantom strikes again." Usually this triggers a lot of laughter. I'm old enough to remember Lon Chaney, but I don't remember laughing. What's the tickle?
At the Opera
San Francisco

Answer: The "phantom sacrifice" is undoubtedly the culprit. This is a sacrifice bid against a contract that would have been defeated. The laughs are usually restricted to those who take bad results lightly.

Send bridge questions to The Aces, P.O. Box 12363, Dallas, Texas 75225. Include self-addressed, stamped envelope for personal reply.

CHEF OF THE WEEK

Pike boss likes hash

By MILDRED K. FLANARY

He started out on the waterfront in Staten Island, N.Y., and landed on the waterfront in Long Beach, the Pike. Today's Chef of the Week, Albert S. (Al) Brown, is now general manager of Looff's Amusements.

By next year he will have spent 50 years manning the Pike and is unofficially known as "Mayor of the Pike."

His family migrated to Long Beach in 1922. His brother had lived here for several years and his dad knew Arthur Looff.

Brown is listed among the graduates of Edison Elementary, George Washington Junior and Polytechnic High Schools. During this time, he worked weekends and nights on the Pike.

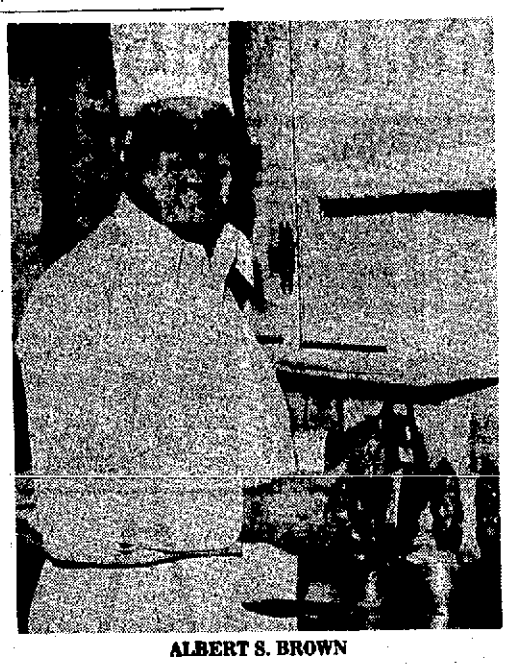

Brown's Pike career, however, was sketchy for a while. He did a hitch in the movies. His father worked as an extra in the Hollywood movies and "Junior" was the boy with the dog with the black spot on its eye. He and a cat had to jump into a barrel and lure in the dog. Well, the dog gladly jumped in and a real melee followed. "Junior" gladly gave up films and returned to the Pike, sans dog and cat.

BROWN'S HOURS ON the Pike lengthened and when he finished school he became a fulltime employe. In fact, it was there that he met his wife, the former Lavona Kite. Her family owned the popular popcorn concession.

They gave two married sons, Leonard and Larry, and two grandchildren, Mike and Shelley. The sons and their families live in Hollywood and Westminster, respectively.

A member of the Downtown Lions Club, Brown is an immediate past president of the El Bekal Greeters. He belongs to the Elks Club, Pacific Coast Press Club, and is a past president of the Pacific Coast Showmen's Association.

One of the family's favorite outings is to their mountain retreat in Green Valley where Brown is equally involved, serving for the past eight years as president of the Green Valley Water Department.

ALBERT S. BROWN

He, at one time, had a fetish for working on cars, but now his main hobby is collecting Jim Beam bottles—empty, of course.

When we gingerly asked Lavona if he can cook, she roared with laughter and said "absolutely not!"

TEXAS HASH

2 large onions, sliced
2 green peppers, cut fine
2 tablespoons shortening
1 pound ground round (or more)
2 cups canned tomatoes
½ cup uncooked rice
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon chili powder
¼ teaspoon pepper

Cook onions and green peppers slowly in shortening until onions are yellow. Add ground round and saute until the mixture falls apart. Add tomatoes, rice and seasonings. Arrange in large casserole, cover and bake in moderately hot oven (375 degrees) 45 minutes, or until done. Serves six.

Texas hash is a hearty main dish that is easy on the budget. You will find it delicious and simple to prepare.

Reader seeks 'inside' information on fiberfill

By FRANCES DIETRICH

Mrs. M.D., Sleepy Eye, Minn., is one of the 44 million home sewers who are wide awake to the advantage of making home furnishings as well as apparel. She wrote a delightful letter about her plans to make tricot curtains, and asked about choice of material for a "bean bag" chair.

She wrote: "Is upholstery material preferable to vinyl? Would it be wise to make a muslin bag to fit inside? Also, would you use polystyrene pellets for filling, or kapok, or something in that line?"

Upholstery fabric is an excellent choice. Vinyl could tear at the seams under the stress and strain of action given to a bean bag chair. Other satisfactory fabric at less cost than upholstery would be canvas, corduroy or duck. Knits should not be used because of the tendency to pull; nor should bondeds with a loosely woven face fabric.

A liner made of heavy muslin, canvas or sturdy sateen is definitely advisable.

TO STUFF large articles such as a bean-bag chair or Stitch 'N Stuff furniture, polystyrene pellets are best by test. The pellets are chopped pieces of foam. They have more resilience than cotton or kapok, will not mat or lump and cost less.

Filling of another type is on the mind of another reader, Mrs. H.B., Oakland, Calif. She asks for information that would be helpful in buying bed pillows. She said many of the polyester-stuffed pillows "make you feel as though you have your head on a chopping block, they're so hard." True, some do.

Fascinating fabrics

There are two kinds of polyester fiberfill. One is staple, which are short fibers, one to three inches long, which are bonded together to form a batting. This keeps the fibers from working through the outer fabric, but does form a relatively immobile shape — "the chopping block." With prolonged usage, it will tend to break up, matt and lump.

A SOFTER, more resilient filling is continuous filaments of polyester. Picture hanks of silken, hairlike lengths of polyester fiber in contrast to a block of solid polyester fibers. When continuous filaments are used, they are free to move around in the covering. Because they are continuous strands, they will not work through the covering.

Continuous filaments are being used by manufacturers for quilted mattress pads, for the wrapping of foam cores for sofa cushions, in sleeping bags and skiwear, as well as pillows.

When used in sleeping bags, its particular advantages are its softness, springiness, lightweight and low moisture absorption. It provides protection from chilly temperatures; does not develop "thin" spots.

You can help

Each week Life/style brings readers a list of volunteer opportunities. Those wishing further information may contact the Community Volunteer Office, an agency of the United Way, at 426-7171 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday.

BASIC NEEDS: Furniture, kitchen equipment and other household items needed for a family living project for a male rehabilitation program.

CHILD'S PLAY: Local hospital is seeking volunteers to supervise children during a family counseling program for low-income patients.

OFFICE WORK: Agencies working with a safety program and family counseling seek clerical help.

THURSDAYS: A special services volunteer is needed to work in a spinal injury ward for veterans on Thursdays.

TEEN OPPORTUNITY: Local hospital will begin its orientation for young volunteers soon.

CLINIC WORK: Well-baby clinics in the Bellflower area and Long Beach need volunteers to weigh and measure babies.

Festival is time to think British

JONNIE MORRIS as Hilaret and Tom Wills as Ramble in scene from LBSU's production of 'Lock Up Your Daughters.' Show is billed as a 'bawdy musical loaded with spicy comedy and tuneful melodies. —Staff Photo by RON CARLSON

ALL-HANDEL concert next Sunday at Covenant Presbyterian Church will feature Darrell Orwig, left, who will play "Organ Concerto No. 13."

PAINTING above is in collection of Australian aborigine art owned by Mrs. O. W. Fredrickson. It is the work of Gabriel Namatjira, grandson of the great artist Albert Namatjira, whose art won world acclaim and motivated fellow tribesmen to paint.

Wilson High School Auditorium. Opening with Haydn's "London Symphony," the program will include "Three Movements for Brass Quintet, Strings and Percussion" by Kim Richmond, Fantasia on "Greensleeves" by Williams, "On Hearing the First Cuckoo in Spring" by Delius, and "Enigma Variations" by Elgar.

There are art exhibits galore—and in great variety. At Long Beach Museum of Art, prints and photos by David Hockney, a young man considered to be in the vanguard of contemporary British artists, go on view today heralded by a public reception from 2 to 4 p.m. His 14 lithographs and lithograph screens include a weather series, five portraits and two chair studies, all recently completed at Gemini G.E.L. workshop in Los Angeles. Born in Bradford, Yorkshire, in 1937, Hockney has garnered medals and awards, has had a retrospective exhibition at Whitechapel Art Gallery in 1970 and has had numerous one-man exhibitions in New York and Los Angeles as well as in Europe.

SHARING attention at the museum through June 3 will be the 49th Annual Long Beach Art Association exhibit. Dr. Charles Thompson selected 53 paintings, drawings, prints and works in other media from 126 entries. In the representational section, Ruth Futrell, Sylvia Paulus and Audre Hutchings won first, second and third places respectively. Winners in the abstract category were Richard Will, Jean Horn and Hattie Miller, in that order.

A third exhibit at LBMA is the "Hearty Arty Party" which, in fine array, demonstrates the creativity of eighth and ninth grade students at Washington Junior High School.

DRAWINGS and bronze figurative sculptures completed in the 1960s by the eminent British artist Reg Butler go on display today in Gallery A of Long Beach State University. They may be seen through May 25. The art has been gathered from collectors from Santa Barbara to Los Angeles. Currently, Butler has a show at the Pierre Matisse Gallery in New York. LBSU gallery hours are 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Mondays through Fridays, 1 to 5 p.m. Sundays.

Art of quite different style will hang through May and June at Lakewood City Hall, 5050 Clark Ave., and at State Mutual Savings and Loan, 5101 Lakewood Blvd. During an eight-month stay at Alice Springs, Australia, Mrs. O. W. Fredrickson of Long Beach made frequent trips to the outback country, collecting art done by aborigines. Some of these artists have been featured in National Geographic, and Queen Elizabeth has a collection of their paintings hanging in Buckingham Palace. Using watercolors because insects and dust cling to oils, the native artists have painted boldly with strong colors. On May 18, from 7 to 9 p.m., a reception at State Mutual Savings and Loan will honor Mrs. Fredrickson and the business and art communities of Long Beach and Lakewood.

NOW FOR an example of the drama. The theater arts department of Long Beach State University will open "Lock Up Your Daughters" May 17 with performances scheduled May 18, 19, 20, 24, 25 and 26, all at 8:30 p.m. in the Little Theater on campus. "Take the genius of Lionel 'Oliver' Bart," directors advise, "the music of Laurie 'The Avengers' Johnson, add the script of Bernard Miles based on the writings of Henry 'Tom Jones' Fielding. Mix them together and you've got a bawdy musical loaded with spicy comedy and tuneful melodies."

Music of different mood will be heard Tuesday at First Congregational Church, Third Street and Cedar Avenue. At 8 p.m., David Bruce-Payne, music master of Westminster Abbey Choir School and assistant organist at Westminster Abbey, London, will play a recital as a festival event sponsored by American Guild of Organists. With few exceptions, he will play music by British composers.

Next Sunday at 4 p.m., an all-Handel program will be presented at Covenant Presbyterian Church, 607 E. Third St. Bruce Polay will direct the Lakewood Chamber Orchestra, Darrell Orwig will play Handel's "Organ Concerto No. 13" and soloists for excerpts from the "Messiah" will be Rhonda Sandberg, Nancy Eastman, Marshall Ramirez and Andy Taylor. There will be a selected choir of 130 voices.

This is but a sampling of festival events. Parks, libraries, shopping centers, malls, children's hospital wards, clubhouses, schools and auditoriums will be sites for traveling shows and both serious and lighthearted events.

When Long Beach Regional Arts Council said, "Let's have a festival," the footnote was, "EVERYBODY join in!"

Art shows its many forms and faces

Some of the art that has illustrated stories in the Independent, Press-Telegram's Southland Sunday magazine will be exhibited at Long Beach State University from Monday through May 21. Although 15 artists are represented, most of the work is by Bill Buerge, Southland Sunday's art director. Drawings and paintings will hang in the first floor corridor of Fine Arts Building 4.

AS THE RESULT of its April 28th art auction, the Museum Association of Long Beach Museum of Art has enriched the museum's acquisition fund by approximately $3,000. The 250 persons who attended bought $9,000 worth of art; of the 230 objects up for auction, 105 sold. Don Muehmore of California Federal Savings and Loan Association, where the auction was held, bought, among other art, work by Claire Falkenstein, Li Chen, Betty Anne Kirkpatrick, Hartley Gurrey and Marian Bruce.

Most excitement was generated by bidding for the set of 14 lithographs, "Stations of the Cross," executed by Robert Cremean. Dr. and Mrs. Gerald Daniel were top bidders, winning the set for $1,000. Dr. Daniel is chairman of the music department at Long Beach State University.

MORE THAN 100 Southland artists and craftsmen will exhibit in the enclosed mall of Los Cerritos Center in Cerritos Wednesday through next Sunday. Since the final day will be Mother's Day, sculptor Joe Durden will give copper-enamelled seagul pins to the first 3,000 mothers visiting the center that day. The center will open at noon.

ALSO READYING for an art display is La Mirada. Friday at 10 a.m., its 12th annual Fiesta de Artes will open in the mall of La Mirada Shopping Center, Rosecrans and La Mirada Boulevards.

Chairman Bettie Poindexter has assembled not only art, but such entertainment as dancing, marionettes, music and concerts by the La Mirada and Neff High School bands.

Just at noon Saturday, auctioneer Wilson Turner will begin a public art auction and sponsors promise excellent work will be available for bidding.

The Fiesta de Artes will continue for 10 days.

NATE AND LOYCE Carhart, painters living in the Naples area of Long Beach, will have their first "Two Carhart" showing at Dana Branch Library, 3680 Atlantic Ave. through the month of May. Among acrylic paintings in the show will be some recently shown, by invitation, at the Malcolm Love Library Gallery at California State University, San Diego.

Mr. and Mrs. Carhart work in their studio at their home and on location in various areas of Mexico. Both are juried artists of Long Beach Art Association. Mrs. Carhart also is a member of the California National Watercolor Society.

Viewing hours at the library are noon to 9 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturdays. The library is closed Fridays.

MEMBERS of Lakewood Artist Guild will take part in the sixth annual Lakewood Festival of Art to be held in conjunction with Lakewood Recreation Department's Kommunity Kalvacade Saturday.

The art show will be held in Mayfair Park, Clark Avenue and South Street, and is open to all artists from children through adult categories. Cash prizes will be awarded. Entries will be accepted at the park from 9 a.m. to noon Saturday. Artists also will display paintings for sale from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Members of Lakewood Artist Guild, Cypress Cultural Arts Association and Rossmoor Women's club competed in the recent open art show at Los Alamitos Plaza. Winners were Louise Brock Anderson, first; Carmen Leslie, second; and Jan Pearson, third. Winners in the beginners division were Billie Greer and Ron Moore. In still another competition, Lakewood Artist Guild's April Popular Vote Show, prizes went to Pauline Mitzner, Athena Hall and Sal Benson.

'Slower Buffalo' due for three-band date

"A Slower Buffalo" is coming to Long Beach City College Saturday for a fund-raising concert to provide college scholarships by the Alpha Gamma Sigma honor society.

Open to the public, the program will begin at 8 p.m. in the gymnasium on the Liberal Arts Campus. "A Slower Buffalo" is a seven-man group featuring percussion, vibes, solo horns, guitar, bass, drums and keyboard. The group will appear with "Yellowstone" and "Chickasaw" in a three-band night of hard-driving rock and roll, rhythm and blues, and country and western music.

The three bands currently are performing on the Southern California college and university circuit.

Advance ticket sales are being handled at the Student Body Bank, 4901 E. Carson St. General admission is $3.

DEAR ABBY

Turn off date, turn in alone

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a 24-year-old single girl and have my own apartment. When I go out on a date and we wind up the evening at a rather late hour, the fellow will start with, "Man, am I ever tired. You're lucky you don't have to drive clear across town to get home tonight."

I usually say something like, "I sure am," whereupon they feel snubbed and get even less subtle and start pressuring me to let them sleep on my couch, etc., etc.

Abby, that kind of situation makes me feel uncomfortable, but I really haven't hit upon a nice way of saying, "Sorry, but no." Then again I wonder what harm there would be in letting them sleep on my couch. I do feel sorry for them because they ARE tired, and it is a long drive across town. Can you help?

TURNING THEM OUT INTO THE COLD

DEAR TURNING: Don't let anyone get THAT tired. Before his indicator starts pointing toward a place to sleep, thank him for the lovely evening and turn in. Alone.

DEAR ABBY: My brother and his wife have six lovely children. The three eldest are young men, all over 21. The other three are girls in their teens.

My sister in law reminds me of some kind of insect I have read about. They eat their young.

She is constantly subjecting her children to the third degree. She even demands to know exactly what was said and done when any of her adult sons have been in the company of a female from 14 to 70 years of age. She goes through their mail, wallets, purses, and she even listens in on their telephone conversations. (She brags about it.)

Don't say her husband should take a stand. He is afraid to open his mouth to her.

It is painful for me to see this possessive and dominating woman emasculate her sons and drive her daughters away from her. Is there anything I can do?

CONCERNED UNCLE

DEAR UNCLE: If she won't listen to her husband, she won't listen to you. But do offer your friendship and understanding to your nieces and nephews. They need someone they can trust and respect.

DEAR ABBY: I am beginning to plan my wedding. Mother and I disagree on the list of wedding guests.

Mother says I must ask all my aunts, uncles, and cousins. This includes all my PARENTS' aunts, uncles, and cousins, too. And all their children! I could stumble over most of my parents' aunts, uncles, and cousins and not even know them. Why must I ask them to my wedding?

It is a small church and I have to consider the groom's family. If they were to invite as many from their side as we invited from our side, we couldn't all get into the church. This whole thing is making me very nervous. Please send me some advice before I elope and settle the matter.

NERVOUS BRIDE

DEAR NERVOUS: Use a little psychology and suggest that your mother use a little arithmetic! How many people will the church accommodate? The groom's side is entitled to half those seats. Naturally, the "immediate" relatives are on the top of the list. Lop off the list at the bottom. Now, wasn't that simple?

PENNY-WISE TRAVELER

Travel with your Uncle

By JANE MORSE

Graham Greene may travel with his aunt, but I'm accustomed to playing post office with my uncle. Sam, that is. The one with the embassies.

For years I've planned and relied on receiving correspondence while traveling by telling people I could be reached care of Visitors' Mail, Some Embassy, Somewhere. The service was faithful, foolproof and free. In my heart, I knew it was too good to last.

I was right.

Last year Uncle announced we were on our own again, free to go back to waiting at American Express or sweating through a "General Delivery" maze devised to ensure frustration.

I have abandoned more mail than I've claimed due to the fact that (a) most general-delivery offices abroad appear to be a full day's journey away, even when I'm in the same town, (b) are closed for holidays 362 days a year and (c) somehow do not connect the name I've spelled for them with the name on the envelopes they insist on shielding so that I can't see to shout "Hey, there!" when they pass them.

Although I think American Express should be knighted for the noble work it does as an alternative "General Delivery," the lines that go with this service can be a genuine, first-class pain.

But since there are serious disadvantages to going around the world without any address, what can you do? Well, quite a few things as it turns out — some chancy, some medium-cool.

PEOPLE with nice, firm plans can, of course, rely on their nice, firm hotels to accept and deliver their mail, but people who like to ramble must improvise. For a free solution to this problem, you might consider the following:

— It may come as a surprise to others like me who were narrow in their outlook, but American Express isn't the only travel agent with offices abroad nor the only one willing to hold mail. Cooks, for one, is less used (shorter lines) but just as willing. Even agencies that don't have their own foreign branches may well have a working relationship with a foreign firm that can be used as a drop. You never know until you ask.

— Most airlines say they'll accept and hold mail for their passengers. This has worked for me when the carrier has given its blessing to use of a specific address, their main ticket office in a given town, for instance. It has worked against me when the specific address has been disregarded and my mail posted on a bulletin board at the airport. (Pan Am may regard it as a dubious compliment, but it has a good reputation as a mailman.)

— There's no law that says you can receive mail only at the hotel where you're staying. I suppose it is taking advantage of the hotel where you're not staying to expect mail service from it, but if the Excelsior is the only place you know in Rome, you can probably rationalize and reason that you might stay there, so why not have your mail sent there? If your conscience bothers you, give a generous tip to the concierge.

— DO YOU belong to a club or professional organization with affiliations where you're headed? AAA? Chamber of Commerce? The Y? Some of these outfits are so obliging you'd like to remember them in your will. Their biggest plus is that if they have a headquarters or clubroom with staff, as often as not some helpful member of the staff will tell you over the phone if you have mail to be picked up.

— Banks have branches or "correspondents." Even yours. Banks are reliable. Blessings on them. They are not particularly keen on keeping mail for you but they often will when forced. They keep terrible hours.

If all else fails or you fear it might, get back in touch with Uncle. I brooded about being cut off for a long, long time. Finally I decided to call up and plead. Guess what? Uncle is not entirely heartless. There are still places where even he recognizes there are no acceptable substitutes for his services so the consulate still carries the mail burden.

Hunting with a camera

travel

When the Norwegian government prohibited polar bear hunting in Norwegian waters, an enterprising American travel agent set about to prepare a new type of vacation — in the waters — and this is an Arctic Holiday, which should have great appeal to all wildlife fans as well as photo buffs.

The "Polar Bear Photo Safari" is a spectacular expedition from Bod in Norway's Land of the Midnight Sun via the fascinating Lofoten Isles — immortalized by Edgar Allan Poe, when he wrote "Down Into the Maelstrom" — and via Bear Island to Spitsbergen and even beyond to the ice-pack, where the members will visit the mating grounds of the polar bears.

Two Norwegian ships which are built especially for this purpose, will carry expedition members into the pack-ice, equipped with radar and electronic navigation instruments, and manned with a Norwegian specialist crew, familiar with Arctic regions.

There will be five 17-day expeditions, leaving New York by air on June 8 and 22, July 6 and 20, August 3 at an inclusive cost of $1181, also a 22-day tour leaving New York on August 3 at an inclusive cost of $1993.

Polar Bear Photo Safaris are operated by Scandinavia Tours — a division of Arne Ruud Associates Inc. Sailing program with complete itineraries and a special fact sheet on "Photogenic Norway" are available from Scandinavian National Tourist Office, 3600 Wilshire Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif. 90010.

Tour the Arctic Circle

Tourists in the market for the most northern of all holidays will be able to use the first all-weather route into the Arctic Circle by 1974.

Called the Dempster Highway, the 450-mile road will permit drivers starting from Vancouver, British Columbia, or Edmonton, Alberta, to reach Inuvik, Northwest Territories via the Ogilvy Mountains, the Eagle Plains, the Richardson Mountains, Fort McPherson, and Arctic Red River.

The gravel-topped Dempster will open up historic and scenic parts of Yukon Territory, as well as allowing tourist access to the unpolluted shores of the Arctic Ocean.

The area will remain virgin holiday territory for the foreseeable future.

Enjoy Nature's Best

In relaxing, hot mineral waters that spring from the desert. Our hotels, motels, mobile home parks offer thermostatically controlled, hot mineral waters and spa facilities for every desire in luxury and price. Enjoy it all soon — return for the "rest" of your life. 10 minutes from major airport.

TRAVELING WITH DELAPLANE

Local wine prices out of sight

travel

By STAN DELAPLANE
Bordeaux, France

Even here in the heart of the grapeland, the price of local wine has gone up — three times since 1969. This is what makes the U.S. restaurant check soar like a kite. Fact is, EVERYBODY'S drinking wine and prices are going out of sight.

The Frenchman, polishing off 100 to 200 bottles a year, takes the same per bottle beating as the American on his six to seven annual bottles.

We've been trying to find something drinkable that's also within price range — a fairly ordinary bottle of French wine will hit you for $6 to $10 in American restaurants.

For wine-with-meals people, Best Buy is still California wines. The kind sold in half gallon jugs for $1.89.

If you're better heeled, the French are putting out "country wines of France." Wines from Alsace, the Cotes du Rhone, Val du Loire. Range about $3.50 to $4 in stores. Double that in restaurants. Triple at fancy U.S. places.

With a poetic staff of press agents in New York, they hope to boost your drinking by 50 million bottles a year. That would be good for La Belle France.

Egypt

Even the Pharaohs would be awed by the new Aswan High Dam on the Nile in middle Egypt, reports Trans World Airlines. Increasing numbers of tourists visiting the dam, either by flying there or taking high speed river boats from Cairo, find huge Lake Nasser, which is 310 miles long behind the dam itself, which is 364 feet tall, more than two miles long, and almost a mile thick at the base. It contains enough material to build 17 Great Pyramids.

Nassau

NASSAU, Bahamas — The city of Nassau was named in honor of King William III, formerly William of Orange-Nassau.

Phoenix

Phoenix, the year-round vacation capital of Arizona's Valley of the Sun, is the nation's 20th largest city population-wise.

In France and England, I'd shy off ANY restaurant on the main highways. Drift off into small villages where the local restaurant depends on good meals for the locals.

"While shopping in the Far East, do you bargain?"

Everywhere but in Japan. No bargaining in big department stores like Lane Crawford in Hong Kong. But in all small shops, yes. Whatever they ask, offer half. If they accept, you were overpricing yourself anyway.

Hong Kong is the shopping town. You could take weeks trying to go through all the shops. Silks. Ivory. Japanese cameras. Pearls. Gold jewelry. Swiss watches. Brocades, Thai silk. Good prices. But BARGAIN! East Indian stores open with the highest, incredible asking prices. Seems to be part of the game.

"Should we take American cigarettes with us into Portugal?"

Sure. Buy them from the freeport shop at the American airports. But if you run out, Portuguese Sintras and Estorils are much to our taste. Twenty cents when I was last there.

Cast change

Stockard Channing has joined the cast of the New York Shakespeare Festival's "Two Gentlemen of Verona," succeeding Edith Diaz in the role of Julia. Miss Channing most recently appeared on Broadway with Nanette Fabray and Eddie Albert in Abe Burrows' production of "No Hard Feelings" and earlier made her Broadway debut in the New York company of "Two Gentlemen..." The award-winning musical, in which Miss Channing will co-star with Jonelle Allen, Clifton Davis and Larry Kert, will open at The Music Center's Ahmanson Theater on May 8.

QUAKE-DAMAGED RUINS OF SANTA CLARA CONVENT AND CHURCH DRAW TOURISTS TO ANTIGUA

Welcome to Antigua

Story and Photo
By HERB SHANNON
I,P-T Travel Editor

ANTIGUA, Guatemala — This quiet former capital city, founded scarcely half a century after Columbus discovered the New World, is achieving new status as a retirement center for U.S. citizens.

The reasons are plentiful — a temperate climate in the midst of tropical Central America; comfortable, inexpensive accommodations in a non-inflated economy; friendly, hospitable natives and a stable, progressive government; spectacularly scenic surroundings and the advantages of a rustic bedroom community within commuting distance of the bright lights of a major metropolitan city.

Guatemalans welcome U.S. tourists and prospective residents alike, but they are determined to prevent the invasion from adding any damage to that caused by the 18th century earthquakes which prompted removal of the seat of government to nearby Guatemala City in 1776.

TO PRESERVE the character of Antigua and its lush valley of coffee plantations, the Guatemala Tourism Association two years ago set up a commission which has established 42 public monuments and rigid rules for development of adjacent areas. The result is harmony of the Spanish Colonial ruins and contemporary architecture, without sacrifice of modern convenience in the newer structures.

The largest of the public momuments is the convent and church of Santa Clara, whose ample courtyard patio and arched colonnades on three levels cover nearly a square block in the center of town. Destroyed twice, it was restored after the first earthquake disaster in 1717, but abandoned except as an historical site after the second volcanic eruption and quake in 1773.

Today two of the towering peaks surrounding Antigua exude wisps of smoke to indicate remaining volcanic activity, but the central garden and open-roofed walls of Santa Clara echo only to the snip of gardener's shears and the footfalls of tourists.

The only church in Antigua which was not demolished in the 1773 temblor is La Merced, a pale yellow edifice whose facade was elaborately decorated in Rococo style by Dominican monks when it was built six years earlier. Whether because of the latter-day construction or the reinforcement of the intertwining ornamentation, the walls survived intact and the church has been in continuous use since the ceilings were replaced about 1855.

STREETS OF Antigua are laid out on the north-south, east-west Greek plan, with mountain and countryside views at each end. Coffee plantations extend to the edge of the improved city roads, as once citrus groves intruded on Southland suburbs.

The plantations are really two forests in one, since taller trees must provide shade for the coffee shrubs. Each coffee bush yields about 20 pounds of beans a crop. The beans ripen twice a year in the lower valleys, but the highland Antigua coffee trees bear only once in 12 months.

Visitors to the colonial religious shrines of Antigua find the going great on Pan American World Airways new non-stop 747 jumbo jet service to Guatemala City. Bus tours from the city to Antigua add about an hour to the 4½-hour flight time from Los Angeles.

ABOUT MIDWAY along the Pan American Highway, the tour bus may make a request stop at the hamlet of San Lucas Sacatepequez to view the community's open-air laundry facility. Farmer's wives troop along the road for miles, carrying the week's wash in baskets on their heads.

Around the fountain-fed central rinsing pool, the women take turns scrubbing their laundry in the wash cubicles, and then spread the garments on the grass to dry in the sun. It is typical of Guatemala that there is no charge for the use of the public facility.

Once a year the women's husbands pay their laundry bill by donating a day's work to repairing roads or helping out with whatever civic project needs a hand.

TO HAWAII, FAR EAST

New cruise schedule

Pacific Far East Line has announced the extension of their cruise schedule into 1975 for the twin liners SS Mariposa and SS Monterey.

The advanced schedule includes additional Hawaii four-island cruises, and special cruises to the Mediterranean and the Orient, as well as maintaining PFEL's regular services to Hawaii, the South Pacific and summer cruises to Alaska.

In Hawaii service, the Mariposa and Monterey will make year 'round five-day crossings between California and Honolulu, with five 18-day four-island cruises to Oahu, Maui, Kauai and the "big island" of Hawaii. The popular four-island cruises can also be taken in 12 or 7-day portions by utilizing air ea itineraries.

This spring the Mariposa will depart the west coast for a 66-day Mediterranean and Black Sea cruise, calling at 23 ports. The liner will then follow up with five summer 13-day cruises to Alaska, and a 45-day Orient cruise next autumn. Additional Orient cruises have been scheduled for spring and fall in 1974.

To the South Pacific, PFEL will continue their 43-day cruises from San Francisco and Los Angeles to Honolulu, Moorea, Tahiti, Rarotonga, Bay of Islands, New Zealand; Auckland, Sydney, Suva, Niuafo'ou, Pago Pago, Honolulu and back to the west coast. Air ea programs are available for attractive shorter versions of these cruises.

NEW!
S.S. ORIENTAL EMPRESS WORLD CRUISES.

100-day cruises from $48 a day with bath

FIRST SAILING AUGUST 1973.
(Embark from Either Coast)

Tailor your own vacation package. Want to match a world cruise itinerary to your vacation schedule? There's an Oriental Empress world cruise departing every 100 days. You can go at the time of year which works out best on your calendar. And at first class fares which work out best with your pocketbook—less than on most other cruise ships.

What an idea! A major passenger liner circling the globe on a fixed schedule every 100 days! Twenty ports of call—the most interesting cities the world has to offer. An ideal 100-day itinerary touching on four continents.

You'll be sailing on the 23,000 ton S.S. Oriental Empress. She's a handsome cruise liner built to carry 500 passengers, but we limit her to 350 passengers for spacious comfort and relaxation. Formerly the S.S. President Wilson, the Oriental Empress is stabilized and fully air-conditioned. And she has been tastefully refurbished to impart a gracious Oriental charm.

Attractive accommodations with nearby facilities are available from $2000 ($20 a day) ranging to deluxe suites at $14,500 ($145 a day) per person.

To learn how you can see the world with an Empress, contact your travel agent or write for our new full-color brochure.

Birthday fete

Canada's smallest province, Prince Edward Island, in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, is having another Centennial party in 1973.

And it's the third in 10 years for the east coast province.

In 1964, it celebrated the first gathering of the Canadian Fathers of Confederation in the solid stone building still used by the provincial legislature.

In 1967, it whooped it up with the rest of Canada for the year-long birthday of Confederation in 1867.

Next year, it marks its own entrance into Confederation in 1873. Canada's Governor-General will start the ball rolling December 31 at the island capital, Charlottetown, by lighting the Centennial Flame.

Throughout the year, there will be a steady succession of events and entertainment, including regattas, sports tournaments, film festivals. Even an old-fashioned frog-jumping competition is on the centennial drawing board.

SKYRIDE AT SEA WORLD ON MISSION BAY

GAL-IVANTING

Try 'southern' charms for gracious vacations

By CHORAL PEPPER

Never again will I laugh at a legend. A boy really did ride a dolphin. It may not actually have happened in the Aegean Sea, but it surely happened at Sea World in San Diego.

The largest of its kind in the country, Mission Bay Aquatic Park in this southern California metropolis covers seven square miles; half land, half water, of what used to be mud flats before it was dredged.

It now contains Sea World, where Shamu the famous tame killer-whale performs daily, and a covey of whimsical resort hotels, each more fantastically conceived than its neighbor.

IN SPITE of Mission Bay ballyhoo, if you are unescorted and more interested in a relaxing holiday than a swinging one, there is a better place to spend it. That is in La Jolla, a few miles north along the coast. Its year-round perfect climate, its magnificent beaches, lush seascapes and smart shops have been attracting sophisticated world-travelers for many, many years.

The best way to get there from the Pacific Southwest Airlines Terminal is by rental car, as you can then retain it for transportation. The best place to stay is at the La Jolla Beach and Tennis Club, a sprawling semi-private complex that does no advertising (it doesn't have to), but has both rooms and kitchen-apartments available to the public.

While you are a guest at the club, you are entitled to membership privileges, which includes use of the eight tennis courts, and ambitious Pitch and Putt Golf Course, a marvelous private beach, and an Olympic-sized swimming patio pool. Rates vary according to accommodations — whether in the old wing or in the new ones — and it is a good idea to write directly to the club for reservations.

IF YOU CANNOT get into the La Jolla Beach and Tennis Club, your travel agent can make arrangements for you at any number of motor lodges or fine hotels, many with pools, in La Jolla.

Some are located on La Jolla Shores, where the Club is, opposite a long public beach that extends from the end of the Club's private one and is equally desirable; other hotels are located in the village proper, convenient to the smart, arty shops and fine places to eat. All months are beautiful except July, when heat moving out from the desert meets cool air from the sea and forms a mist that does not burn off until afternoon, which disappoints beachcombers.

Although there is dining and dancing in the Club's Marine Room, a section open to the public, both the Shores and La Jolla village fold up early at night. However, when daylight hours are filled with interest and action, nightlife can become relatively unimportant.

With your rental car available, if you did not arrive in your own, a trek to Tijuana below the border takes less than an hour and introduces a whole new kind of world. This Mexican city has altered enormously in recent years and your first impression when you see the shabby huts in the Tijuana River bed just across the border will rapidly change as you advance to the city's main street, Avenida Revolucion.

BECAUSE it is a free port, purchasing power is great here and you may re-enter the U.S. with $100 worth of merchandise duty free, provided you have not claimed a similar exemption within 31 days.

Shops and boutiques carry everything from Swiss watches to Italian knits, but superbly crafted wrought iron lanterns, hand made leather goods, and carved chests and tables are the best buys, as you will not find such a vast selection outside of Mexico.

An excellent Tourist Information Center is housed in a circular glass structure at the Foreign Club Plaza.

Pioneer village

Just 30 minutes from the heart of modern Toronto lies Black Creek Pioneer Village, an authentic re-creation of a rural Ontario village of 100 years ago.

During April and May, the period-costumed staff will be busy with the old-time chores of sheep shearing, wool dyeing, rail splitting, candle dipping, plowing, harrowing, and seeding.

Come June, and they will go on to spinning, weaving, rug hooking, quilting, and embroidering.

In July, the village blacksmith will start hammering away at his age-old trade.

Out of doors, the animals and fowl will perform, and they will include such favorites with young and old as Berkshire pigs, horses, oxen, sheep, cattle, ducks, and chickens.

Full particulars on guided tours of this unique holiday attraction are available from The Metropolitan Toronto and Region Conservation Authority, 5 Shoreham Drive, Downsview, Ontario, Canada.

Flower market on the move

Covent Garden, London's chief flower, fruit and vegetable market for 300 years, will be transplanted in early 1974 from its present site in the central part of the city to Nine Elms, two-and-a-half miles southwest and on the other side of the Thames, reports Trans World Airlines. The present seven-acre market, a prime attraction to tourists, will be expanded into a 70-acre location.

Covent Gardens' character has been developed since the end of the Middle Ages when gardeners at the old Abbey of Westminster are believed to have sold townspeople surplus produce from their "convent garden."

Explore the last frontier aboard The Yacht.

The new Spirit of London makes her maiden voyages to Canada and Alaska.

This is the last frontier.

And there is no better way to see it than by ship. Summer cruising aboard Spirit of London is perhaps the most dramatic vacation you will ever take.

From the Greenwich Room at the top of the ship, you will sit in indoor comfort, and enjoy a spectacular 280° view of snow-capped mountains, virgin forests, and deep blue waters. (And seeing it all by the light of the midnight sun is an experience you'll never forget.)

awesome glaciers inching toward the sea under millions of tons of pressure.

And when you are anchored at Juneau, be sure to make the 12-mile journey to Mendenhall Glacier. You'll see a forest that was shaved by the advancing ice, and is preserved within the glacier.

Spirit of London will also call at historic Ketchikan. Sitka, once the capital of Russian Alaska, or Skagway, with its old narrow-gauge mining railway.

You will go ashore in motor launches to visit the haunts of the sourdoughs who took part in the frenzied Gold Rush of 1898. And shop for Indian and Eskimo handicrafts — a marvelous way to bring back unusual gifts for your friends.

Explore the legendary North Country.

You will experience the unrivaled beauty of Canada's Pacific coast. The ship will cruise the Inland Passage, and navigate the Seymour Narrows during daylight hours. You will call at lovely Vancouver. At Victoria, more British than most cities in Britain. And Alert Bay, with its ancient Indian cemetery, dotted with dozens of authentic totem poles.

In Alaska, you will visit Glacier Bay, with 20 of the world's most

All the comfort of a liner, all the intimacy of a yacht.

Spirit of London is a 535-ft. cruise ship with so many elegant touches, so much personal attention, she's more like a luxury yacht.

There are seven passenger decks with countless activities from dawn 'til way past dusk. You will find that your problem is not what to do, but what to choose to do.

You can doze in a deck chair. Swim in the pool. Join in the Bridge tournaments. Dance to a live orchestra in the Churchill Room. Quaff a foaming mug of English ale in the Union Jack pub.

You can watch current films in the Globe Theatre. See cabaret performances. Even sharpen your swing at the ship's driving range with a resident pro to assist you.

The one thing you will never have to do is serve yourself. There is one crew member for every two passengers. Although the ship was designed to fulfill perfectly the American taste for comfort and convenience, you will be served in the friendly, courteous British tradition. (Spirit of London is registered in Britain.)

STREET BAZAARS IN HONG KONG

Bargain at the bazaar

"It's easy," a beaming visitor said, "it's all downhill." The visitor, a not-all-that-athletic tourist with a spirit of adventure, is one of many who are discovering how easy it is to walk around the compact, even crowded areas of Hong Kong Island and see colorful aspects of the Colony which would be passed over in a guided bus tour.

The independent walker doesn't have the benefit of a tour guide to answer his every question, but most people in Hong Kong speak a little English and the discoveries of an "off beat" tour, along with the freedom to spend as much time as you wish anywhere you like along the way more than make up for the guide.

A popular Chinese proverb in hilly Hong Kong is: It Is Easier To Run Down A Hill Then Up One. This ancient proverb is added to modern invention in Hong Kong, and most people agree that the best way to begin a walking tour is by taxi!

A five-minute taxi ride from the Hong Kong Hilton will bring you to the colorful Bazaar area of Hong Kong, and a recommended starting point is Man Mo Temple on Hollywood Road.

Wandering downhill from the Temple, visitors can tour the Chinese streetmarkets and stalls, open-fronted shops where craftsmen build lanterns, coffins, furniture and musical instruments. The atmosphere is purely Chinese. Here is the scent of joss sticks, and here are the clattering sounds of Mah Jong tiles.

The winding streets and alleys form a gigantic bazaar, where shops and stalls sell everything from aspirin to zebra skins, and bargaining is the order of the day.

During a leisurely morning stroll in this area, a visitor can stop in a Herbalist Shop to purchase some dried lizards or powdered rhinoceros horn, watch artisans and craftsmen at work carving ivory and wood, building furniture and painting scenes from Chinese history on silk screens and lanterns, and enjoy the assault on the senses of new scents and sounds.

This is also the area of "ladder streets", steps built on hillsides too steep for roads, which lead visitors to "Thieves' Market" and the colorful antique shops and sidewalk jade dealers.

The area is also dotted with fortune tellers, and there is one section known as "Tai Ta Dei" where there are around 100 fortune tellers anxious to relieve you of a dollar for a glimpse of gold in your future.

City surrounded by Green Belt

Ottawa, Canada's national capital, is entirely surrounded by a Green Belt of unspoilt natural beauty.

Originally an area of swamp, farmland, forest, and sand, it is now becoming a beautiful conservation and recreation oasis only a few minutes from the towering apartment highrises and office blocks.

Three sections of the 54,000-acre Green Belt are now open to the public. Here, well-kept trails wind through natural bushland and timber stands. All are equipped with picnic areas which act as bases for hikes into the regions of trees, plants, and the tiny creatures of the wilderness.

Sharp-eyed visitors can spot beaver, raccoons, geese, hawks, plover, kingbirds, coots, great horned owls, and many more from the 23 wild animal and 146 bird species which have been seen in these preserves.

Goodbye, Long Beach. Hello, British Columbia.

British Columbia. Where you can sail along 7,000 miles of fjord-studded coastline. Sun bathe on sugar-white beaches warmed by the Japanese Current. Where you can have a mountain stream all to yourself and fish for salmon, steelhead, or trout.

British Columbia. Where you'll discover Victoria, the "Old English" Capital. With its tea shops, cricket fields in Beacon Hill Park and flower-draped lampposts.

Perhaps you'll island-hop to Vancouver and see a Shakespeare classic or a "now" musical at the Queen Elizabeth Theatre. Or browse through antique shops in the restored Gastown Quarter.

Or cheer the swimming, diving, riding, track & field, rowing and tennis competition at the British Columbia Festival of Sports.

British Columbia. Where you can discover hidden waterfalls, 200-foot firs, silent coves or a family of deer in any of 120 Provincial and 4 National Parks.

Whatever you and your family would like to do this vacation, you can do more of it in British Columbia. And on your way there, Western gives First Class Legspace to every passenger and complimentary Champagne to every adult.

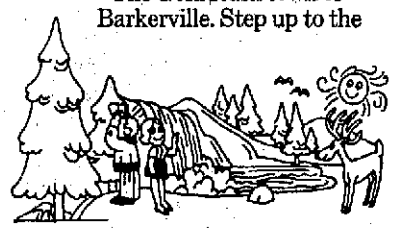

To give you a sample, read the highlights from two of our tours:

BRITISH COLUMBIA BY LAND & SEA.

Jet Western Airlines to Vancouver. Travel by deluxe motorcoach through farmlands of Fraser Valley. The rugged 60-mile Fraser Canyon. The ranch country of Williams Lake. The Gold Rush town of Barkerville. Step up to the bar at the Wake-up-Jake Saloon. See "Totem Pole Land" at the historic Indian Village of 'Ksan. Then on to Prince Rupert to board the ferry-liner, "Queen of Prince Rupert," for a 330-mile cruise along the protected, fjord-studded Inside Passage. Past towering mountains and majestic glaciers. 6 days, 5 nights, from $190.90 per person (double occupancy), plus airfare.
IT-EP-6

VANCOUVER AND VICTORIA.

Fly Western Airlines to Vancouver, "the San Francisco of Canada." Explore the original waterfront of Gastown. Board a deluxe motorcoach for a drive through the Fraser Delta to Tsawwassen ferry terminal. Cruise across island-studded Georgia Strait. To Victoria, the "Old English" city. Tour world famous Butchart Gardens. Sample old world cuisine. 3 days, 2 nights, from $52.40 per person (double occupancy), plus airfare. For more information, just mail the coupon.

Former Beverly hillbilly hits pay dirt again

By BOB MARTIN
TV-Radio Editor

Buddy Ebsen has struck oil again.

It'll take a while to tell if "Barnaby Jones" is as big a gusher as "The Beverly Hillbillies," but the midseason starter about a private detective has been renewed for the 1973-74 season by CBS-TV.

And, with all the crime-fighting shows and pilots that have bit the dusty pavement, that says a lot about the basic appeal of Buddy to the nation's television viewers. In the latest Nielsens, "Barnaby Jones" finished No. 11 in the ratings — which even Jed Clampett would have to admit ain't half bad.

I paid a visit to Beverly Hills the other day to see the famous hillbilly who helped spread the name of the town around the world. But I found out in a hurry that Ebsen has shed the image of Jed Clampett even in his old stomping grounds.

"The guy at the parking lot said 'Hi, Barnaby — what case are you working on today?'" Buddy told me as soon as he took a seat beside me in a booth at the Beverly Hills Brown Derby.

If he's Barnaby now in Beverly Hills, then I reckon he ain't Jed Clampett nowhere no more.

Certainly, Buddy's natty threads were a far cry from Clampett's tacky garb. And no battered old hat hid Ebsen's silver hair, which helped to give him the appearance of a distinguished businessman-sportsman.

THE VETERAN of stage, screen and television, who is 68 and certainly doesn't need the money — not with all those residuals from "The Beverly Hillbillies" still pouring in — said he's happy to be back as a series regular.

As we enjoyed a heapin' helpin' of the Brown Derby's hospitality, I asked Buddy how much longer he thought he'd want to continue as a performer.

"Why, I feel like I'm just starting out," replied the man who was dancing on Broadway with his sister Vilma back in the 1920s.

"What has given you the greatest satisfaction in your career?" I inquired.

Buddy turned the question over in his mind for a little while, then answered in his usual slow way of talking: "I get a kick out of pulling off something where I'm not supposed to. Take this new series. I think just about everyone, including CBS, was surprised to see us last longer than a half season. We were given a suicide spot on the schedule (Sunday night, overlapping NBC's "Mystery Movie")."

He recalled with a grin that a Los Angeles TV critic had written that maybe in another season, when there weren't so many detective series on the air, "Barnaby Jones" might have made it, but not at this time.

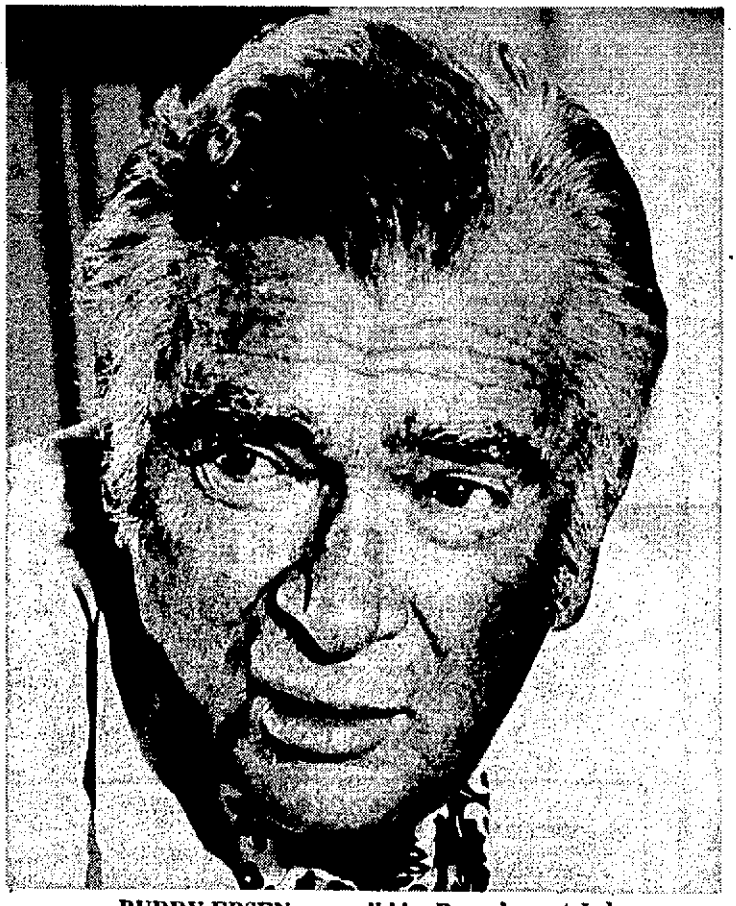

"He's the same guy who said 'The Beverly Hillbillies' wouldn't last," Buddy pointed out. "When it finally went off the air after nine years, I kidded him: 'Well, you were right — it didn't last.'"

My interview with the 6-foot-3 actor came just a couple of days before the death of Irene Ryan, who played pipe-smoking, moonshine-making Granny on the long-running series. "I understand she's in a bad way," he said at the time. "She can't have visitors at the hospital."

ONE THING new that I learned about Ebsen is that he has written a play called "The Champagne General" that is playing Thursday through Saturday evenings through this week at the Conejo Players Theatre in the Thousand Oaks area. It opened April 13.

Buddy said he has been "a scribbler" since his school days. "When you're a scribbler, you have to scribble and no one can stop you," he told me. The play is about Gen. George Brinton McClellan, the Union officer during the Civil War who eventually was dismissed as commander by President Lincoln. Ebsen has been a Civil War history buff for 40 years or more and says he has read everything he could find on Lincoln and McClellan.

In early 1972, the actor turned out a book called "The Polynesian Concept," in which he tells of his adventures on his 35-foot catamaran, Polynesian Concept. He has skippered the craft to victory in numerous races, including the big TransPacific race to Honolulu in 1968.

BUDDY EBSEN . . . call him Barnaby, not Jed.

Buddy, who was planning to sail in the Newport Beach to Ensenada race this weekend, told me he has been interested in boating for 50 years. He now has a boat-building business in Newport Beach.

Ebsen owns both an ocean-front home in Newport Beach and a 35-acre ranch in Malibu Canyon, but has been living mainly at the latter because it's closer to his acting work. His two children who are still in school — 15-year-old Kiersten and 14-year-old Dustin — go to school in Agoura, he told me.

He and his wife, Nancy, who met during World War II, have three grown daughters, and Ebsen also has two daughters from a previous marriage.

His third daughter by his present marriage — Bonnie — is a young actress. "I think I'll introduce her in a 'Barnaby' episode this coming season," he said. "She's been studying with Sanford Meisner at the Neighborhood Playhouse in New York, and he says she's ready." Earlier, she was with the American Conservatory Theatre in San Francisco and she performed with Ebsen and his wife in summer stock last year in Michigan.

If she's as devoted to performing as her father is, she's got a long career ahead.

I ASKED Ebsen what he would have liked to be if he hadn't been a dancer (his father owned a dancing school) and an actor.

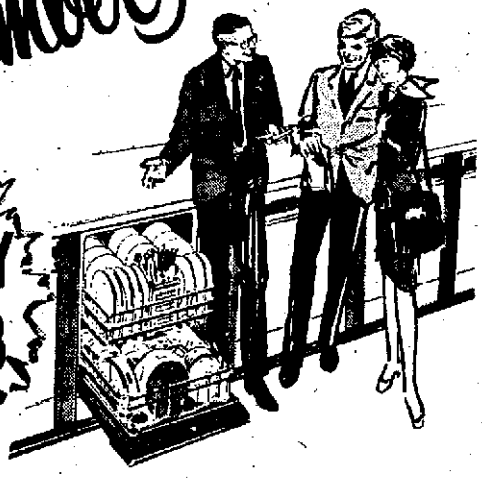

"Oh, I started out to be a doctor, but the Florida land boom collapsed and I had to go to work," he said.

Born Christian Ebsen Jr. in Belleville, Ill., Buddy grew up in Orlando, Fla., where the family moved when he was 10. He went to the University of Florida and Rollins College to prepare for medical school, but went into dancing with his sister Vilma instead. His first Broadway show was the Ziegfeld production of "Whoopee" starring Eddie Cantor in 1928. From the stage, the lanky tap dancer moved into movies — "Captain January" with Shirley Temple was one of his early ones.

His first regular role in a TV series was in "Davy Crockett" with Fess Parker. Then came "The Beverly Hillbillies."

Jed. . .er, Barnaby. . .er, Buddy. . .it was a pleasure to "set a spell" with you.

PAN AND FAN MAIL

WHAT A WELCOME respite from man's evil ways was Charles Kuralt's visit to the library of the Arkansas man (CBS News, April 23).

I would like to know more about this man and what causes him to lead the life he leads. Why not give us the precious time to learn his thoughts and ideals so that we can try them out in our own lives?

We need more, than the occasional glimpses we are treated to, of what appear to be positive actions for good among us. For instance, to balance the deluge of words of the negative example of Watergate, let us hear more of the beautiful people.

In all of us, and upon all of us, are working the forces of good and evil,

Actress hears no applause, but making success in career

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK — Linda Bove has been acting in theaters for more than five years, but she has never heard the happy sound of applause. She can't. She's been deaf since birth.

But, at 27, the petite, brown-haired actress is moving into another facet of show business. She has become a cast member in the popular CBS-TV soap opera, "Search For Tomorrow."

She plays a young girl who works at Henderson Hospital — the focal point of the show. She loses her hearing as the result of a car accident, and, during her recovery, meets a young doctor and falls in love. It's routine stuff for the long-running series.

But it's not routine for Linda, who hopes what she's doing will open up other television jobs — particularly in commercials — for other deaf actors and actresses.

"We are born actors because we have to express what we want to say through our hands and bodies," she said, getting the thought across strictly by the sign language of the deaf.

She murmured constantly in a soft, gentle voice, her fingers and arms moving all the while as her close friend and "interpreter," Jean Worth, said in words what Linda was saying with her hands.

LINDA WAS born in Passaic, N.J., of two deaf parents. Her father, Michael Bove, worked as a printer at the Newark Star-Ledger.

She became stagestruck while a student at Gallaudet College in Washington, D.C., a liberal arts school that specializes in teaching the deaf.

"While I was a junior there, I saw posters that said there were going to be tryouts for 'The Three-Penny Opera,'" she said, smiling at the memory. "I just thought I'd try out for it."

"I really was surprised that I got the part and I just fell in love with the theater. I wanted to stay in it from then on."

After graduation in 1968, she joined the National Theater of the Deaf, a New York-based troupe that recently had been formed under a foundation grant.

The 14-member troupe, which has only three members who can hear, now tours the United States and Europe, presenting its own works and those of established authors in a form called "Sign Mime."

When she joined the troupe, she began keeping company with one of the actors, Edwin Waterstreet. Romance blossomed and they were married about 2½ years ago. They live in New London, Conn., near the National Theater of the Deaf office in Waterford.

MISS BOVE, who laughed merrily when her interpreter got stuck on a particularly hard phrase or word, was asked how she got her job in "Search For Tomorrow."

"The producer (John Edwards) asked David Hayes, the director of NTD, if he could recommend a deaf actress for a part in the show," she said. "David sent some pictures and three of us auditioned."

"I was chosen, but I had mixed emotions about it. They had one of the others girls on their mind for the part and I was hoping she'd get it.

"I was trying to encourage her, because I had some television experience in 'Sesame Street' and she'd never worked in television before. It would have been good for her.

"When I got the part, it really hit me. I was really surprised."

Before she came to television, Miss Bove said, she had toured with the NTD in a production called "My Third Eye," a series of five vignettes about the lives and outlook of the deaf.

One vignette, she said, "described our journey to the hearing world that we'd never seen before. It was a gentle satire on hearing and what we thought and felt about it."

In the show's closing segment, she said, "we acted out the song called 'Three Blind Mice' to show the audience how we'd sing it. Then we asked them to sing it as we acted it out."

She giggled. "They never could keep up with us."

Miss Bove, who can read lips, said she doesn't go to many plays "because too many people just use words, words, words to try to say something. You don't need to do that. It doesn't mean anything unless you show you feel it."

WHAT DOES SHE look for in any acting performance?

"Concentration is the most important of all," she said after a long, thoughtful pause. "You have to analyze the character and use motion in the right way.

"You can tell if someone really means what he does or is just faking it," she said through Miss Worth, who isn't deaf but has worked as an aide to Hayes and the NTD for several years.

Linda Bove was asked what her parents thought about her life as a professional actress. Her smile had a glow that softened the harsh glare of the cold, white dressing room where she was relaxing.

"They're very, very proud," she said with her hands and eyes. "They tell everyone to watch me on television. You know how parents will do that."

LINDA BOVE . . . her hands are expressive.

DEBORAH RAFFIN intrigues John David Carson in one of the three segments of the ABC special "Of Men and Women" tonight.

Alistair Cooke's 'America' series finale tuesday

By RICK DU BROW

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Alistair Cooke's admired NBC-TV history series, "America," has its final broadcast May 8, and, on that program, in a summing up of his 13-part video study of the United States, he says:

"A wise historian usually stops 20 or 30 years before his own time because, like the rest of us, he can't see the wood for the trees. But I have tried in this program to say something about American civilization today because what is fiercely in dispute between the Communist and the non-communist nations is the quality and staying power of American civilization.

"Every other country scorns American materialism while striving to match it. Envy obviously has something to do with it, but there is a true basis for this debate and it is whether America is in its ascendant or its decline."

THE MAY 8 FINALE is entitled "The More Abundant Life," and NBC-TV says it concerns contemporary problems threatening to alter some lasting traits in U.S. society. The spice in the "America" programs has been the personal outlook expressed by the British-born Cooke, a distinguished journalist and broadcaster, about his adopted land, the United States.

Tuesday, Cooke, a long-time U.S. citizen, devoted his hour to people and places in America that have had special meaning to him. On May 8, in his outlook on American civilization, he adds:

"I myself think I recognize several of the symptoms that Edward Gibbon saw so acutely in the decline of Rome, which arise not from external enemies but from inside the country itself: a love of show and luxury; a widening gap between the very rich and the very poor; the exercise of military might in places remote from the centers of power; an obsession with sex; freakishness in the arts masquerading as originality, and enthusiasm pretending to creativeness; and a general desire to live off the state, whether it's a junkie on welfare or a government-subsidized airline.

"YET I HAVE tried to show that the original institutions of this country still have great vitality. Much of the turmoil here springs from the energy of people who are trying to apply those institutions to forgotten minorities.

"Now, as for our rage to believe that we've found the secret of liberty in general permissiveness from the cradle on, I can only recall the saying of a wise Frenchman, 'Liberty is the luxury of self-discipline.' And historically those people who did not discipline themselves had it thrust on them from the outside.

"That's why the usual cycle of great nations has been, first: a powerful tyranny broken by revolt; the introduction of liberty; the abuse of liberty,

Loretta Lynn finds country voice pays off

By BILL MAHAN

There's a female country singer around who's getting the reputation of being as much a humanitarian as Bob Hope. Her name is Loretta Lynn and, like Hope, she has come up the hard way. In fact, it has been even tougher for Loretta because she was married (and still is) at 14 years old and had four babies by the time she was 18. There is absolutely no doubt that she was a Kentucky cracker.

Today, however, millions of country music fans are grateful that Loretta married young and had so many children because it forced her and her husband to leave Kentucky and look for greener pastures.

Those pastures are 2,700 acres in Tennessee — a spread that includes the entire town of Hurricane Mills, a chain of clothing stores throughout the South and so many other things that it would take up all this column's space to name them.

For 11 straight years Loretta's records have been on the top of the country hit charts and she has been seen on almost all the TV talk shows and specials, including Dinah Shore and David Frost several times.

Her first big break was a 21-week stint on "The Grand Ole Opry," where she earned $15 per show. Things have gone steadily up since and she was recently presented the Entertainer-of-the-Year Award for 1972.

Loretta travels more than 150,000 miles a year and there is no doubt she travels in style. Her transportation is a luxury liner bus equipped with the conveniences of a modern home (air conditioning, stereo, color television, bedroom, etc.). But she says she's tired of the traveling and would really like to slow down some.

Loretta writes most of her own music and she gets her ideas from carefully watching and listening to other people. "I look around me," she says, "I watch how other people live."

She told of performing in a club and noticing that the same woman would stop by each night. After a while, she talked to the woman and learned that her husband had just left her for another woman. "I put myself in her shoes, and understood how she must have felt and wrote a song about that feeling. That's how I write my music."

Recently Loretta performed at the Country and Western Awards ceremonies at Knott's Berry Farm. During the evening, she was hounded by autograph seekers who were, as she put it, just loyal fans. She waved off threats of harm from devoted fans who have been known in the past to cut her hair or pieces of her dress for souvenirs.

She was remarked, "Fans walk up just wanting to touch me, cryin' when they come. I'll say 'Honey, I'm just like you are.'

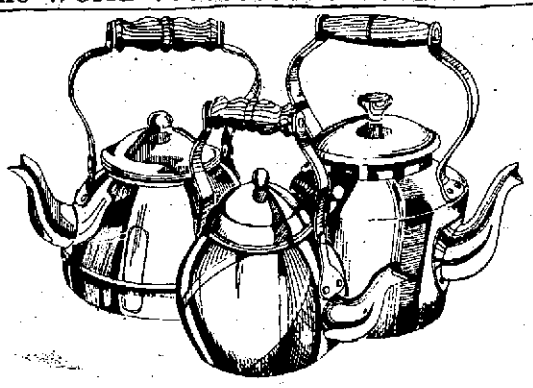

"And fans are alike all over the world. In Canada, in Europe, they just want to listen to the music. The only thing you don't do in Europe is tell a country joke because they'd never understand it. They start to squirm and scratch their heads. Just play the music. That's all they want.

"But a fan who's devoted to you will be devoted to you the rest of your career no matter how many ups and downs you might have."

Horowitz gets action for troubled viewers

Not long ago a Long Beach man was driving along at peace with the world when he was abruptly pulled over by several units of the Los Angeles Police Department.

The recently purchased car he was driving had been stolen some months earlier. But the man didn't know this and neither did the used car dealer because the pink slip had been in the vehicle when it was stolen.

Faced with a complicated and frustrating situation (the insurance company which had paid off for the stolen car had taken possession of it), the Long Beach man sought help from reporter David Horowitz, whose daily "Action-4" feature on KNBC's (Channel 4) evening news attempts to solve viewers' problems.

"The matter is still to be settled in court," says Horowitz, "but it now looks pretty certain that the man will get his money back."

Also, because of the intervention by "Action-4," the Los Angeles County District Attorney's Office has agreed to sponsor legislation making it mandatory for a dealer to check with the Department of Motor Vehicles to make sure a car he is about to sell is not on the "hot sheet" list of stolen cars.

ALTHOUGH just a few weeks old, "Action-4" already is drawing more than 200 letters a day and the figure is mounting fast. Many are from the Long Beach area.

"One of the most touching was from a 75-year-old Wilmington man," says Horowitz. "He was absolutely broke and was trying to cash in his $1,000 life insurance policy but was getting nothing but a runaround from the company.

"We contacted the insurance company and they immediately sent him a check for $435. Now viewers have begun sending in money to help him out."

One woman wrote to complain that pigeons were showing a distinct lack of respect for her husband's tombstone; a man wrote that he was looking for a girl friend, and a woman thought it would be "very newsworthy" if the menu at Pat Nixon's birthday party were made public.

"We get some crazy letters," says Horowitz, "but most are from people who just need help and are frustrated or powerless to help themselves.

"We can only answer two or three a night on the air, but we answer every letter we get," says Horowitz, who works with three full-time assistants to cut through bureaucratic red tape and corporate indifference to solve viewers' problems.

"One Seal Beach woman with a faulty 89-cent thermometer was told by the company in Connecticut to mail it back to them and they would replace it. This would have cost her $1.16 in postage. We called the company and they sent her another thermometer.

"So why all the trouble over an inexpensive thermometer? It's because we're trying to make government and business aware of the consumer and his problems, so maybe next time people won't have to come to us," Horowitz explains.

HE ADMITS that "Action-4" is not unique. Newspapers and other television and radio stations have had "action reporters" who respond to consumer complaints.

"But I don't think it has ever been done quite so exhaustively on television," he says. "There are four of us working full time on it and we have a generous budget to work with."

It also is a measure of KNBC's commitment to the feature that Horowitz, an award-winning reporter who's listed in "Who's Who in America," was asked to take charge of it.

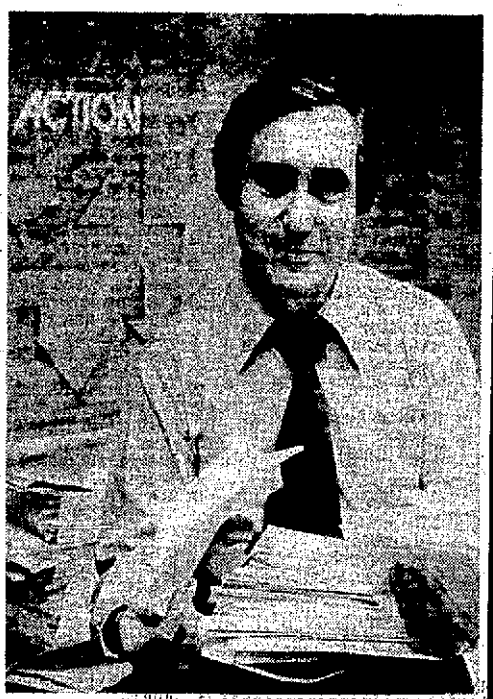

A one-time news writer on NBC-TV's former "Huntley-Brinkley Report," Horowitz also was a network correspondent in Southeast Asia.

Nearly 10 years ago he helped run an action reporter feature on a New York radio station.

"I think it was the first one in the country," he says. "It set the pattern for all the others."

Since starting "Action-4" Horowitz has received dozens of letters of thanks from viewers he has helped.

"They are all very flattering," he says, "but sometimes they get carried away. One called me the Ralph Nader of Los Angeles. But my favorite is the woman who wrote that I was a laser beam shotting a ray of light into the darkness."

The BIBLE Says

Question: "Does the sameness of God require miracles?"

Some of our readers have written us lately suggesting that if miracles have ceased, then God has changed. They believe that the absence of miracles today would violate the statement, "Jesus Christ is the same yesterday, today, and forever" (Heb. 13:8) and Mal. 3:6, "For I am the Lord, I change not."

Such a conclusion when examined, however, will not stand. Consider the following: (1) Enoch walked with God and did not see death (Heb. 11:5). Believers today see death. Has God then changed? (2) Adam and Eve were created by a direct miracle. Has God changed because men come into the world today other than by a direct miracle? (3) Peter and others walked on the earth with Christ; they witnessed His crucifixion and saw him after His resurrection. Has God changed because He does not allow each generation to do the same? (4) God revealed new truth through His inspired spokesmen in former times. Has God changed? Must we have inspired men today who will add more divine truth to the Bible?

It is inconsistent to want to take the working of miracles and say that if we do not have them today, God has changed. To be consistent one would have to believe that we need Jesus in the flesh on the earth today — or God has changed. Or that men need to build an ark today to be saved, like Noah was — or God has changed. Can we not see the ridiculousness of such arguments?

Now, the passages that say God does not change are true, but we must understand their application. God and Christ are unchangeable in their nature and their attributes but their manifestations, operations, and activities have changed and do change through the centuries. Thus, God does not make us like He made Adam. He does not condemn us to physical death and have us executed today as He did those under the O. T. who worked on the Sabbath. He does not physically deliver His people miraculously as He did the three Hebrews from the fiery furnace; or Daniel from the lion's den; or Noah from the flood; or Peter from prison. He does not intervene as in the case of the parting of the Red Sea.

All of these facts force us to conclude that people who believe that miracles are required today because of the above quoted passages have a totally wrong conception of God's unchangeableness. They conclude that God must not change in His operations and actions when, in fact, He has done so through the centuries. The fact that they want to make this apply only to miracles and not to other similar matters shows their error and inconsistency. God is the same today, as is Christ — but this does not require that they always do exactly the same things.

THE BURNOR CONTACT LENSES
from early morning

A concept in the fitting of contact lenses has recently been introduced by John L. Burnor. These lenses are known as Burnor Contact Lenses.

24-HOUR "SLEEPING" LENSES
. . . The Burnor Contact Lenses are designed for 24 hour wear. Patients are able to wear their Burnor Contact Lenses comfortable (under the supervision of their eye specialist) from 5 to 7 days continuously.

The Burnor Contact Lenses are available through dispensing locations certified by Lens Craft Research and Development Co., Inc..

Through the Burnor design process, this lens is custom fit to enable the patient to wear the lens eight to fifteen hours the first day with comfort.

8 to 15 Hours of Wear the First Day

The Burnor Contact Lenses are offered on a guarantee basis. Please call for full information on this new product.

By appointment only . . .

. . . through late evening.

Cooke to sum up findings Tuesday and back to tyranny again."

Speaking, in the May 8 broadcast, in the study of his New York City apartment, Cooke says:

"As I see it in this country, a land of the most persistent idealism and blandest cynicism, the race is on between its decadence and its vitality."

AS FOR "the woes that we share with the world that you can see from your matters such as overpopulation and pollution—Cooke says he "finds it impossible to believe" that a nation that has produced a wide variety of ingenious human beings is going to "sit back and let the worst happen.

"There is now a real possibility that atomic energy can help us to cure incurable disease and preserve our food indefinitely and, through breeder reactors which renew more power than they spend, actually clean the cities and the oceans. And that would take us over a watershed that none of us has conceived."

The one drawback of the "America" series is that its regular broadcast time has been too late at night for many youngsters 10 to W 11 p.m. in the East and West, although an hour earlier in the Midwest. The sponsor of Cooke's 13-part presentation, Xerox Corp., says it hopes to rebroadcast the series at a more suitable time for general, all-around viewing starting in the fall.

SPECIAL

WHEELER AND MURDOCH (7), 8:00 p.m.—Unsold pilot for a detective series. A pair of private eyes based in Seattle, Wash., try to crack a syndicate murder and a million-dollar robbery.

THE NEW HEALERS (7), 9:00 p.m.—Burgess Meredith and William Windom guest in this unsold pilot dealing with a paramedic team. The team hopes to care for thousands of people scattered over the remote area. Their services are virtually ignored by the townspeople who want to be trated by a medical doctor, not by "amateurs".

SPECIAL

THE WALTONS (2), 8:00 p.m. — A distraught mother of a deaf child is being forced to send the child to an institution. Instead she leaves the girl on the Waltons' doorstep. An inspiring story follows about how they learn to communicate.

THE MOON IS BLUE (2), 9:00 p.m. — Storyline and dialogue which seemed risque when the movie was made in 1953 caused this movie to be cause celebre then—it wouldn't now. A naive actress accepts the advances of an architect and his neighbor.

SPORTS TODAY

BOXING (13), 8:00 p.m. — Danny Lopez vs. Sal Lozano in a 10-round featherweight contest. Live reporting by Jim Healy.

WILLIAM HOLDEN (left) and David Niven are friends who find themselves in love with the same girl in the movie "The Moon Is Blue" on CBS Thursday night.

SPECIAL

TICKLE ME (7), 6:30 p.m. and THE TROUBLE WITH GIRLS (2), 9:00 p.m.—Elvis Presley fans can bring him into their homes for three and one half hours all together tonight in these two movies. In "Tickle Me" Elvis finds work at a health spa and in "The Trouble With Girls" he's manager of a traveling tent show in the twenties.

AMERICA'S JUNIOR MISS PAGEANT (2), 8:00 p.m.—Judges take into consideration appearance, poise, scholarship, physical fitness and talent in judging these high school seniors who are vying for the scholarship prizes of up to $10,000. The New Seekers entertain with "Why Can't We All Get Together?" and "Pinball Machine."

MIDNIGHT SPECIAL (4), 1:00 a.m. — While the "Midnight Special" is an hour late (show time is 1:00 a.m.) Burns and Schreiber, the show's hosts, are right on! The team brings together a delightful selection of musicians including the Hollies, the O'Jays, Mark-Almond and Ronnie Dyson, and the Incredible String Band.

SPORTS TODAY

BASEBALL (11), 7:55 p.m.—(Pre-game show starts at 7:30 p.m.) Vin Scully and Jerry Doggett report live from Candlestick Park in San Francisco as the Dodgers and the Giants begin a three-game series.

THAT PRETTY young thing on the left and the regal young lady in the center are both Lydia Hodson of Lexington, Ky., reigning Junior Miss of 1972, who will crown her successor in America's Junior Miss Pageant at Mobile, Ala., which will be televised on CBS Friday night, with Ed McMahon as host.

TV NOTEBOOK

NEW YORK (AP) — The Senate committee probing the Watergate affair still plans to start hearings May 15 and live TV coverage still will be allowed, says a spokesman for Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-N.C., head of the committee.

Will the networks cover it live? You'd think so, now that President Nixon has accepted responsibility for the affair, fired one of his top aides and announced the resignation of two more and his attorney general.

But no decision has been made yet on live coverage of the Watergate hearings, according to spokesmen for the CBS, NBC and ABC television networks. They say it partly depends now on who will be called to testify.

And even that is undecided right now. An Ervin aide says the witness list may not be ready until "the last minute."

This is because of the possibility that prominent figures the committee wants to question about Watergate could be indicted on federal charges between now and May 15, he said.

If that happens, those potential witnesses probably wouldn't be called to appear before the committee, the aide said.

The National Public Affairs Center for Television has said it will cover the hearings "gavel-to-gavel." But an NPAC spokesman said that, as of now, no live broadcasts are planned.

He said the hearings instead will be videotaped for broadcast during prime evening hours on national public television.

IF THERE IS indecision at NBC, CBS and ABC about live coverage of the hearings, there was none in the networks' correspondent commentary and analyses immediately following Nixon's Watergate speech Monday night. Virtually all of it was harsh.

The strongest words came at CBS, where Daniel Schorr and White House correspondent Dan Rather — both of whom have been sharply criticized by administration officials — hammered away at what they felt were major holes and unanswered questions in Nixon's speech.

The next day, on the CBS Morning News, Schorr partially analyzed Nixon's speech this way: "The President in a sense last night was saying, 'Let me off the hook on this one.

" 'I'll be nice to the poor people, I'll be nice to the press and, God, maybe I',, even be nice to the Congress if you just let me off the hook.' "

Victor Gold, who resigned in January as Vice President Agnew's press spokesman, checked in on the other side of the commentary fence during an appearance on NBC's "Today" show.

He praised Nixon's speech as "very good" and, in discussing Nixon's brief praise of a "vigorous free press" in the Watergate case, said he believed that signified the administration now "is in a new ball game here with the media ....

"I believe that the media issue, as an issue for this administration, is dead tactically," said Gold, now a Washington-based writer and television commentator.

Asked why he called it a "new ball game," Gold replied, "Because I believe that the administration, so to speak, was hoisted by its own petard with regard to the Washington Post."

He referred to major Watergate disclosures by the Post. He emphasized in an interview later that "I was not saying that the administration used an anti-media drive as a tactic."

but our daily TV and newspaper fare seems mainly to cater to the bad.

Thelma I. Hayes
Long Beach

A LITTLE MORE data on your file of Robert Clary.

I was general manager of KFWB when Warner Bros. owned it from 1923 to 1934 when Jack Warner, in one of his well-known fits of pique, fired me.

As you may not know, in those early days the WHOLE output of the recording business, as late as 1930, was only around 40 sides a MONTH. Indeed, the Brunswick Panatrope, first of the electrical playing phonographs, was not introduced until 1925.

Anyway, seeing the need for a recorded musical service I joined up with a guy in Chicago, Milt Blink, and we set up a service with a base library of 400 selections and an additional 20 per month. All on the 16 inch 33⅓ rpm discs. For radio station use only.

The business prospered and soon we had six competitors including NBC. Our company was Standard Radio Transcription Services Inc. At that time the FCC required the word "transcription" to be used on the air as against "phonograph recording."

But in January of 1937 Petrillo, head of the American Federation of Musicians, forbad any of his members to make recordings on the basis they were causing widespread unemployment. Everyone stopped but good old Standard.

In World War I the Germans employed a rather sophisticated use of tape with large speakers to simulate battle sounds and troops where none were present. Up to this time we had only had wire recordings, very unsatisfactory because the wire stretched.

Two colonels in the Signal Corps, one in Europe and one in the Pacific, had similar ideas. Each sent back a captured tape machine in bits and pieces and then reassembled them upon arrival in the U.S.

I heard of one in Jersey City and immediately got in touch with the owner, as this came at the time Jimmy Petrillo was getting tough, I bought the machine on sight along with a supply of German tape. This, then, was the beginning of tape on a commercial basis. No need to say what it is today.

While our gutless competitors took Petrillo's edict flat on their cans, Milt and I decided to go to Europe and continue our output, which had then grown to a library initially of 5,000 numbers and 100 new ones every month. We loved our little business which was paying off nicely.

So we gathered up arrangements for orchestras of around 20 to 25 men and dispatched our recording director, Harry Bluestone, to Paris to record 300 numbers, if he could find the talent, the studio etc. etc. Kind of a risky undertaking as I look back on it, but what the hell, I was 37 and Blinkie was four years younger.

Now comes Clary into the picture. Bluestone wanted to find some singing talent and in one of his ventures around gay Paree he went to a music hall and there was Clary singing his heart out. Bluestone was so impressed with him that he wrote back that we should sign him up and bring him back to the U.S.

Cutting through all the folderol it ended that Blinkie and myself had to sign with the Immigration of the United States that we would be forever until his death, liable for Robert Clary, for any monies he might owe and so on.

So we got the kid into the U.S. and started to furbish an act for him. He broke it in at a drive-in in San Diego and was immediately a no-hit. So we kept on trying, with indifferent success I must admit. He was making a living and we were going into more debt on his account. Neither of us was happy and when an agent in New York persuaded him we did not know what we were doing he broke away, broke his contract.

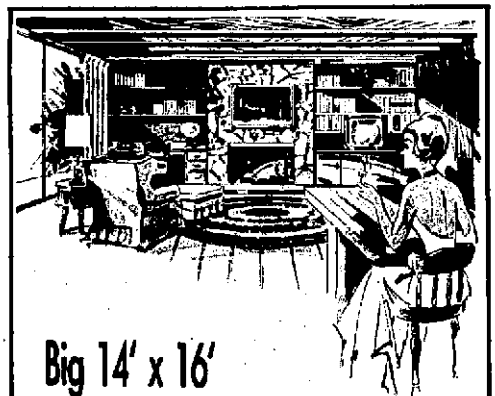

The agent was right, of course, but Clary boy please don't do anything foolish and go broke as Miltie and I will have to pay your passage back to Paris.

Fun isn't it.

Wells Report

The light that failed

While glancing through the newspapers the other day, I came upon a small item in the entertainment pages listing CBS' fall TV program schedule for 1973.

"Series not returning," the story noted, "are Bridget Loves Bernie, Doris Day, Mission Impossible and Bill Cosby."

Well, that jogged my memory. It so happens that I am the type of guy who tears things out of the newspaper that catch my attention. I don't really clip them; I just tear them out. And I file them somewhat haphazardly if at all. Usually I just toss them in a drawer someplace.

So I went to work prowling through yellowed, raggedy-edged news clippings in all my desk drawers. Finally, I found it — a clipping from September 1972 also referring to Bridget Loves Bernie.

Actually, the story was about a fella name o' Herb Jacobs, "a man who has spent his life in the entertainment business." Herb had learned his trade first as a young employe of Billy Rose, then as a motion picture theater operator and finally as an advisor on television programming to a large number of TV stations.

That is Herb's dodge now, or at least it was in the fall of 1972, when he was board chairman of Telcom Associates, Inc., an international TV program advisory organization.

However, he is best known, it seems, for his annual forecast of the success or failure of programs in a new television season.

"He makes the forecast at the annual convention of the National Association of Broadcasters," the Washington Post reported breathlessly, "to a standing-room-only breakfast meeting and his batting average is consistently excellent."

Well, I guess that sentence was what prompted me to tear out the clipping. I mean, there are a lot of things wrong with the television industry, but the idea of a bunch of executives willing to eat breakfast standing up in order to hear a glorified crystal ball gazer is almost beyond belief.

What did Jacobs predict as the big hit of the 1973 television season? You guessed it. Bridget Loves Bernie.

Bridget Loves Bernie couldn't possibly fail, Jacobs told the broadcasters, because it was sandwiched between All in the Family and the Mary Tyler Moore Show, giving it what is known in TV as a "sheltered time period."

"It's an Abie's Irish Rose-type show," Jacobs went on to say, "with a rich Irish girl marrying a poor Jewish boy. The comedy flows from the objection of both parents to the marriage, in addition to their ethnic prejudices toward one another."

That's what Bridget Loves Bernie is, all right —a strained, tired remake of Abie's Irish Rose, which had to reach a great deal for its humor when it played Broadway before most of us were born. Still, who needs originality when your show comes between All in the Family and Mary Tyler Moore?

Well, good old Herb didn't reckon with a mid-season offering on ABC called A Touch of Grace, brought to you by those wonderful people who gave you All in the Family and Sanford and Son. Grace has freshness, humor and a wonderful actress name o' Shirley Booth. Goodby Bridget, goodby Bernie.

Jacobs then went on to pick his losers of the year. High on his list was a dramatic series, The Waltons, which he predicted would draw superb notices and low rating.

The basic flaw of The Waltons, he said, was that it was scheduled opposite Flip Wilson and Mod Squad proven successes.

But beyond that, Jacobs figured the dramatic series, which deals with growing up in rural America in the 1930s, was "too heavy" and "too early in the evening" to win many viewers.

What happened since September?

A few weeks ago, Newsweek did a story on The Waltons as the "sleeper of the year." Neither Flip Wilson nor Mod Squad have been able to hold their own against the nostalgic charm of The Waltons depiction of an America that perhaps never was but certainly should have been.

Those weren't Jacobs' only picks of course. He also predicted that the Bob Newhart Show, MASH, and Maude would be big successes. They were, but the Sandy Duncan Show, which he also picked to succeed, fell flat on its funny face.

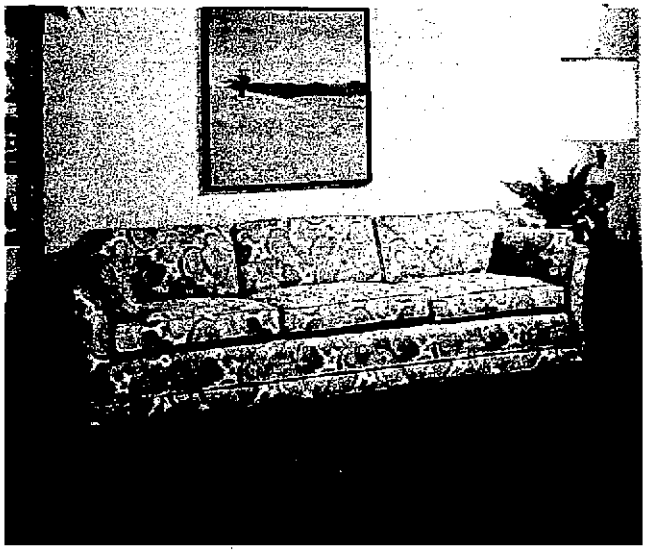

Still, he probably had enough good picks to be back at the same old stand this year speaking to a standing-room-only breakfast on the basis of "his consistently excellent batting average."

But I am glad I saved the clipping. Jacobs may have a good batting average but he struck out the two times it really counted. That's fine with me. When pollsters or program advisors are able to predict with certainty the success or failure of television shows, football teams, political candidates, marriages or high school graduates, there will no longer be any wonder in the world and no reason for anyone to try anything that hasn't been done before.

Best of luck, Herb, ol' boy.

Robert Redford . . . no political ambitions

Paul Douglas . . . announcer on Buck Rogers

Hal David and Burt Bacharach . . . when it rains, it pours

Q: Robert Redford played Warners' The Candidate so realistically, he reminded me very much of Bobby Kennedy, both in looks and manner. Tell us something about the actor and whether it's true he wants to run for office in real life? — Mrs. Ernie A., Phoenix, Ariz.

A: "No," Redford told us, "I am not a candidate for any political office. I don't think I'm very patriotic about the country — but I am patriotic about my family — my wife and kids." (Shauna, 12, Jamie, 10, and Amy, 2.) Because he became a star in Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid he named his 2,400-acre mountain-top ranch in Provo, Utah, Sundance. Previously he turned down the role in The Graduate that made Dustin Hoffman a star. Also Rosemary's Baby — because he didn't like the subject of either film. Born in Santa Monica, Aug. 18, 1936, Robert went to the University of Colorado on a baseball scholarship. Then he quit as a sophomore to attend the American Academy of Dramatic Arts while seeking work on the stage and in movies.

Q: Settle a bet. Who used to be the announcer on the good old Buck Rogers radio series? — Betsy Dugan, Pittsburgh.

A: Paul D. Fleisher. Later to become a famous stage and film actor under the name of Paul Douglas.

Q: I was told that the actor who played Clark Kent in the Superman TV series committed suicide. If so, could you please tell me why, when and how, please? — Jeanie L. Gullett, Raleigh, N.C.

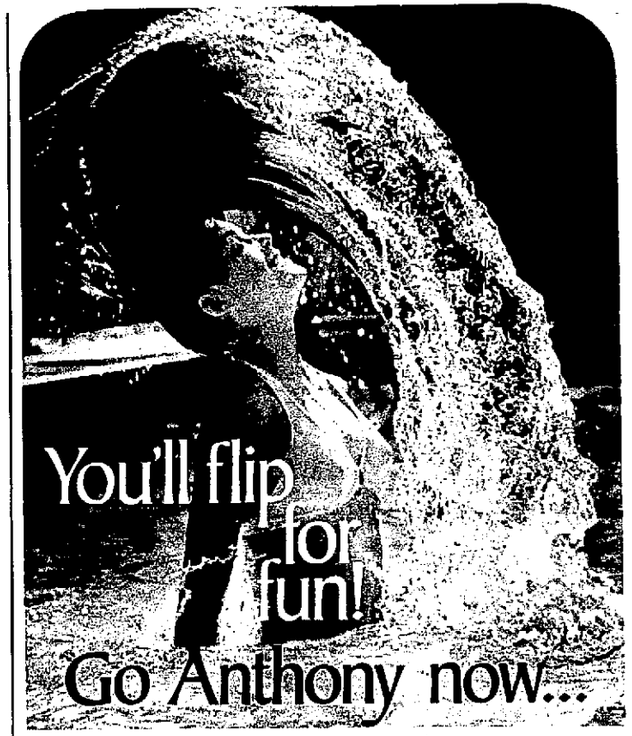

A: Though an aura of mystery remains, the famous Los Angeles police chief, William H. Parker, declared at the time, "There is no question that George Reeves killed himself." "Superman," on the night of June 16, 1959, was found shot to death in the bedroom of his Hollywood home. What puzzled the police was finding three bullets from his Luger in different rooms in Reeves' house. One was the slug that killed the actor. The others, the chief declared, were fired earlier. No motive for the suicide was determined.

Q: I heard that Hal David has used rain in some songs other than Raindrops Falling On My Head. If true, what are they? Also, is there a secret agreement between him and his partner, Burt Bacharach, that only Bacharach appear on TV shows and that David stay in the background? — R. Jacobson, Coral Gables, Fla.

A: No. Hal admitted to us he's just not a performer. "The first time I got up enough courage to make a personal appearance," he grinned, "was at an ASCAP benefit at the New York Philharmonic. And would you believe I was so nervous I got stoned before — and then again after — the performance!" About Hal's other rain songs — his very first song (written for bandleader Sammy Kaye in 1947) was titled Isn't This Better Than Walking in the Rain? Next, he wrote Raindrops for singer Adam Wade. Followed by Raindrops Falling On My Head with Burt — for which the lyricist won an Oscar. Apparently, when it rains it pours royalties into David's coffers.

Q: I've read rumblings of a "feud" between Jack Carter's mother and Don Rickles' mother. What's this all about? — Mrs. T. Sullivan, Brooklyn.

A: It's no feud. What happened is that the mothers of both comedians, living in Miami Beach, answered a casting call for a TV commercial. An Don's mother, Etta, won the assignment.

Witches without brooms

They cast good spells on colleges and clubs if you know which witch is which

By SCOTT STEVENS

A witch is supposed to look like a witch — black cloak, pointed hat, stringy hair and a prominent wart on one side of her nose — like those in classic literature or children's fairy tales.

Most of them don't.

Few modern witches keep a black cauldron bubbling on the stove for stirring up evil potions and seldom does one hold a pilot's license for the broom in her kitchen closet.

But somehow, of all the ghosts, goblins, demons, elves, gnomes, poltergeists and myriad other things that go bump in the night, witches, as a group, have probably been the most maligned.

History is studded with tales of witches and witchcraft throughout the world, and scarred by the countless incidents of persecution during which literally thousands of innocent people were tortured and slain.

Europe has certainly had more than its share of practitioners of the so-called Black Arts, and frequently in England someone is accusing someone else of putting a hex on swollen joints or setting hens, or running to some place for a love potion.

Witches appear in the Bible which says, "Thou shalt not permit a witch to live," then goes on to explain how Abraham exorcised a demon from a pharaoh in Egypt "and the evil spirit was expelled."

The witch is celebrated in legend, song and verse, but not always precisely defined. The Concise Oxford Dictionary says a witch is "a woman or man (called a warlock) practicing sorcery, using powers for beneficent purposes only," while Webster's New 20th Century Dictionary says, "a witch is a woman supposed to have supernatural power by a compact with the devil or evil spirits."

The Dark and Middle Ages had their witches, supernaturalists, sorcerers, mystics and diabolists, while the Spanish Inquisitors found others, and the American Indians had their medicine men.

Bells, books, candles, witches' sabbaths, fertility rites and other manifestations have held England spellbound for centuries, and still do today, because the British seem to be intrigued with witches and their doings.

Not too long ago, Judge Robert Lymberry, presiding in Bedford, found a self-styled young witch guilty of stealing a cross and candlestick from a church to raise money for her coven — an assembly of 13 witches.

"Look into your crystal ball and foresee what will happen if you break the law again," he told her in stern warning before suspending her sentence.

"In case it is cloudy, I will tell you. You will go to jail."

But, once outside the courtroom, the young woman declared, "This will not affect my activities as a witch."

Witchcraft thrives in England today, as it does in Haiti, with its voodoo incantations and curses, India, Mexico, Africa, Spain, and even Russia, where last year a Soviet court jailed a woman for selling witchly prophesies and services, including a guarantee against another woman's son marrying a certain girl.

And the worldwide witchcraft revival has recently spread to this country, where it is flourishing, especially in Southern California, which currently boasts scores of witches' covens, specialty shops like the Witches Three in Pasadena, selling witchcraft supplies, occult clubs and experimental college classes dealing in such esoteric subjects as ESP (extrasensory perception) mysticism and pshchokinesis — moving objects by the mind without physical effort.

But modern witchcraft, at least in the Southland, has undergone a drastic change. No longer do witches claim to be in league with Satan, or cast evil spirits on their neighbors, or even practice the mystic arts as black magic.

Today's witches, like Louise Huebner, the official witch of Los Angeles County, practice white magic and cast good spells — so good in fact that Mrs. Huebner has been called The Good Witch of the West and invited to cast spells for colleges, women's clubs and groups of elderly believers.

Besides, Mrs. Huebner doesn't look like a witch. With her long black hair, attractive dark eyes and lithe figure, she looks more like a motion picture star than one of the wrinkled crones from Macbeth .

Witch Huebner, a sixth generation witch — her mother, grandmother and the great-greats practiced the occult arts back in their native Yugoslavia — is among the best known and most successful of modern witches.

She has written several books, including Power Through Witchcraft and The Witches Cook Book , appeared with her pet rat, Melissa, on television, taken roles in a number of motion pictures, written a syndicated newspaper column and recorded a long-playing album called Seduction Through Witchcraft, which is more interesting than instructive.

She denies, however, that witches owe allegiance to the devil, Satan or any evil spirits.

"The only person I've made a pact with is myself," she said.

"Actually, witches are too self-centered to waste time mixing potions and casting spells to do evil.

"Why waste all that energy if it won't do anything for the witch herself?

"Besides, there is no such thing as black magic and white magic, evil spirits and good spirits. There is only energy."

And Mrs. Huebner, married and the mother of three, needs that energy, because she deals almost exclusively in colossal spells.

During the ceremony at which she was proclaimed Los Angeles County's official witch by Ernest Debs, then chairman of the board of supervisors, Mrs. Huebner cast a spell — for increased sexual vitality — over everybody in the Hollywood Bowl, then later extended it to cover the entire county with unreported results.

A short time later, however, when the board of supervisors objected to her using the Much too busy for potions and spells

"official witch" title to promote her book sales and television appearances, she threatened to desex the entire county, but relented when the board took no further action.

So, at least for the time being, she's still Los Angeles County's only official witch.

Like Louise Huebner, Cassandra Salem — not her real name — is a witch, although she looks like an attractive 32-year-old Huntington Beach housewife, with a harried husband, a lively daughter and a frisky puppy to keep her busy.

Cassandra is conversant with all of the lesser good and evil spirits, understands the supernatural and belongs to a practicing coven of 13 witches.

Unlike Mrs. Huebner, Cassandra is a private witch. She said she and the more than one hundred practicing witches — both male and female — prefer it that way.

"You can say what you will about freedom of religion, but it just doesn't work that way. People get up tight when you tell them you're a witch; they look at you like you're some kind of a nut," she said in a recent interview.

"We're not nuts, but you can't change the way some people think, or even the way some companies think. I've never lost a job because of being a witch, but my friends have.

"That's why most witches and warlocks remain secret about their beliefs."

No fly-by-night witch, Cassandra says she is an expert in witchcraft and has spent more than a decade studying voodoo, black magic, mental telepathy and extrasensory perception.

In the time she can squeeze in from managing her home and caring for her family, she is writing a book that will attempt to sort the truth from fiction in witchcraft, is being interviewed for another book about the supernatural and recently served as a motion picture consultant.

The renewed interest in the Old Religion, as witchcraft is often called, has attracted thousands of new followers, especially young persons, Cassandra said.

"You see, witchcraft is a participatory religion. This isn't a religion where you go somewhere and sit to listen to a sermon," she explained.

"Witchcraft demands participation, and everyone, especially the young people, can take part.

"This is a return to nature, a worship of the natural gods as opposed to the chrome and glass gods you find in society. Witches are interested in finding power within themselves, in broadening our own minds.

"The young people are interested in the same things, so they've turned to witchcraft. The chants, music and color are sort of a way of turning on without drugs.

"A lot of people are disenchanted with organized religion and they're looking for more. Maybe they'll find it in witchcraft."

'A worship of the natural gods'

Once thought to be an almost dead art — following a centuries-long battle with both church and state — witchcraft in recent years has sprung back to life with rekindled vitality.

This occult revival is reflected in games, magazines, a new illustrated encyclopedia of the supernatural called Man, Myth & Magic , comic books, television programs, long-playing records and a recent motion picture called Horror at 37,000 Feet , in which mystic forces gain control of a giant jet airliner.

Witches have their own newspaper, The Waxing Moon , called a journal of the Old Religion, published in Topeka, Kans., as well as their own holidays — special esbats (meetings) are held at Halloween and for St. John's Eve — and a score of witches' supply shops in Los Angeles and Orange counties.

Although open interest in the occult, which just a few years ago would have produced snickers or outright ostracism , is more easily accepted today, there are still those who find themselves the victims of cruel persecution because of being labeled a witch.

That's exactly what happened in the case of Mrs. Anne Stewart, a 48-year-old Arizona school teacher, who lost her job and found herself an outcast in her own community because someone called her a witch after she discussed ancient folklore and witchcraft with the students in her class.

Mrs. Stewart, a teacher for almost 12 years, denies being a witch and expresses a profound belief in God.

"Most definitely, I believe in God. I wouldn't have survived this ordeal if I didn't," she said.

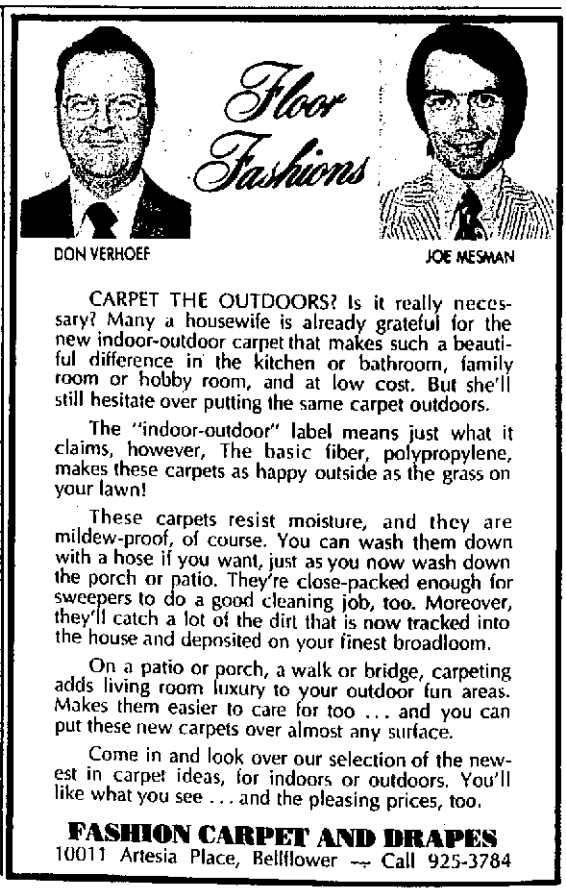

She is determined to continue her year-long fight for her job, not only for herself, but for other teachers.

"It's all for the other teachers. If I win, they'll get their freedom."

Somehow, being fired and ostracized from the community, even on the basis of a false accusation, is a far less drastic punishment than those meted out to the hundreds of girls, women and men accused earlier of practicing witchcraft or sorcery.

Louise Huebner can appear on television today and tell thousands of viewers, "I am a witch," and Cassandra Salem can admit that she and her friends attend coven meetings at which chants, spells and incantations are used to deal with earthly problems.

But three centuries ago such statements or participation would have meant hysterical accusations, a speedy trial and an even speedier execution by hanging, burning, flaying, drowning or being pressed to death.

Although witchcraft predates recorded history, it wasn't until the early 17th century that the mysterious forces began to take a frightening sway over man's imagination and create a state of mass hysteria.

Witch hunting actually became a profession in Europe, where some hunters received a yearly stipend from the government, and many witch hunts went on for years.

As early as 1484, Pope Innocent VIII issued a bill that gave rise to the idea that women witches sailed through the air on broomsticks, injured innocent people and committed horrible crimes, then later established a commission to write a book about witches called the Malleus Malefactorum, meaning witches's hammer, which for several centuries served as the textbook for the witch hunters who persecuted, tortured and executed thousands of women and some men.

Mrs. Anna Sithole is a sagoma or African witch doctor.

The number of executions in Germany alone for the crime of witchcraft often averaged 600 every year, and hundreds more were slain in England, Scotland, Spain and in the infamous witch trials of 1692 in Salem, Mass.

In 1537, Lady Glamis, an English witch, was burned alive, and a warlock named Roger Witche is reported to have been hanged, beheaded and quartered on a similar charge.

Even more bizarre was the execution of an accused witch named Huke, who was hanged together with her 9-year-old child on charges that were not specific.

Although Massachusetts was the scene of a hysterical witch hunt in 1692, the entire episode lasted just six months and only 20 persons were executed.

"It's amazing how little people know about that period," said Thomas Mulvihill, owner-curator of the Salem Witch Museum in an interview.

"For instance, some people think witches were burned in Salem. There was never a person burned for witchcraft in America.

"Nineteen of those accused in Salem were hanged. One other, a man named Giles Cory, was pressed to death. He was strapped down and rocks were piled on his chest in an effort to get him to confess. He refused to confess and was crushed."

Salem witches weren't burned

Even though the witch hunts in this country were relatively brief, the last witch trial in Germany occurred in 1849, and it wasn't until 1868 that the last "witch" was executed in Scotland.

In his book Witchcraft Today, the late Gerald B. Gardner, author of a number of books on the occult, told about some British witches who joined forces to stop Hitler from crossing the English Channel after he overran France.

"They met, raised the great cone of power and directed the thought at Hitler's brain: 'You cannot cross the sea, you cannot cross the sea, not able to come, not able to come,'" Gardner wrote, adding:

"I'm not saying they stopped Hitler; the fact is Hitler never even tried to come."

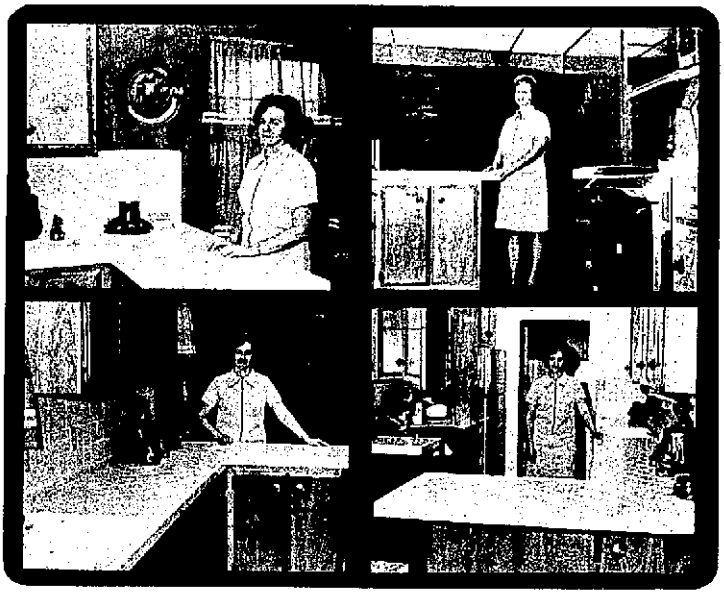

Although there are purported to be more than 800 practicing witches in the Southland, according to Paul Marion, behaviorial psychologist and lecturer, there are actually very few true witches around, "and those who seek publicity or claim extraordinary abilities are least apt to have heightened powers."

However, with that many witches and warlocks around, it has become difficult for the average non-initiate of witchcraft to easily determine which witch is which.

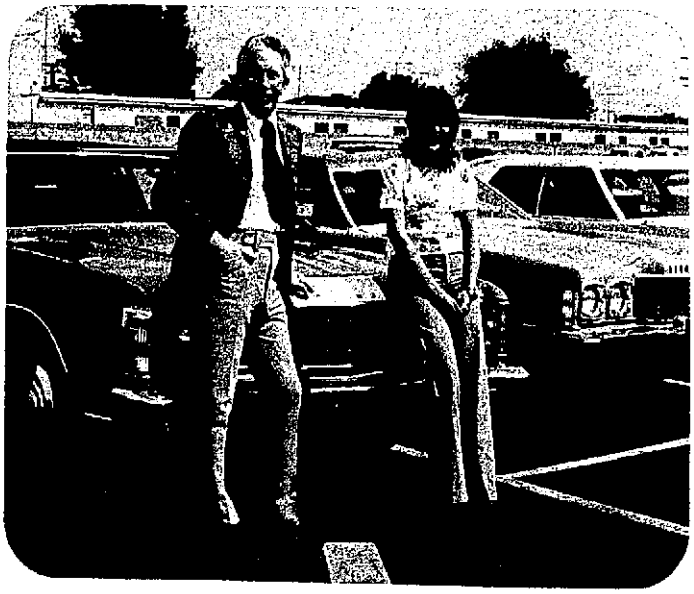

After all, your nextdoor neighbor might just be the witch which is. □

You keep a man the way you get a man: by having the best possible equipment and knowing how to use it.

Consider pots and pans.

If you know what to look for when you buy them, they can serve you well and long.

So here is what to look for when you buy them.

First look for durability. Nowadays, durability usually means stainless steel. But unfortunately, stainless steel isn't the best conductor of heat. So, ideally, what you want is a pot made of long-lasting stainless steel with a bottom made of aluminum to give you nice even heat distribution with no hot spots to burn what you're cooking.

Next, think about safety. Check the handle and make sure it's made of a material that won't retain heat and burn your fingers. Be sure to check the edges on the lip and cover of the pot. They should be rounded, not sharp, so they can't ever cut you.

Finally, look for good construction. If a pot's bottom is gently curved and slightly raised at the center, it's a sign of good construction. Because when the metal gets hot it expands, the center flattens down, and the bottom rests securely on the burner.

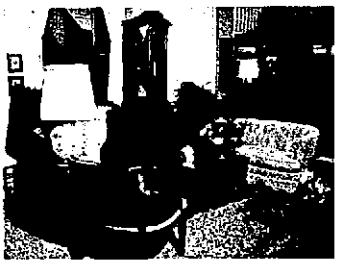

You can spend a lot of time looking for all these features and end up with pots and pans that cook well and last long.

Or you can spend a little time looking for our name on the bottom and end up with the same thing.

22 YEARS QUALITY CONSTRUCTION EXCELLENCE

Joanne Woodward

A nice gal who plays nuts

By REX REED

In a stark and terrifying period in movie history when practically everybody I meet seems to be feuding with somebody else, suing somebody else, or is just plain neurotic and confused, it is a genuine pleasure to take Joanne Woodward to lunch. Of all the movie stars I know, she is one of the least affected, least paranoid and easiest to take. God knows, she's easy to please.

"Just let me finish screaming and we'll grab some fish and chips at O'Neal's Balloon," she says, screwing up her nose for a dramatic take. Then she gives a one-take performance that makes your hair stand up and your stomach turn to buttermilk.

We're standing in an empty apartment for rent in a building on West End Avenue, where Joanne's new movie for Columbia and Ray Stark is being filmed. Here's a new switch for film companies tired of using the same old expensive Hollywood sound stages. Find an empty apartment in the want-ads, move in for a month's rent and use each room for a different scene. One room is an optometrist's office on Tuesday, a bedroom on Thursday. It does keep the cost down. The movie was called Death of a Snow Queen. Then they changed the title to Souvenir. It will probably change again before it is finally released because nobody likes any of the titles and Joanne is conducting a contest on the set to think up interesting new ones. The only thing that will not change is the quality of her performance, because from rehearsal to answer print there is no finer actress on the screen today and no better proof than the way she's currently burning a hole through the screen in The Effect of Gamma Rays on Man-in-the-Moon Marigolds. If there's any justice left in such matters, it should win her another Oscar nomination.

Joanne Woodward is famous for the tired, bedraggled, forelorn and almost always deeply disturbed women she plays in movies. It's always been that way. When anybody writes a script about a nut case, it usually gets offered to her because she plays them better than anybody else. For 17 years she's been going through agony on the screen and now in Gamma Rays she's doing it again, this time as a wounded mother insensitive to the frustrations of her two tragic children — giving one daughter an epileptic fit and killing the other daughter's pet rabbit. In Souvenir she plays a cold, isolated woman whose marriage has soured into incommunicable silence, whose mother dies of a heart attack before her eyes while she looks on helplessly, whose daughter has grown apart from her and whose son turns out to be homosexual.

Pecan pie and fish and chips

"Stewart Stern, who wrote one of my favorite films, Rachel, Rachel, for me, is also the author of this one," she says, "and it really is a beautiful script. It's about a woman who makes the awful discovery of how brief life really is, too brief even to correct one's worst mistakes, and even worse, too brief really to ever change. It's very depressing, and just between you and me, I've just about had it with being depressed."

She slips into a dressing gown, the camera turns and Joanne walks through a hall as though in a daze, turns the doorknob to her son's room, fixes her gaze just below a Rudolph Nureyev poster and sees her naked son in the arms of a man. Her face goes white with nausea as she lets out a blood-boiling scream. Everyone applauds. "That's my Joan Bennett scream," she giggles. "I suddenly realized while I was doing it that I was imitating Joan Bennett in Dark Shadows. We go up to her dressing room, another empty apartment on the floor above, where she spends her time between scenes reading Bobby Fisher's chess book. Posted over the mirror — photos of Paul Newman, Nureyev and Christopher Lee sinking his bloody fangs into the neck of a nubile virgin. She loves horror movies, trash food and a lot of other things great dramatic actresses are not supposed to publicize. She's a Southerner straight through, so much so that when the Newmans bought their mansion in Beverly Hills, she had all the palm trees uprooted and Louisiana magnolias replanted on the front lawn. She never spends any time in Hollywood. In fact, she doesn't do much of anything like a movie star. Both of the Newmans are notorious threats to the press agents who are hired to make them look glamorous.

"You know what I got Paul for Christmas? An old-fashioned lorgnette he can wear around his neck because he's always losing his glasses. He can hardly see to read the paper without his glasses." Paul Newman's multibillion-dollar blue eyes? Glasses? See what I mean?

She avoids the fashionable restaurants, settles on O'Neal's Balloon near Philharmonic Hall because it's close to the ballet, where she spends every free moment and because they serve the best Southern pecan pie in New York.

"I had to straighten them out — they were serving phony whipped cream," she adds. She pours ketchup on her fish and chips (well, it's better than Paul Newman, who sprays ketchup over his eggs every breakfast) and talks about that missing image.

"Are you kidding? I'm afraid as Hollywood movie stars we're both terrible flops. I never could stand Hollywood. I loathe palm trees and I also dug up the cactus garden. Paul's whole life is beer and motorcycles and mine is going to the ballet. We spend all of our time in Connecticut, in an old house in Westport. It is a far cry from that social scene in Beverly Hills. Bette Davis lives nearby, but we've never seen her. She phoned one day to thank Paul for something she read about in the local hometown paper and he said, 'Come over and see us sometime,' and she said, 'WHY?' I've loved her for that ever since. The only thing I miss about Hollywood is not having a screening room where we can show movies at home. But we're such slobs we always slept through everything anyway. I slept through Claire's Knee. I never saw the last half of Five Easy Pieces. We started to build one in Westport, but the only place we had any room was in the middle of my organic garden."

The house in Westport is overrun with five kids and Joanne's mother and half the wildlife of the state of Connecticut. The zoo is managed by the Newmans' 13-year-old, Nell, who also moonlights as Joanne's co-star in Marigolds. When she was a baby, they called her Nellpotts, a family nickname. So when she got the lead in her father's movie, she chose Nell Potts as a professional name. When she was two, her parents threw sheets over their heads and played ghosts with her. She wasn't frightened then, and she wasn't frightened by her mother's cruelty toward her as her movie mother either.

"Nell won't ever need a psychiatrist," sighs Joanne. "She's not an actress in the first place and couldn't care less about it in the second place. She loves the camaraderie of being part of a movie, and she loves the money because she has a whole menagerie to support and it was like getting an allowance. The only similarities between her and the child in the movie are her interests in science and her poetic outlook on life. But she'd like to be an ornithologist. Her library is a huge compendium of books on hawks and eagles. She owns every book written about pigeons. We gave her an electric handsaw for Christmas so she can build pigeon houses. I think she only acted in the film because Paul told her he refused to pay for her pigeon food anymore. Now the other kids want to know when they will get to be actors too. I think they think it's always fun to go to work if Daddy is directing or Mommy is starring, but if they ever have to face the reality and toughness of the business, they'll change their minds."

Joanne's face also stars in Sleuth. She's Laurence Olivier's wife in the painting. Another photo of her gets riddled with bullets.

"They sent me the painting of myself and there was no place to put it so my mother has it hanging out in the barn. The other photo of me with Olivier is a fake. The man in the picture was really Gore Vidal. They pasted Olivier's face over the body. It's all a fake, don't you know that? In Marigolds I was supposed to be one of the frowziest hags in town. All the clothes were my mother's because she's a pack rat and never throws anything away, so I went through her closet and dragged out a lot of old junk and dyed it a tacky color and wore it. I was so depressed and suicidal during that film, I couldn't stand it.

A nice gal

"Being directed by my husband is not a problem. Paul is the easiest person in the world. We had big fights, but we have big fights at home too. I never have to explain myself to him like I do with directors I don't know. But I hated that gooky rinse they put on my hair that got all over the pillowcase at night. I hated the way I looked and I hated that character and what she did to those children. I don't look or act like that. But let's face it — nobody is going to hire me for a comedy. The only part I ever really fought for was Forty Carats, but nobody is going to cast me as a 40-year-old sex symbol.

Joanne Woodward is tired of looking like she did in "The Effect of Gamma Rays on Man-in-the-Moon Marigolds." She says she's quitting the movies to major in philosophy.

"To tell you the truth, I'm sick of all of it. I am seriously planning to give up acting for awhile. I've enrolled in Sarah Lawrence. I'm studying philosophy."

She shrieks her Academy Award-winning Three Faces of Eve cackle. "Doesn't this sound like an old Marilyn Monroe interview? But I'm not putting you on. I'm serious. I never graduated from Louisiana State University. When I was there, I majored in parties, I think. Anyway, I want to go back to school, so I'm just going to drop out for awhile."

We rise to go and she looks so attractive and crisp in the afternoon light that I see her point. The movies missed a big chance not showing her off in lighter roles with dazzling wardrobes. (She did play a fashionplate once in a comedy called A New Kind of Love but, as she freely suggests, "Nobody ever saw it but you and my mother.") So the movies may lose their best soap-opera sufferer.

"I'm tired of playing worn-out, depressing ladies in frayed bathrobes," says Joanne Woodward with the verbena-accented determination of Scarlett O'Hara. "I'm going to get a new hairdo and look terrific and go back to school and even if nobody else notices, I'm going to be the most self-fulfilled lady on the block. What do you think Sarah Lawrence will think about that?"

She'll love it. □

A series of reflection pools stretch along a staircase leading to the Lloyd home.

It's always Christmas in the sun room of Harold Lloyd's home.

The splendor of old Hollywood

The stately home is a reminder of the Hollywood of another era.

Harold Lloyd slept here

By EHUD YONAY

There is a lovely spot on top of a hill overlooking Benedict Canyon in Beverly Hills, where a stretch of lawn runs from the bottom of a big old house to a small, weathered concrete balcony with a rusty cast-iron railing that juts out into space. The ground below drops suddenly hundreds of feet down, leaving it suspended in midair, in time.

There is magic quality about the aged concrete, the chipped stone benches, the four-faced smiling gargoyle perched high overhead on a concrete pillar. It is a stark, almost too perfect composition. It looks as if each part of it was ordered by name from the prop department of MGM, then assembled by a master director into a hauntingly beautiful movie set.

Hollywood mansions have that quality about them. Theater people may act and live dramatically, but movie people are given to the fairy tale, in their work and lives alike. And their homes often show it, belonging nowhere and everywhere - strange, beautiful, familiar, mysterious, evoking memories, gaudy, deliciously explorable, haunted — everybody's childhood dream house.

Perhaps they look so much like movie sets because in this part of town called Hollywood there was never a real separation between the fairy tales on screen and off, because the magic that made the name was more than a well-promoted and marketed product. It was a way of life, a unique sort of civilization that thrived briefly between the time man's technology allowed him to put moving pictures on a large screen and the time when the pictures were put on tiny screens in millions of living rooms, thus removing the magic from it all.

But for the time it lasted, this place of make-believe was so much alive that it became a reality of itself, the fairy tale city, with its roots spread in a thick web all over the world, gathering so much money and adoration from thousands of darkened movie houses, that it could have sustained a kingdom, let alone a small town that believed in its own bedtime stories.

Nurtured by the love, adulation and hopes that were beamed its way from every nook and corner of the world, this town became the seat of the gods for Western civilization, a living mythology for a generation which longed to believe in fairy tales, a Mount Olympus, King Arthur's Court and Camelot rolled into one. It was the fabled city of the skies, where miracles still happened, where mortals could be made into gods so big that they were seen from every spot on the globe, admired, worshipped and envied.

There was, to use an overworked phrase, a little bit of Hollywood in all of us in those days, and when we stopped believing in the magic, Hollywood was gone. Howard Johnson built a restaurant on the corner of Hollywood and Vine. The Garden of Allah gave way to a new bank. The old, marvelous sets of Meet Me in St. Louis and Mutiny on the Bounty in MGM's Lot in Culver City were torn down and a housing project took their place.

To the tourist who comes here to rediscover old Hollywood there is little to look forward to. A fast trolley ride through the slick moneytrap of Universal Studios. A brief visit to Grauman's Chinese Theater to see the footprints of the stars set in cement. A bus ride through Beverly Hills along tall hedges and quiet streets where stars may have once lived. Nothing real, really, nothing a post card couldn't show.

That is why the big house with the yellow lawn and the aged concrete balcony above Benedict Canyon is so special. Hollywood still lives there — the real Hollywood, the pre-chrome and television Hollywood. This month the big gates at the bottom of the hill will swing open and the public will be allowed a glimpse at how it used to be at Harold Lloyd's Hollywood.

People who knew him say that Harold Lloyd was in real life just what he appeared to be in the movies, a good-natured, fun-loving, bumbling young man, who kept getting into hysterically funny situations only to fall back on his feet and even come out ahead. His love of life impregnates every corner of his house even today, two years after his death. Some Hollywood mansions tend to look like cold, musty mausoleums while their owners are still alive. Not this one. Probably because Lloyd never stopped living, never longed for the old days while shutting off the present.

Only three years ago, at 77, he took his 18-year-old granddaughter to Paris and led her on such a rampage through that city's night-clubs that she had to give up at midnight and beg him to come back to the hotel. Back in 1965 he found himself so busy with charity work with the Shriners that he decided it made no sense to buy a new Christmas tree every year and decorate it just for a few weeks. As a result, he left his Christmas tree standing in the sun room, adding new trimmings every year until today the tree literally cannot be seen for the ornaments.

It was typical of the man, for the most impressive thing about the house is neither size nor splendor, but its lived-in look. Like a well-thumbed, leatherbound dictionary, it imparts the unmistakable impression that with all its magnificence it was meant first and foremost to serve its master and not the other way around. If man's stature is judged by his ability to shape his world to his wishes, then Lloyd was a big man, molding his huge estate around his person the way a driver adjusts his car seat for pleasure and comfort.

Hollywood visited the Lloyd mansion

We drove up to the house on a recent Saturday, one of those glorious afternoons in Southern California, when the tall palm trees of Beverly Hills sway gently against an incredibly blue sky and the white and pink stucco of early California homes glistens in the warm light just as they did in those days when the big house was built, before the smog foiled the air and made filming impossible.

A few blocks north of Sunset Boulevard, on Benedict Canyon Drive, there was a tall hedge to the left with a big gate in the middle. As soon as we drove through it the sound of traffic died and the magic was on. There was a small meadow just behind the gate with a creek and white ducks and a tiny bridge that led us into a dense forest that draped the hill like a heavy, lush cape, shutting off the outside as the road led up the slope.

We drove through another gate into a wide parking area that looked like the inner court of a Spanish hacienda, where a slender, aging man with a twinkle in his eye came toward us. He had the fresh complexion and the clear eyes that only living close to the earth can give — that open innocence of a man life has been good-to. He apologized for the neglected look of the garden.

"At one time I had 20 gardeners working with me to keep the place up, but in recent years we had to let most of them go, and it is difficult to keep ahead of work," he said. His name is Walter Diamond, and he has been head gardener ever since the house was built in 1929 when the terraces were erected and the trees put in.

"Oh, it was different all right in those days. There were people coming here all the time. You might say I had a chance to meet everybody who was anybody in Hollywood and many who weren't. It was a very happy house. I cannot think of a better man to work for than Mr. Lloyd. He was such a good man, not at all like some of the Hollywood people who talk as if they were 3 feet taller than you," he added.

Just then a red sports car purred its way into the yard, and Suzanne Lloyd Guasti, Lloyd's granddaughter, came out to show us around the place. A petite, attractive young woman, she had the clean, well-scrubbed look one hardly associates with Hollywood's young generation. She wore slacks and a flowered blouse and a fleece- trimmed suede coat, and as she led us through the grounds she talked about her grandfather and life in the big house. She was raised by Lloyd, whom she still calls daddy, and lived 18 of her 21 years there.

She took us to the swimming pool on a tree-enclosed terrace. A large ballroom opened onto the pool, and on the other side there was an arcade of heavy columns and climbing vines. It was quiet and secluded. As we were to discover, the place had to be taken in piecemeal, with only a small part of it visible at any one time. It was not meant to overwhelm its visitors, but to draw them with the promise of more delicious discoveries beyond each turn along the path.

There were many such corners, where the forest ended abruptly, revealing large clearings with patios and reflection pools, gazebos and tiny observation balconies overlooking the hills and the new real estate tracts of Benedict Canyon. The house revealed itself slowly. First the back wall, covered with ivy, with leaded windows opening on the lawn like those of an English country manor. Then the side, as the trail led to sunken gardens and a hidden tennis court. Only then the full view, rising above a sequence of stairs in a quiet beauty that was almost anti climatic. There was a large square of lawn in front and a gazebo at the end. In the summer, we were told, the lawn would be covered with a dance floor, a top-name band would be set up in the gazebo and guests would dance under the stars until dawn.

It was a nice place to grow up in, Suzanne said. It took her forever to discover who her grandfather really was. "Sure, I knew he had money and something to do with Hollywood, but I thought he was a businessman or a producer of some sort, and he never tried to impress me with his background and career," she said. "He always had reporters from Variety and the Hollywood Reporter coming up and people bringing scripts to read, but he usually went through all that while I was in school, so when I got home he was just my Daddy," she laughed. She then took us to see the huge doll house he had built for her mother, a rustic European farm house with a thatched roof and tiny windows through which we could see the miniature country furniture, custommade especially for his little girl. "Once when I was very little, the phone rang but Daddy couldn't get to it. I picked it up and asked who it was, and the man on the other side said he was Cary Grant and may he please speak to Daddy. I remember I let out such a shriek I'm sure he thought I was crazy. I couldn't figure out what a regular person like Daddy would have to do with a movie star," she recalled. She had met Hollywood luminaries in the house even before then — Mary Pickford, King Victor and many more, but for her they were just a part of the family. Mary Pickford was always Aunt Mary, but Cary Grant? Why, he was a real movie star . . .

The estate was much bigger at one time, she said as we walked toward the house, which was a rustic combination of English manor and Mexican hacienda. Lloyd's kennels, where he raised his prize Great Danes, stood where the Mormon temple is now, on Santa Monica Boulevard. Right behind it, where St. Paul's church stands now, was Lloyd's film studio. Some years ago the city took over a few acres at the bottom of the hill to construct a storm drain and tore down the watermill, the formal gardens and a large part of the twisting brook where Lloyd used to run his canoe.

100 guests arrived in sheets at 3 a.m.

Once inside, this huge house looked much smaller than expected. The rooms are not big, just spacious enough for a good-sized group of guests. There are many such rooms and many more upstairs, but they are not obvious. There is Lloyd's study, with walls covered with books whose appearance indicated much use, and a solid desk at the end. There is the music room, with a painted piano, a beautiful 200-year-old rug and French furniture with needlepoint covers made by Mrs. Lloyd herself.

And then the large living room, with a split-level floor and a huge player-organ in the corner, next to the fireplace. Each Sunday a group of friends would get together and a movie would be shown here, old movies, new movies, seldom Lloyd's own films. "Daddy saw every new movie that came out," Suzanne said. "He may not have agreed with some of the new ones such as Easy Rider, but he never thought that only the old movies were good. He liked Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid very much."

Lloyd's own films, incidentally, remained his property, negatives and all, and were locked in large vaults. After his death a young friend who came to admire them took over the collection, transferred all the films from the sensitive nitrate base onto safety film and wrapped the negatives with tissues to keep them from deteriorating. Due to his effort the collection was saved, and some of the films may be reissued for television in the near future.

The living room was not used just for viewing movies. Parties were the big thing. "Daddy and Mimi (her grandmother) always used to try and surprise each other on birthdays and anniversaries. Once Mimi woke up at 3 o'clock in the morning when she heard noise downstairs. She woke Daddy up and forced him to come down with her to check it. As they got down, the noises were coming from all over. When they came to the sun room, there were some 100 guests waiting, all wearing white sheets over their heads. Mimi nearly died. Daddy had planned it all. He even hired somebody to drop a Ping-Pong ball on the stairs at night, which was what woke Mimi up."

If you're big on Circus side shows, you'll just love this book.

The original ANOMALIES AND CURIOSITIES OF MEDICINE, an encyclopedia of rare and extraordinary cases of abnormalities of medicine and surgery was first published in 1896.

Today it's being published again in its entirety—295 illustrations, 968 pages of text. Most of the photographs in this book were too frightening to show; and we sincerely did not want to offend anyone. But without a doubt, this is one of the most interesting and fascinating books we've ever come across.

Never has one book on the subject of human curiosities contained so much! Such famous cases of human abnormalities as the grotesque "Elephant-Man," the green "Alligator-Boy," the "Elastic Skin-Man," the famous "Siamese Twins," Eng and Chang, plus hundreds of others.

As entertaining as this book may be, it was seriously written by two doctors, giving in-depth medical explanations of each abnormality covered.

WARNING: THIS BOOK IS NOT FOR THE SQUEAMISH!

To be honest with you, when we first saw this book, everyone at the office (Broadway Bookfinders) said, "Ugh." But once we got over the shock, we couldn't put the book down. For those who enjoy this kind of reading and have a strong stomach, you'll find this book fascinating, unusual and very freaky! Only $5.95. Moneyback Guarantee

The sun room, where Lloyd's famous Christmas tree stood, was a lovely, elongated room with windows which opened onto a square inner garden. The ceiling was covered with an intricate fresco, showing leaves and trellises and cherubs. "Do you notice anything peculiar about the fresco?" Suzanne asked. We didn't. "Well, Daddy had brought in this Italian artist to do the fresco. He kept hiring and firing assistants, and after three and a half years in the house the room was only three-quarters finished. Finally Daddy got tired of it and told him to finish and get out of here in three weeks. The artist protested that there was an awful lot of work still to be done, painting the little leaves and everything, so my Daddy told him to make the leaves bigger, just so he would be out in time. If you notice, the leaves on the ceiling are small and delicate, but over at the end they look like grape leaves. That was Daddy," she laughed.

Walking us back to the car, she explained that the Harold Lloyd Foundation, which owns the house and is run by her and a group of young people, all sons of well-known Hollywood personalities, is a non-profit organization. The money collected from visitors will be given (after deducting the costs of running the estate) to the Motion Picture Relief Fund and similar charitable causes. For the public, she said, it will be the only place in town where people could see what Hollywood was like in those distant years. The City of Beverly Hills already has issued the necessary permits, and Los Angeles is about to do so.

It was getting late in the day. The sun was going down fast, making the walls of the big house shine in pinks and purples and turning the trees into delicate it for the night. For a moment we were not sure whether the gate was meant to keep intruders out or to prevent the dreams from escaping and dissipating into the cool afternoon air. □ major force in bringing about a "culture center" he envisions in the vicinity of the city's new $3 million library, now under construction.

One of the less ambitious projects he has in mind this day when he is being interviewed is a "traveling museum," a mobile museum that will take exhibits from the new museum to classrooms. "Kind of a people's museum," he says. "Not the hands-off thing museums usually are." Arrangements are not definite but "it is something that can happen very fast."

Phone for a book from a catalogue

It is but one of a number of ideas that pours out as he ruminates on potential cultural facilities and the role of a library in 1973. He is an innovative man ("less tradition bound than librarians usually are," a fellow librarian describes him), restlessly questioning old ways, searching for better ones. He has introduced several untraditional services into the present Huntington Beach City Library.

His phone-for-a-book mail service, believed to be the only one in the country, is about a year old. Now he is talking about a home catalog of library books for patrons, which would be particularly useful to those using the mail service. Or maybe a monthly brochure of new books similar to those book stores distribute at Christmas. It is just in the idea stage and details are loose.

"It could be purchased by the homeowner or it could be distributed free and paid for by ads in it," he suggests.

The new library building, scheduled to open next April, will contain a potpourri of other services and facilities, many of them geared to the changing technology of the communications media.

Johnson has been city librarian of Huntington Beach for the past 14 years and has been talking about a need for city cultural facilities much of that time. It is a natural role for him. He is a former professional artist who earned his master's degree in art at Michigan State University and taught art at Long Beach Polytechnic High School and in Artesia before earning a master of library science degree at the University of Southern California. But the explanation for his present intense involvement in promoting local cultural activity and the very recent official city interest in the subject lies in the community's rapidly changing character.

From Pacific Coast Highway, to the unwary eye, Huntington Beach looks much as it has for a long time. The long beachfront corridor formed by the surfer-encrusted Pacific, paralleling a mile and a half of oil pumps, still leads to essentially the same old downtown. A large new apartment complex juts up on the beach, and the restaurant at the entrance to the city fishing pier is of recent vintage. But opposite the pier, "downtown" wends it way up a drab Main Street much as it has for decades. The neighborhoods of California bungalows visible from the highway and the short string of aging storefronts facing the pier give no sign that the city is not the same small oil and beach town of a decade ago. Even the modern hotels to the south opposite Huntington Beach State Park Beach and the city's beach parking area have been there long enough to seem a well-established part of the Huntington Beach scene.

The appearance of little change is misleading. Huntington Beach is the fastest growing city in fast-growing, new-construction-speckled Orange County. The 11,405 population of a mere 13 years ago is now 146,000 and is expected to pass 200,000 in another decade. The boundaries of what before 1957 was a 4.7-square-mile-city now stretch from the Seal Beach Weapons Station nearly 10 miles south to the Santa Ana River and Costa Mesa, enclosing 26 square miles of land area. Its residential tracts range from the luxurious marina homes of Huntington Harbour to the walled tracts south of Beach Boulevard.

Changes other than size also are noticeable.

"There's a different tenor to the times and different attitudes in people," says Johnson. "In the past there was more of a small town attitude. It was more conservative, more in tune with the idea of Orange County as the most conservative county in the country (an idea he doesn't think ever was valid)." As a librarian he finds the reader of westerns has about disappeared and the mystery reader is diminishing. There is more of a demand for periodicals. People in the community are "younger, aggressive and highly intelligent," he says. "It's becoming a really sophisticated community."

It's a view heard often in Huntington Beach today from residents, apparently eager to modify the town's conservative image.

"I don't think it is nearly as conservative as a lot of other places in the country we've been," says one woman active in civic affairs. "There are more educated people. Their views are tempered somewhat. They're more — well, sophisticated."

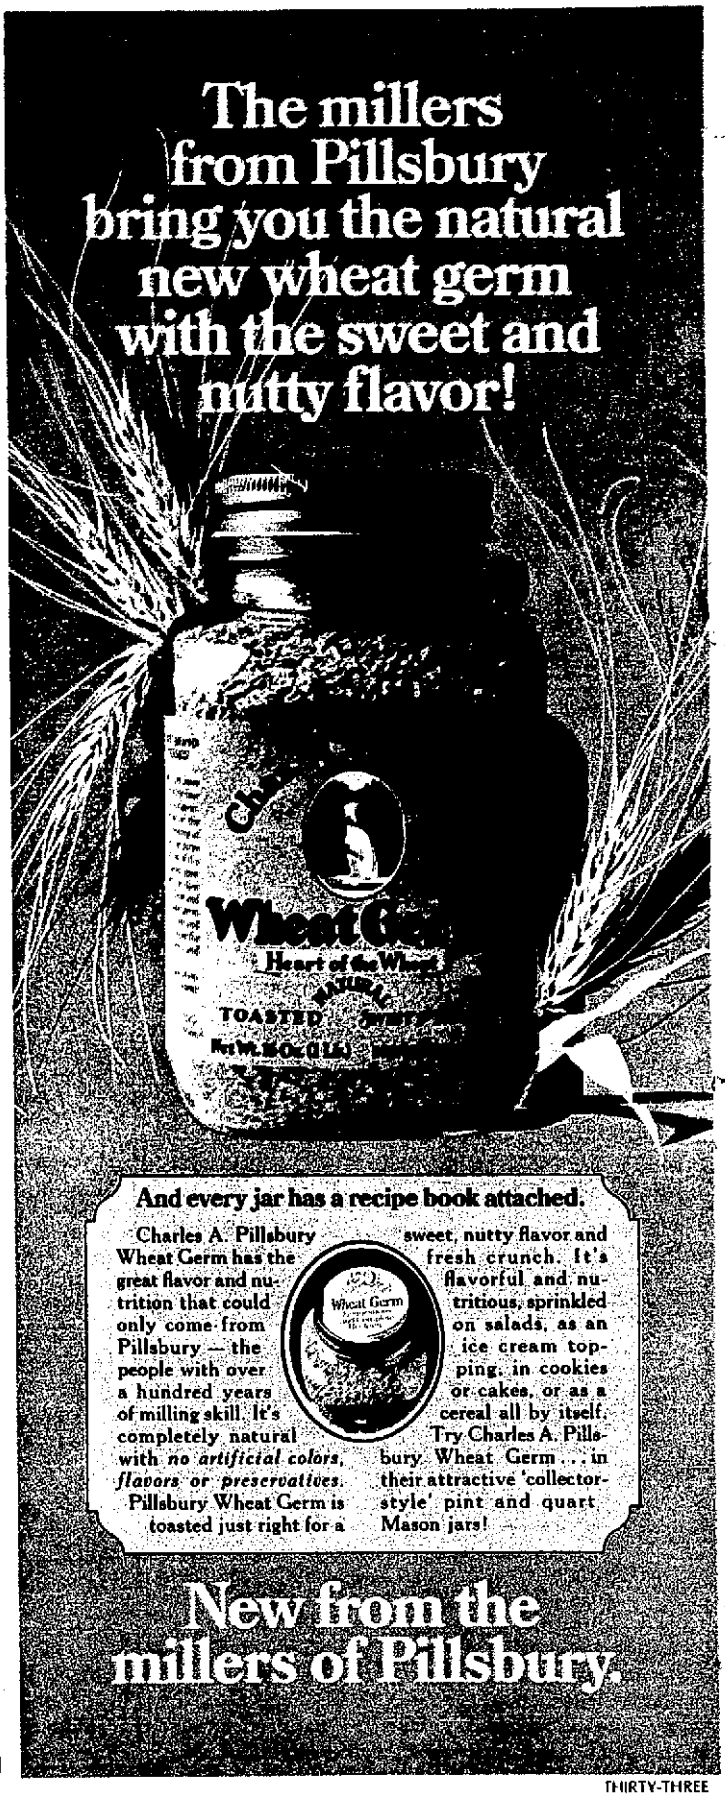

It is this enlightened new citizenry which is now ready to support an expansion of city cultural facilities.

Despite its spectacular growth — or because of it — Huntington Beach today is a sprawling municipality with a makeshift, patched-together look. Its boundaries include not only a wide assortment of residential tracts, shopping centers, oil fields, light industry and both Bolsa Chica and Huntington Beach state park beaches but a considerable amount of open countryside, much of it farmland. Broad patches of nonurbanized areas separate new residential tracts from the original city core and from each other, giving the municipality more the appearance of a collection of unaffiliated neighborhoods than a united community. The new city library being constructed in the approximate geographical and population center of the city appears to be out in the country with no city close at hand.

The city is "bordering on the edge of being a bedroom community," says Johnson, who hopes to "not let that happen." ("I see that as a major part of my role.")

He sees local cultural activity serving not only as a means of fostering an "enlightened, enriched and creative personal life" for citizens (as the Huntington Beach Citizens Committee phrases it), but as a vehicle for providing a sense of community identity in the fast-growing city.

The view that the city needs to develop such a community identity is heard frequently among concerned Huntington Beach citizenry. Members of the Citizens Committee, which recently completed a yearlong study of goals and objectives for the city, made a point of it, particularly emphasizing a desire for attention to the city's cultural heritage.

The local history association that Johnson organized about nine months ago in response to what he sees as a need for "some kind of local history identification" is already 80 members strong. It is gathering material for a local history museum to be located in a building to be vacated by the City Planning Department when the Civic Center, now under construction, is completed.

The original stimulus for Johnson's present intense involvement in promotion of a local cultural renaissance was not concern for local problems of community identity, however, but the isolated position picked for the new library. Its location demanded it become something more than a library he felt. So the idea of surrounding it with a culture center of museums, art galleries, theaters and sculpture gardens ("Everything that is remotely related that will add to its use") was born.

Computers, cameras and talking books

Both of the new museums expected to open within a year are destined — "probably in five or six years" — to have a new building in the culture center near the library.

He is not waiting for longterm construction to attract local residents to the city's architecturally striking new library, however. The glass-walled building, which will overlook Talbert Lake and the new 157-acre Central City Park being built nearby, will contain a smorgasbord of services and facilities within its own walls.

With the help of a community referral service and numerous technological devices, it will be a center to which a resident can go for any kind of information — from help with homework to advice on how to find a doctor. An Associated Press wire service teletype will clack out the news near the entry and, if present plans work out, a machine will provide stock market prices. College courses for credit through Golden West College will be available in computer assisted instruction carrels. A graphics room for work on both art and film projects plus soundproof study or music carrels and a recreation room for high school students, complete with juke box, also will be included.

The new facilities will reflect the high priority Johnson gives to late developments in the means of communication in both the use of computers and the audiovisual field.

A computer check-out system for books, expected to be ready for the opening of the library, may be the first in the country. In addition to easing record-keeping problems, it may help relieve what he sees as a major shortcoming of libraries — the inability to foresee what books people are going to want. ("We're always after the fact. People come in and ask for something; then we run around and get it.") The computer system will make it possible to keep an accurate record of which books and subject areas are most popular, providing a buying guide "so we can come closer to reality."

Popular new books will be supplied in quantities to equal demand, he says. "We want to supply the needs of the community and not do what most libraries do — buy one copy and think they've supplied the needs."

To the films, projectors and records widely loaned by libraries, he added cassette recorders and a large stock of cassettes two years ago. Now he is beginning an innovative videotape camera loan service, originated by a library in the East, while already looking toward loaning equipment not yet feasible. Videotape cassettes for television when home units are available. Perhaps a device for home reading of copies of microfilm — the card-sized pieces of film containing miniature reproduction of four or five books, which he introduced in his library a couple of years ago, greatly increasing the books he could provide for research.

"And some place down the road," he predicts, "you're going to check out a little portable computer unit that you can plug into your home telephone, dial a computer and receive information — either on a screen or as typed information — for a college course at home."

Equipment already available has thrust libraries into "a new era," he says. "In the past libraries just stored that that was produced by publishers. Now you have the opportunity to create. You can put together programs. You can read books on tape for people whose eyesight is failing. You have the opportunity to get this videotape equipment out into the hands of individuals so they can put together programs for their own groups or show local problems to the city council."

Local programs may eventually get a wider airing in the small TV studio that is being built into the new library. Johnson has high hopes that in a couple of years the library will have a channel on cable television.

Meanwhile he mulls over other ideas:

The real "banquet" of a lunch he would like to see the city serve volunteers who work in the library. "Like a big old-fashioned sewing bee."

The vehicles he hopes to have deliver information and art materials to the handicapped, aged and convalescent, providing "whatever they need — whether it's cable TV hookups, talking books or more extensive tutoring than is available now."

It is one of a number of programs he thinks may be accomplished through the Huntington Beach Joint Network, a joint powers agreement he instigated between the library, Golden West College, Ocean View Elementary School District and Huntington Beach High School District "to better supply the community's information and communication needs." The organization, which several school districts outside Huntington Beach are now asking to join will be an instrument not only for providing programs and facilities "on larger scale than any one public library or any one school district can do" but for coordinating the use of materials and equipment owned separately.

"There has to be some coordinating going on," he says. "You've got so many new expensive materials — computer learning systems, television and videotape and microwave and Lord knows what else. Maybe we ought to have a regional resource center of media that all these people can use. Maybe that's what we ought to be doing."

As for the new, yet-to-be-opened library . . . when he starts to think of all these new "media things" . . .

"Maybe it's already out of date," he laughs. □

GOURMET

by Tedd Thomey

Young people in their 20s and nostalgia buffs aged 30 to 60 and older are all making the same stimulating discovery.

The last of the oldtime supper clubs — still in mint condition — is alive and well and doing fabulously atop Signal Hill.

The Hilltop Supper Club and Star Room, 2300 E. 23rd St., is the only one of its kind in Southern California within a radius of 100 miles. A substantial portion of the structure was first built atop the hill about 1905. It was part of a showplace Tudor manor constructed by land developer George W. Hughes.

The western half of the supper club, including the dance floor and the dining room with large view windows overlooking Long Beach and the harbor, were added in the mid-1940s. They have been redecorated and refurbished from time to time. But the decor is still basically the same as it was in the 1940s.

"Don't ever change it," say the nostalgia buffs who find joy in discovering objects of the past which have been maintained lovingly year after year.

"We won't," reply Reed Williams and his vivacious wife Maxine, who bought the Hilltop in the 1960s and have been in love with the place ever since.

Reed is a superb musician who once played with Freddy Martin and other top bandsmen. He and his trio play for dancing nightly (except Mondays), offering the swing tunes of the 1940s as well as the best works of modern composers.

The steak and sea food dinners are equally superb. Featured are the top sirloin, a big, beautiful, pampered steak, $5.95; delightful eastern deep sea scallops, $3.95; halibut with a light buerre noir topping, $3.95; handsome thick lamb chops, $4.95; and such other choices as filet of beef a la Stifado, grenadine of beef tenderloin saute with wine sauce and the always popular steak-lobster combination.

All are on generous, colorful dinners, including relish tray, soup of the day and topnotch salad, baked Idaho potato, hot cheesebread and beverage. Also emphasized are a la carte prime rib and steak sandwiches. Dinner is served from 6 p.m. on.

GUIDE

IT WASN'T a slow decision, but it was agonizing. It had to be made quickly because Arnold Vann and his wife Audra found they were losing money at a distressing rate.

For years the price of the renowned prime rib au jus dinner at their Tenderloin restaurant, 4363 Atlantic Ave., was $2.50. It was an unusual price for such a handsome establishment and it brought them a lot of new customers who became loyal Tenderloin boosters and supporters.

Then the price of beef went out of sight. Audra and Vann, who have owned the restaurant eight and a half years, had to make a choice. Should they reduce the quality and keep that superpopular price? How about giving the customers a slightly smaller slice of juicy, savory prime rib?

Vann and Audra entertained those thoughts quite briefly. To cut their quality or the size of the slice was unthinkable. There was only one possible solution. The price would have to go up 45 cents — to $2.95.

Then came more questions: What would the customers think? Would they still come in as often as they did in the past?

Audra and Vann needn't have worried. Their supporters and boosters haven't deserted them. The Tenderloin is as popular as ever, because — with prices zooming everywhere — that $2.95 dinner is definitely a "best buy." Once again the Vanns' competitors are shaking their heads with envy and asking: "How can such a beautiful place serve such a dinner at such a price?"

The answer is experience. Vann has spent at least half his life in the food business. He knows how to buy quality and serve quality consistently. He keeps waste remarkably low and passes the saving on to his happy customers.

Served on immaculate linen, his dinners include fresh soup or a fine salad, garlic toast on a silver tray, baked potato and tender green beans. Other entrees include mini-lobster tails, $3.75; delicious filet of sole, $2.25, and barbecued beef ribs, $2.25. Closed Mondays, the Tenderloin serves luncheon daily, featuring the hot prime rib sandwich, $1.25.

AUDRA VANN
Definitely a best buy.

Medicine & You

Keeping a tooth alive outside the mouth for periods of several weeks may be advantageous in carrying out a tooth transplantation, researchers report.

Poorly positioned, unusable teeth can be removed and transplanted back into the same mouth. This is an accepted procedure in dentistry, says the American Dental Association.

For instance, impacted teeth, those that have been blocked from normal entry into the mouth during development, can often become functional if a dentist removes and repositions them. The removal and replacement are usually carried out in the same operation.

But three Stockholm, Sweden, dentists suggest that at times it is beneficial to delay transplantation until the jaw and gums have healed.

Surgical removal of an impacted tooth results in a temporary space in the bone. Sometimes, if the space is large, this can cause problems in repositioning the transplanted tooth and in healing.

Inflammation of the area around the tooth-removal site can also cause complications.

By waiting until the tissues have healed or perhaps even until the vacancy is closed by the generation of new bone, the dentists believe that transplantation may be more successful.

In the Journal of Oral Surgery the dentists report the case of a 42-year-old woman who was treated for an impacted molar. The tooth was removed surgically and placed in a laboratory test tube, where it was cultured and kept alive.

Within two weeks the site of the tooth removal had completely healed. At the end of the third week, the tooth was transplanted to a new socket prepared in the woman's jaw.

During the ensuing year, tests of the vitality of the tooth and the condition of the surrounding bone and gum structures showed no problems.

New bone filled the space where the tooth used to be. The tissues around the tooth root showed no evidence of inflammation or rejection.

The dentists say their cell-cultivation techniques permit long-term maintenance of teeth in laboratories until transplantation is carried out.

The researchers are Drs. Karl-Johan Olander, Gosta Lundquist and Per-Osten Soder. The latter two are affiliated with the famed Karolinska Institute of Stockholm.

A compact and disposable artificial kidney that is 30 per cent more efficient than any other such machine now in use has been developed by researchers at the University of Chicago and Argonne National Laboratory.

More than 70 successful tests have been conducted since last October on the new machine.

The new artificial kidney, or dialyzer, offers the following advantages:

—It is 30 per cent faster than other artificial kidneys.

—It requires less blood to prime it than other devices.

—It can be operated without a blood pump, relying on the patient's own blood pressure.

—The unit is disposable after use.

The new device was invented by Finley Markley, now affiliated with Galen Laboratories of Costa Mesa.

Some forms of eye degeneration may be related to the cumulative effect of a well-lighted lifetime, including hours devoted to television watching, a doctor theorizes.

Dr. Mark O. M. Tso, research associate at the Armed Forces Institute of Pathology, reports research with rhesus monkeys. Exposure of the macula (a region at the back of the eye) to low-intensity light led to gradual degeneration of various cells.

Regeneration occurred three to five months later, but a scar remained and some of the eye cells never did recover.

Migraine patients should avoid foods rich in a substance known as tyramine, says a doctor.

Dr. Robert M. Satovick of the University of Utah College of Medicine says foods to be avoided include cheddar cheese, red wine, chocolate, lima beans, yellow beans, avocado and chicken liver.

Such foods, he says, can trigger migraine attacks.

The report is in Internal Medicine News.

Motor vehicle accidents in Los Angeles occur more frequently during periods when carbon monoxide and oxidant levels are highest, a research team reports.

Oxidants are pollutants in the atmosphere caused by the photochemical reaction of sunlight on vehicle exhaust.

Norman Perkins, head of a California State Department of Public Health pollution study, says new findings point to a strong statistical link between accidents and atmospheric pollutants.

Pollutants can both impair vision and affect judgment or performance, researchers say.

PERLE MESTA

RUTH FARKAS

Q. In 1948 Perle Mesta contributed $30,000 to the Democratic Party, and Harry Truman appointed her Ambassador to Luxembourg. This year Mrs. Ruth Farkas contributed $300,000 to President Nixon's campaign. And she, too, was appointed Ambassador to Luxembourg. How come Mrs. Farkas had to pay so much more for the same position?—Julia Brompton, Wilmington, Del.
A. Inflation.

Q. I know that Mrs. Nixon has a personal hairdresser on the White House staff. Who is she, and does the hairdresser live in the White House? — T.L. Gaines, Richmond, Va.
A. Mrs. Nixon's hairdresser and personal secretary is Rita DeSantis (above) who worked for the Elizabeth Arden salon on Connecticut Avenue in Washington, D.C. Mrs. DeSantis, Berlin-born, resigned from the Arden salon in January to join Mrs. Nixon's personal staff, but she does not live in the White House. She lives in Maryland with her husband and two children. It was she who accompanied the First Lady on her trips to Peking and Moscow.

Q. Is it true that West Germany bans truck traffic on its autobahns during the summer?—Norman Stein, Omaha, Nebr.
A. West Germany will ban truck traffic from its autobahns on 11 weekends this summer to make room for vacation traffic.

Q. Can you find out what's happened to Dana Andrews, the actor?—Helen Douglas, Tenafly, N.J.
A. Dana Andrews, 61, recently appeared at the Thorndike Theater in Surrey, England, starring in Our Town.

Q. Would appreciate very much to learn if Richard Nixon was ever chairman of the Pepsi-Cola International Corporation and owed that job to Donald Kendall, present head of Pepsi?—M.F.L., Lima, Ohio.
A. In 1959 when Nixon was Vice President, it was Donald Kendall of Pepsi-Cola who urged Nixon to lead Premier Khrushchev to the Pepsi stand at the Moscow Trade Fair. The famous kitchen debate between Nixon and Khrushchev then took place. Kendall was then vice president of Pepsi-Cola International. In 1960 when Nixon lost the Presidential race to John F. Kennedy, it was Kendall who suggested that Nixon take a job as chairman of Pepsi-Cola International. Nixon decided instead that he would go to California and run for Governor. In 1962, he lost the gubernatorial race to Pat Brown. In 1963 when Elmer Bobst of Warner Lambert obtained a senior partnership for Nixon in the law firm of Mudge, Rose, Guthrie, Alexander & Mitchell, it was Don Kendall who gave Nixon the Pepsi account. Nixon and Kendall are the closest of friends, and the President uses him as a trade envoy and chairman of the Emergency Committee on American Trade.

Q. Is Joan Baez bisexual?—Pam Moore, Atherton, Calif.
A. She used to be, she says, is no more.

ROSALIND RUSSELL

Q. I saw Rosalind Russell on the telecast of the Academy Awards. She has gotten awful fat and puffy, particularly around the face. Is there anything wrong with her?—Mrs. Herbert Glazer, Roxbury, Mass.
A. Unfortunately, Miss Russell suffers from rheumatoid arthritis, takes cortisone shots to relieve the pain. Cortisone causes the puffiness.

Q. Was Engelbert Humperdinck ever jailed for drug use?—Anna Carillo, Jersey City, N.J.
A. English singer Engelbert Humperdinck was unjustly jailed in Caracas, Venezuela, in March for five hours. A customs official thought the singer's vitamin pills were drugs. Engelbert was released with apologies.

ENGELBERT HUMPERDINCK AND DANCING GIRLS.

Q. I understand that last year visitors to Madame Tussaud's Wax Museum in London voted Richard Nixon both the most admired and hated personality in the world. Is that on the level, or just publicity for the museum?—L.T.T., New York, N.Y.
A. According to the annual poll of visitors to Madame Tussaud's Wax Museum taken during the last week of 1972, Nixon was voted the most admired politician as well as the most hated and feared personality in the world. One must remember that at the time Nixon had ordered the B-52 bombings of North Vietnam, and European public opinion was strongly opposed to it.

Q. Who was Frederick Jackson Turner, and why is he recognized as a great American?—Malcolm Frances Walker, Dallas, Tex.
A. Frederick Jackson Turner (1861-1932) is probably the foremost historian this nation has yet produced. He is best recognized for his famous paper, "The Significance of the Frontier in American History," which he delivered in Chicago on July 12, 1893. Turner's thesis was that the frontier had influenced Americans and American institutions, and that once the frontier disappeared, a great epoch in American history came to a close. One of the best works on Turner is Frederick Jackson Turner, Historian, Scholar, Teacher by Ray Billington, published by the Oxford University Press.

Former Rep. John D. Dowdy (D., Tex.) after long ordeal in $25,000 bribery case.

WASHINGTON, D.C.

As darkness settled over Atlanta's International Airport, a fat, balding Congressman barged through an arrival gate into the busy terminal. He was greeted by Myrvin Clark, an admitted swindler, who carried a briefcase. The two men exchanged cryptic remarks about a construction firm in Silver Spring, Md.. The Congressman agreed to do everything he could to prevent the firm from being indicted for fraud. Then, smiling broadly, he departed with the briefcase to catch a plane for Texas. The reason for his smile: his newly acquired briefcase contained $25,000 in crisp greenbacks.

The story sounds apocryphal. But in Federal Court in 1971, a jury found Rep. John Dowdy (D., Tex.), now thin and ailing, guilty of bribery, conspiracy and perjury. Last month an appeals court in a dubious decision overturned the bribery and conspiracy counts. The court said that the things Dowdy had done which helped the construction firm "might be interpreted as preparation for a subcommittee hearing . . . and, as such, would be protected legislative acts." Left standing was Dowdy's perjury conviction.

Referring to the case, one Congressman admitted: "There's a little of Dowdy in all of us." He asked rhetorically: "How many of us here aren't guilty in some way of accepting favors from special interest groups?" Then he paused and answered his question: "Damn few."

The free list

For most members of Congress, the favors are confined to small gratuities: free lunches and liquor, delicacies at Christmastime, vitamins from a pharmaceutical firm. For others, the favors are more substantial: free rides on corporate jets, all-expenses-paid vacations, cash under the table.

Legitimate lobbyists ask, in return, only that a Congressman lend a sympathetic ear to their concerns. "All most of us want is our day in Congress," one young lobbyist told me. An older union lobbyist put it more succinctly: "I don't want to bribe the guy, I just want to make sure when I gotta see him, I'm gonna see him."

But all too many lobbyists, with fat money clips, are ready to buy favors and to charge high fees for their efforts. The favors they seek for their clients are twofold: favorable legislation and contracts. These lobbyists are slicked-down versions of Dandy Beau Hickman who became Washington's lobbyist exemplar a century ago. He collected a small fortune for introducing barflies to famous Washington personalities in hotel lobbies. For a quarter, history records, Beau would arrange a handshake; for a dollar, a formal introduction.

Prices up

Today, the price of entrée comes higher. Professional lobbyists, skilled at the soft sell, charge thousands of dollars to argue a crucial case before a key Senator. They are the super lobbyists—the Clark Cliffords, George Smatherses, Tommy "The Cork" Corcorans and Bryce Harlows. They seldom are seen in the Capitol lobbies; they move quietly in the same circles as the legislators they influence, ever cool, convivial and, if possible, invisible.

To be sure, lobbyists are entitled to present their arguments on Capitol Hill, to exercise their constitutional right of petition. To sell members of Congress, yes, but not to buy them. A bribe, however, isn't always easy to define. How expensive must a gift be, how valuable, a favor, before it is called a bribe? Can a lobbyist buy a Congressman with cocktails? A $100 Christmas gift? A $350 flight in a corporate jet? A $950 vacation at a resort hotel? A $1200 lecture fee? A $2500 legal retainer? Doesn't everyone have the right to contribute to the candidates of his choice? Then, when does a campaign contribution offered in appreciation for a Congressman's vote, become a payment for his vote?

Here are the most popular ways of influencing a Congressman:

1. Cash—Most Congressmen who are for sale prefer to be paid in cash. They don't want any incriminating

Former Sen. Daniel Brewster (D., Md.). A lobbyist was convicted of paying him an "unlawful gratuity" of $14,500.

receipts or canceled checks floating around. For example:

At a secret hearing of the House Commerce Committee, Mrs. Dorothy Storz, former secretary-treasurer and head bookkeeper for broadcaster Don Burden's three Star radio stations, swore according to the secret testimony, that Burden instructed her to send ten $100 bills to Sen. Mark Hatfield (R. Oreg.). "I signed the check. I endorsed it, and I mailed those $100 bills to... Hatfield," she testified. She got back a receipt, she said, signed by Evelyn Cook in Hatfield's office. Yet Hatfield claimed he never got the money.

Are cash transactions common on Capitol Hill? My reporter put the question to Rep. Pete McCloskey (R., Calif.). "I have that impression," he said. He told about his own experience. "I was upset to find lobbyists leaving behind five or ten $100 bills in envelopes after visiting my office," he said. "I asked how I should report the contributions. My questions were met with disbelief."

Funneled cash

Lobbyist Cyrus T. Anderson, convicted of paying ex-Sen. Daniel Brewster (D., Md.) "an unlawful gratuity" amounting to $14,500, told the court that he funneled thousands of dollars, most of it hard cash, from corporations and unions to various politicians.

What kind of people, he was asked, came to him for cash? "Senators, Congressmen, candidates for President of the United States," said Anderson. He was scrupulous, however, never to bribe anyone inside a federal building. "It was my understanding," he explained to the court, "that even legal political contributions can't be made in a federal building, much less ones that weren't going to be reported."

Why do Congressmen want payment in cash? "They prefer," replied Anderson, "not to make public the sources of their incomes."

Credit cards

2. Credit—Next to cash, Congressmen on the make like to use other people's credit cards. Corporations and unions alike slip credit cards to their favorite Congressmen, and let them charge airplane tickets, hotel bills, rental cars, even personal purchases.

ITT's celebrated lobbyist Dita Beard, for example, used to hand out special Avis credit cards to friendly Congressmen. Avis, of course, was a subsidiary of ITT. Rep. Lionel Van Deerlin (D., Calif.) accepted an Avis card from Mrs. Beard to help defray the cost for a recent camping trip through Europe.

Another card carrier, Ex-Sen. George Murphy (R., Calif.), who supplemented his Senate salary by pulling down $20,000 a year from Technicolor, Inc., also had the use of the company's credit card. Murphy told me he never used the card except to pay his expenses when Ex-Sen. George Murphy (R., Calif.) supplemented salary with $20,000 a year paid him by Technicolor, Inc.

Sen. John Sparkman (D., Ala.), Banking Chairman, was re-elected with a little bit of help from his friends.

he acted as a company consultant.

3. Contributions—If a Congressman blanches at taking cash under the table, the best way for lobbyists to show their appreciation is to contribute to his campaign. Even the most honest Congressmen can't entirely escape doing business with the special interests. Those candidates who have tried to finance campaigns from small contributions have learned quickly that the fat cats are indispensable.

The custom is for the lobbyists to raise a campaign kitty for the Congressman from their corporate or union clients. Sen. John Sparkman (D., Ala.) was re-elected last year, for instance, with the financial help of bankers and builders as far away as California and Massachusetts. As Senate Banking Chairman, he handles legislation that can make or break finance houses. Bankers, savings-and-loan officials and credit union officers from 28 states chipped in $62,923 to his campaign.

Sparkman also oversees many federal housing programs. Real-estate operators and housing contractors raised $45,996 for him, according to the official records. Not surprisingly, Sparkman gave special priority to legislation benefitting his benefactors after his triumphal return to Washington.

Dispensing largesse

House Ways and Means Chairman Wilbur Mills, who is in charge of tax legislation, is routinely re-elected every two years by his rural Arkansas constituency. He, therefore, has access to more special-interest money and has less need for it than any other member of Congress. His solution is to dispense money to colleagues who, in return for his largesse, demonstrate their gratitude by voting for the tax bills he sponsors.

4. Investments—Lobbyists with the right financial connections have been known to steer cooperative Congressmen into profitable investments. Many Senators and Representatives trade actively on the stock market, buying and selling shares of corporations whose prosperity they influence and whose conduct they help to regulate. Some purchase stock in their own names; others find it more discreet to use the maiden names of their wives or the names of intimates. The more cautious buy their stock in a "street" name, whereby the broker makes the purchase and keeps the stock in his company's portfolio.

House Banking Chairman Wright Patman (D., Tex.) has revealed how his committee members are seduced by the banks. "It takes the form of offering a Congressman bank stock either free or at a cost greatly under the market value," he said. "A member of my committee was approached and offered $14,000 worth of bank stock as a gift. I am proud to report that he is of such caliber that he told the would-be donors to get out of his office."

The pitch

The Congressman was Henry Gonzalez (D., Tex.). He said that the attempted bribe came in a conversation with a well-known businessman-banker from San Antonio, his home town, on a summer day in 1963. "You are very popular in the part of town where we are going to have the bank," Gonzalez paraphrased the businessman's pitch. "It would be very helpful to have you in a serious business enterprise. In fact, we would like you to be chairman of the board."

Former Rep. George Brown Jr. (D., Calif.) gave another account of the corruption process: "I have stock holdings in both a savings-and-loan company and a nationally chartered bank. I'm a director of the S&L, and I am an organizer of the bank in my district. Politicians are generally offered stock opportunities to purchase stock at opening price. In California, it's a stock bribe equal generally to double the amount of the original cost."

5. Legal Retainers—In 1969, the American Bar Association reached the not-so-startling conclusion that it was improper for men who make the law also to practice it. This has persuaded a few Congressmen to give up their law practices. But dozens more continue to rake in the law fees. Their firms, invariably, represent clients with considerable interest in what Congress can do for them.

Awhile back, I made a study of 50 typical law firms with partners serving in Congress. These had a remarkable similarity of clients; they represented the vested interests of America. Of the 50 law firms in my survey, 40 represented banks, 31 represented insurance companies, 11 represented gas and oil companies, 10 represented real-estate firms. Some of the biggest corporate names in America were listed as clients of Congressmen's law firms in such out-of-the-way places, say, as Nicholasville, Ky., and Pascagoula, Miss.

6. Lecture Fees—A Congressman who is beyond outright bribing may be willing to accept a lecture fee. He may be able to convince his conscience that he really earned the money, though oratory can be summoned forth from the average Congressman as a reflex action. In 1971, members of Congress admitted earning a total of nearly $1 million for speaking engagements and occasional magazine articles. The man who led everybody to the public rostrum was Sen. Hubert Humphrey (D., Minn.). The loquacious Humphrey earned a whopping $83,451 from dozens of public appearances.

Pay to listen

Many a pressure group—from the Mortgage Bankers Association to the Teamsters Union—will pay perfectly good money to hear a Congressman declaim. The largest single source of speaking fees for Congressmen has been the Seafarers' International Union. The maritime lobbyists quietly invited 22 Congressmen and four Senators to speak at their special luncheons in one year alone. The union's favorite speakers, of course, were members of the House Merchant Marine Subcommittee.

As an index to the price of hot air, Senators demand top dollar, with fees ranging from $1000 to $2000. House members will usually settle for less.

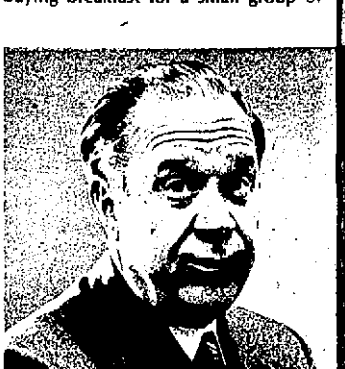

7. Poker—From the reports I get, a startling number of Congressmen play poker with their lobbyist friends in swank hospitality suites around town. The details, however, are difficult to pin down. I've been told, for example, that certain members of the House Merchant Marine Subcommittee have been amazingly lucky in their card games with shipping lobbyists.

See the world

8. Vacations—As a method of softening up Congressmen, vacation trips are most favored by government agencies, which must go to Congress for their appropriations. It is of unquestionable value for Congressmen to get out and see the world. Contacts are made; understanding is reached; legislation is born. But all too often, the Congressmen see little beyond the beaches and the bars. The Pentagon, for instance, is eager to provide transportation for legislators. Overseas, U.S. embassy personnel serve as lackeys and luggage carriers for tourists from Capitol Hill.

But corporations, too, provide planes, free flights, hotel rooms and rental cars for traveling Congressmen. ITT lobbyist Dita Beard once complained to her secretary that too many Congressmen requested free trips. "All these people want planes all the time. Don't they know the company has to use these planes, too?"

9. Fringe Benefits—Lobbyists literally shower small favors on Congressmen: theater tickets, imported liquors, French perfume, birthday cakes, even free Kleenex for their secretaries. One lobbyist I know starts each morning by buying breakfast for a small group of

Sen. Russell Long (D., La.) has interest in oil, but he "wouldn't hesitate to vote for bill that might favor oil industry" as helpful to his home state.

Sen. Abe Ribicoff (D., Conn.) refused to vote for pro-real estate legislation as "an obvious conflict of interest."

Congressmen in the House cafeteria. Most lobbyists, however, prefer to wait until noon before dishing out free food and drinks. At Christmastime, the lobbyists are especially generous. "Gifts are crated in by the cart load," one Senate aide admitted.

The flow of gratuities continues in spite of a new campaign disclosure law which requires Congressmen to report any gift or combination of gifts that total $10 or more in value. Only a few corporations, fearful of the disclosure law, have curtailed the flow.

Sen. Abe Ribicoff (D., Conn.) once startled his colleagues on the Senate Finance Committee when they were patching together tax legislation behind closed doors. "I couldn't vote for this provision, even if I favored it . . . ," snorted Ribicoff, in reference to a proposal that would benefit real estate developers. "I own real estate myself. It's an obvious conflict of interest."

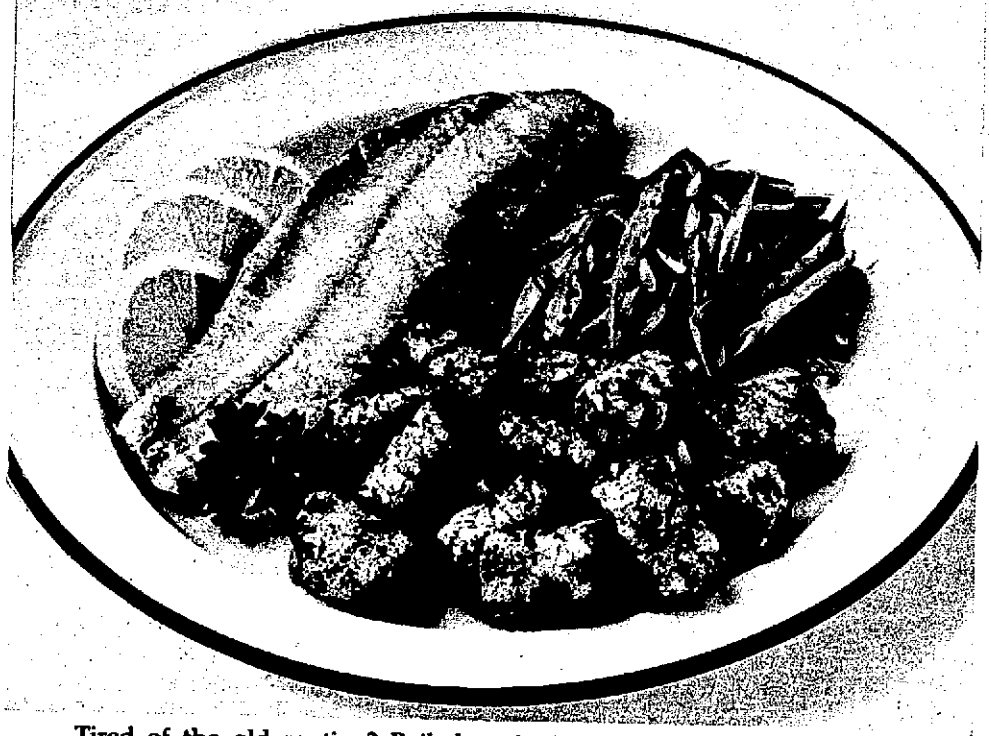

There was a moment of stunned silence. Then Chairman Russell Long (D., La.) broke in. "Well, I have interest in oil," he said, "but I wouldn't hesitate to vote for legislation that might favor the oil industry. After all, I come from Louisiana. What's good for oil, is good for my state." A chorus of other Senators agreed with Long. For several minutes, the Senators talked candidly about their special interests in oil, insurance, trucking and agriculture. Finally, one Senator told the unrelenting Ribicoff bluntly: "Abe, if we abstained on every piece of legislation in which we had some personal interest, why we'd never pass any legislation."

A short answer

Despite the many ways to bribe a Congressman, it is a miracle of politics and a tribute to officeholders that the pressure groups don't wield more influence than they do. More often than not, in the daily drama on Capitol Hill, there's an exchange that puts the lobbyist in his place. "Vote 'Yes,' " one union lobbyist instructed Rep. Bill Green (D., Pa.) as he entered the House chamber for a vote. "I'll tell you why later." Green smiled and voted no.

COMPUTERIZED GAS STATION

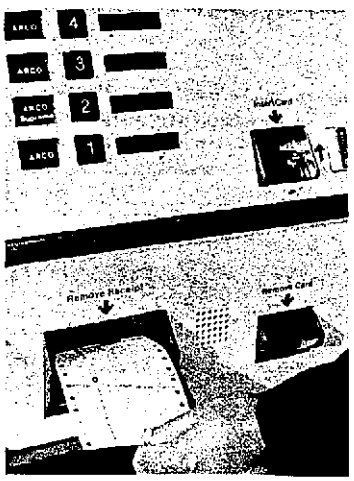

Computer technology has taken another giant leap forward. You can now tank up your car at a filling station by presenting your credit card to a computer instead of an attendant.

Here's the way the system works at a self-service station recently opened by Atlantic Richfield in Lawndale, Calif.

A customer drives into the station, places his credit card into a control panel. The panel, connected to a computer in the station, is linked by telephone circuit to Atlantic Richfield's credit card headquarters in Atlanta. One computer talks to another. If the computers agree that the customer's credit is okay, the driver selects a pump, fills his tank. By the time he's finished the computer presents him with a statement. And he drives away with his receipt.

HOW IT WORKS: CUSTOMER ACTIVATES GAS PUMP BY INSERTING CREDIT CARD. HE PUMPS THE GAS HIMSELF AND GETS HIS RECEIPT.

TIPS ON FOOD SHOPPING

Nancy Weaver of Albuquerque, N. Mex., a top nutritionist, recently conducted a workshop on the University of New Mexico campus for food shoppers.

Herewith, some of her tips:

(1) Foods with the highest markup have the most prominent display -- usually at eye-level. Do not touch an item unless you intend to buy it, because research has proven that once you pick it up, you buy it whether you need it or not.

(2) Buy according to the ingredients listed on the label.

(3) Take advantage of the "loss-leader" specials. If a store is out of an advertised special, ask for a substitute or a rain check.

(4) It is better to buy canned fruits in their own juice rather than heavy sugar syrup.

(5) We eat too much. Four to six ounces of meat provide plenty of protein for the average person. Serve soup as a first course if it's not enough to fill you up.

(6) Shop around and compare prices. A good indicator on individual store markup is Campbell's tomato soup. It sells for the same price across the nation, and each store sets its own markup. In Albuquerque supermarkets, prices on a can of tomato soup vary from 13 to 17 cents.

(7) Write to the U.S. Department of Agriculture or contact the local extension office for two booklets: "Nutritive Value of Food," which costs 30 cents, and a "Plentiful Foods List," which is free and published monthly.

The plentiful foods list indicates the foods currently in large supply, and therefore selling, hopefully, at lower prices.

SEX BEFORE MARRIAGE Does premarital sex destroy love? Not according to sociologists Eugene J. Kanin of Purdue University and Karen R. Davidson of the New York State University at Buffalo. These two interviewed 679 college students about their most recent or current love affairs.

Reporting in "Sociological Quarterly," the researchers suggest that premarital sex often intensifies and reinforces the feelings of those in love. It does not breed contempt or criticism or examination.

Of the 679 students questioned, 92 females and 88 males admitted engaging in sexual relations with their partners. When asked how they felt after their first affair, 80 percent of the 180 students said their romantic feelings were heightened. When asked to rate their partners on moodiness, irritability, selfishness and other factors, those young people who had engaged in sexual relations were no more critical than those who had abstained.

Kanin and Davidson conclude that while premarital sex may have been incompatible with the customs and mores of previous eras, it has developed today into a pivotal step on the path to the altar.

UP AND OUT OF SIGHT Housing in Great Britain has become so expensive that the average Englishman can no longer afford to buy an average home. Worse yet, prices are rising so fast that he can't even determine the price.

A spokesman for the Building Societies Association estimates that a new house in Britain now sells for approximately $20,000. If a couple with $2500 wants to buy a home, they would need a loan of approximately $17,500. To obtain such a loan over 25 or 30 years they must be earning about $125 a week. Since only one in 10 Englishmen earns that much, a house of his own, especially in London, seems out of the question. The average Briton earns about $80 a week.

Ten years ago British building societies, the equivalent of our savings and loan associations, charged borrowers less than 6 percent on loans. Today it is 9 percent and more. Last year the cost of new homes in England rose 47 percent, old homes, 40 percent.

GOOF A few weeks ago, in describing the marital disasters in the life of a Los Angeles contractor named Joe Bolker, Intelligence Report noted that Bolker had been divorced from Janice Taper, daughter of California savings-and-loan millionaire Mark Taper; from Christina Onassis, daughter of Greek millionaire Aristotle Onassis, and from Dene Hofheinz, daughter of Texas millionaire Roy Hofheinz of Houston.

We were incorrect in stating that Roy Hofheinz built the famous Astrodome in Houston. It was built at a cost of $31.6 million by the citizens of Harris County, Tex., and subsequently leased to Hofheinz's Astrodomain Corp. which pays a minimum annual lease fee of $750,000 plus all operating costs, with the right to sublease the stadium which it does at a handsome profit.

U.S. MINES IN N. VIET WATERS Last May when President Nixon ordered the U.S. Navy to seal off the ports of North Vietnam, our planes dropped 11,000 mines in North Vietnamese waters, 8000 in coastal waters, 3000 in inland waters.

U.S. operations are now taking place to clear the 8000 mines in coastal waters, while the North Vietnamese are being trained to clear the 3000 mines seeded inland.

The job is expected to be finished in September so long as cease-fire obligations are obeyed.

SOMETHING POSITIVE Christopher Jencks, a 37-year-old, sandy-haired professor at the Harvard School of Education, recently set off a still-raging controversy among educators with the publication of his massive study "Inequality." In it, Jencks contends -- with a welter of statistics to back him up -- that American schools have not created a more equal society. Schools, says Jencks, cannot make up for an unequal socio-economic background and family life.

Jencks believes the only way to achieve more equality is to tackle directly economic institutions which distribute wealth and income.

Believing that critics such as himself must not simply be negative, Jencks -- along with colleagues in Cambridge -- has founded a new journal titled "Working Papers," which will publish positive visions of what American society could be like. Articles in the first issues appearing this spring and summer will cover such topics as new town developments, the conversion of military facilities to peaceful uses, solutions to the housing crisis, consumer cooperatives and on-the-job health and safety.

Jencks hopes that "Working Papers" will provide sensible, workable answers to the question most asked of society's critics: "What do you want?"

JACK BENNY WITH HIS WIFE MARY

BENNY OVERSEAS Jack Benny, the indestructible hypochondriac and surely one of the great comedians of all time, has decided to play England on a concert tour for the first time in 20 years.

Born Benny Kubelsky in Waukegan, Ill., almost 80 years ago, on Feb. 14, 1894, Jack will open at the London Palladium on June 17th. His show is entitled, "An Hour and 60 Minutes With Jack Benny."

A contemporary of Groucho Marx who is 82, George Jessel who is at least 75 and George Burns who is 77--these are approximate ages since comics like actresses are extremely age-sensitive--Benny does not have to work any more. But he prefers to.

"What else, he asks, "is there to do?" Which is why Jack, one of the most kind, generous and considerate of the ex-vaudevillians, remains perennially young in heart. "The sound of audience laughter," he says, "is for me the best medicine."

THROUGH-THE-DOOR PLAYPEN: Designed to go through any standard doorway, this new playpen (above right) is easy to push from room to room on its 3" wheels. It has 7 sq. ft. of cushioned play area, trap-proof nylon mesh sides and pinch-proof hinge arms for double-drop sides. The unit folds compactly for storage and travel. $21.95 in stores. Century Products, Dept. PP, 2150 W. 114th St., Cleveland, Ohio 44102.

TRIKE INTO BIKE: Your youngster's standard tricycle can be turned into a small bicycle (above left) with a metal fork you can slip onto the back of the tricycle after cutting off the rear, 2-wheel portion. When you then mount either one of the rear wheels on the fork, the bicycle is ready to ride. In addition to extending the usefulness of the trike, the converted unit, claims the maker, is safer for a small child to ride, because it is low to the ground and he can stabilize himself with his feet. $3.95 postpaid. Aloha Manufacturing, Dept. PP, 5005 Kalanianaole Highway, Honolulu, Hawaii 96821.

SOMETHING NEW IN A SIPHON: A handy new way to drain aquariums, fountains, pools, boats, clogged sinks and washing machines and to transfer gas from car to mower or boat is provided by this self-actuating hose siphon (above center). Just pull once on the short end of the hose to create suction that starts liquid flow. $3.95 postpaid. Central Products, Dept. PP, 533 Ash St., Central City, Pa. 15926.

STACKING CUBES: You can use these cubes (above right) to form bookshelves and room dividers—and as waste baskets and table supports. Made of ¾" imported hardwood, panels are pre-finished and tongue-and-grooved for easy assembly. And the units, claims the maker, are strong enough for high stacking and holding heavy books. $7.49 each. Also available: 15 x 15 x 30-inch units at $11.49. Cade Pioneer Co., Dept. PP, 216 N. Interurban, Richardson, Tex. 75080.

Chef Joe Hyde serves his rich-tasting bay scallop chowder dusted lightly with pepper.

Bay Scallop Chowder

by Beth Merriman
PARADE FOOD EDITOR

In getting away from main-dish meats, people have discovered some new treats from the sea—and the bay scallop is one seafood that's definitely come out of its shell. Rich in minerals and low in calories, bay scallops have a delicate nut-like flavor and can be prepared any number of ways.

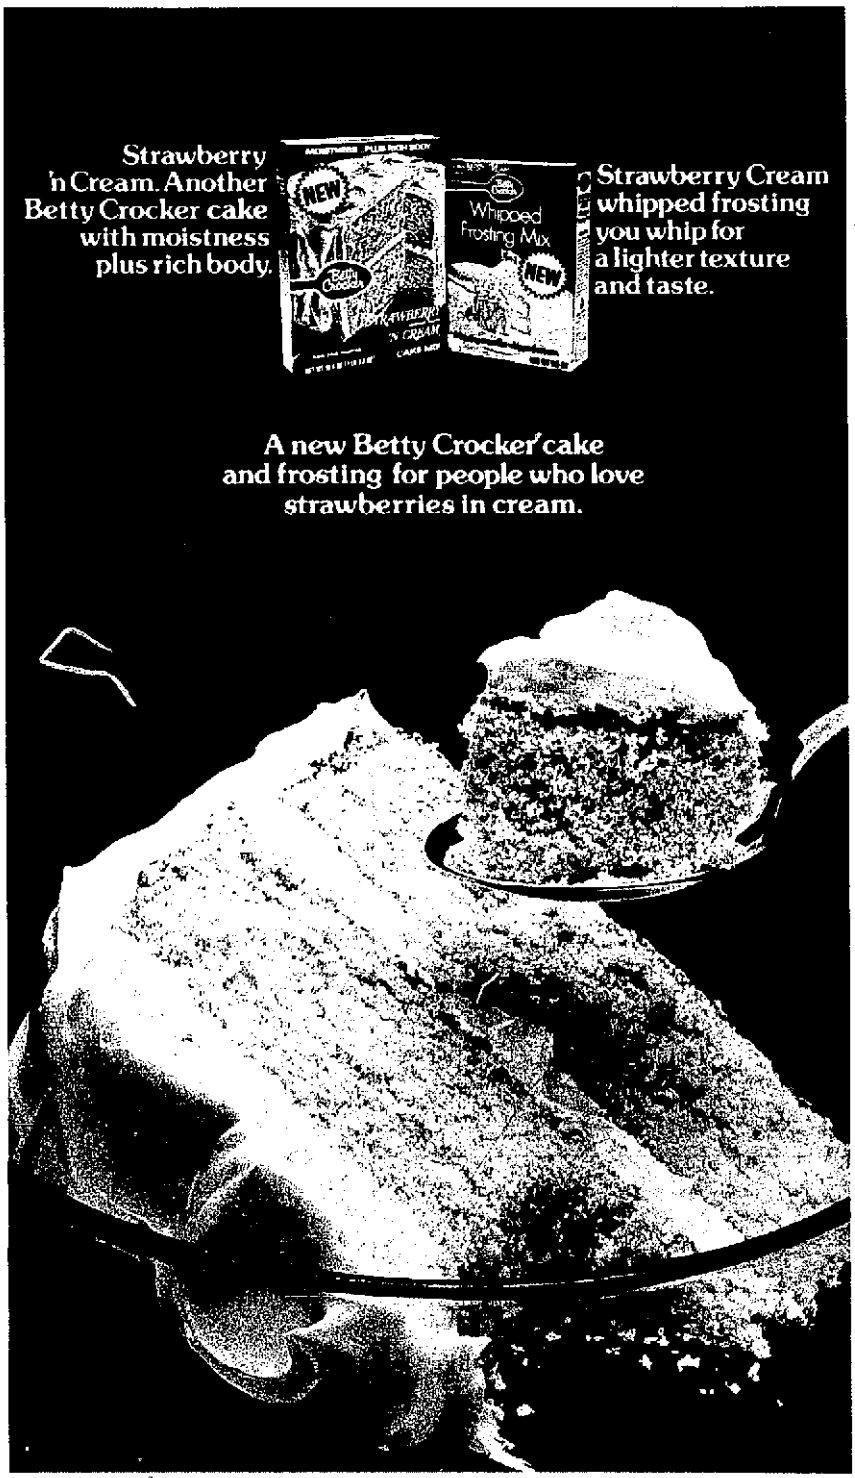

A fragrant chowder is the innovative recipe that Joe Hyde prefers for fixing these mollusks—a rich, creamy soup with potatoes and some savory garden vegetables. Says Chef Hyde: "Food must always taste like what it is; anything that's added must enhance taste, not change or camouflage it."

This classic philosophy of food preparation comes naturally to Joe Hyde, a gourmet chef who began as an Army cook in Korea. Hyde apprenticed in France at the renowned Restaurant de la Pyramide.

Creamy chowder

- 6 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 2 leeks
- 1 stalk celery, diced
- 2 onions, diced
- 1½ lbs. potatoes, peeled, washed and diced
- 1 tablespoon salt
- 1 quart water
- 1 lb. bay scallops
- 1 pint whipping cream
- 1 tablespoon chopped parsley
- Pepper

Melt butter; cut most of green leaves off leeks; cut leeks lengthwise into fourths or eighths keeping root ends intact; wash in cold water several times; drain. Dice leeks; discard root ends. Sauté leeks, celery and onions slowly in butter until onion is transparent. Do not brown. Add potatoes, salt and water. Bring to a boil, lower heat, simmer 30 minutes. Twenty minutes before chowder is to be served bring to boil; add scallops and their juice, if any. Bring back to a boil. Heat cream to boiling point in separate pan, stir it into the chowder with parsley and a little more salt if needed. Heat (do not boil) before serving. Makes 10 to 12 servings. FALSE TEETH That Loosen Need Not Embarrass

Don't keep worrying about your false teeth dropping at the wrong time. A denture adhesive can help. FASTEETH® gives dentures a longer, firmer, steadier hold. Makes eating more enjoyable. For more security and comfort, use FASTEETH Denture Adhesive Powder. Dentures that fit are essential to health. See your dentist regularly.

Tension?

Your present medication may be giving you only half the relief you need.

If you suffer from occasional simple tension, chances are your tension is both mental and physical.

Now there's a product that's made to relieve both. It's called Quiet World®. Quiet World is not a tranquilizer, but a simple calmative with a relaxant and a pain reliever. That formula is important. Because unlike other leading calmatives, Quiet World contains a full dose of pain relievers to relieve physical aches, while Quiet World's calmative and relaxant soothe away simple nervous tension.

Non-narcotic, non-habit-forming Quiet World. For occasional simple tension that gets out of hand.

Wayne and Jane Kouf shop at Fort Devens, Mass., PX, an Army-run department store.

Husbands & Wives Together in the Army

by Larry Jackson

Since Wayne and Jane Kouf got married last July they've done everything together—including enlist in the Army.

"We were both working in the same bus terminal in Seattle," says Wayne, a strapping, mustachioed six-footer. "I was handling baggage, and Jane was answering telephones. The buses were going places, but we weren't. So we signed up."

The Koufs and about 20 other couples have become part of a curious new wrinkle in Army life—the husband-and-wife soldier couple. For decades, of course, members of the Women's Army Corps have met and married soldiers. But the phenomenon of married couples enlisting together began barely six months ago. Nobody knows why.

The Koufs were among the first couples who joined up. Now Army privates E-2 (a step below PFC) attending a top-secret code school at Fort Devens, Mass., they look forward to seeing the world together beyond the bus station. After they finish school in September, their next assignment will be in Germany.

At 19 they look like an "All-American" couple. He played halfback on his high school football team and found basic training at Fort Ord, Calif., virtually a game. "It wasn't much of a challenge," he says now. He won honors as "Best Basic Trainee" among the 180 recruits in his company. Jane didn't have any trouble with her training either. She earned a letter of commendation as "Honor Trainee" in her unit at Fort McClellan, Ala. They were reunited in early March at Fort Devens and expect to be assigned together in the future.

Money counts

Why did they join? Money helped sway them, they say. Together they earn $700 a month now, slightly more than their civilian pay. But in addition the Army chips in $225 tax-free each month toward food and the rent on a modestly furnished one-bedroom apartment in nearby Ayer, Mass.

And, says Jane, "Where else can we get free medical and dental care, travel, schooling and 30 days' paid vacation besides?"

Before their tour ends in December, 1975, the couple must decide if the Army is to be their career. Money could be a powerful persuader here too. An additional six-year tour would entitle the two Koufs to an astonishing cash reenlistment bonus of $20,000.

"Right now we're undecided," says Wayne. "But if we still like the Army after three years, we'll stay in."

Another factor will be whether Wayne can realize his goal to become a veterinarian while in uniform. The Army has a veterinary course for enlisted men, but openings aren't anticipated for at least two years.

"If they won't put me through vet school," says Wayne, "I'll just have to get out and use the GI Bill to become one," says Wayne.

Christmas at home

But so far, being in the Army has posed no problems for the Koufs. "They've been real understanding," says Jane of the Army brass. "They sent us both home for Christmas, even though we had only been in the Army for a few weeks. And since we've been at Fort Devens they've made sure we haven't had to spend much time apart."

The Army hasn't put much of a crimp in their social activities either. "We've gone to Boston with friends to sightsee, and we plan to see a lot of New England before we leave here," says Wayne. "And we have plenty of time to bowl, play golf, use the tennis courts or go to the movies too."

Even the prospect of having to hopscotch to military bases around the world—which dissuades many soldiers from making a career of the military—is appealing to the pair.

"We know we'll have to move around," Wayne says, "but if we retire after 20 years we'll only be 39. We'll have plenty of time to settle down."

That the Koufs and other couples are sold on military service, seems to please —and mystify—the Army.

Recruiting officials claim Uncle Sam

continued

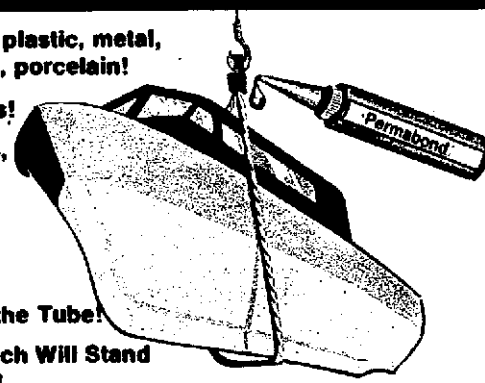

In training, the Koufs learn code. When their classes are through in September the couple expect to be sent to Germany. Travel is one reason for enlisting, they say.

isn't urging young marrieds to enlist. "We're not advertising for them, but we're glad to see them anyway," says Lt. Col. Gerald Childress, advertising director for the U.S. Army Recruiting Command in Hampton, Va.

Married couples may offer greater maturity than single persons of the same age, Childress says, but for now the Army is maintaining a wait-and-see attitude before it decides whether to actively recruit couples. Recruited or not, more couples are expected to join up. Of the 17,000 WACs now in uniform, more than 2500 are married, although only 20 of those enlisted with their husbands. But Army officials expect that a larger number of this year's 5700 anticipated WAC enlistments will be husband-and-wife teams.

Increased pay and a curb on harassment of soldiers could be influencing young couples to join, the colonel says. So, perhaps, could the Army's recent policy allowing women members to have and raise children while on active duty. The new edict permits medical leave for the last two months of pregnancy and for six weeks after a baby is born. Longer leaves may be granted on the doctor's recommendations. Maternity leaves are not charged against regular leave time. And, of course, the woman can elect an honorable discharge and stay home with the child.

The husband-and-wife soldier phenomenon isn't limited to the enlisted ranks, although they comprise about 75 percent of such pairs. Virtually all of the married officer couples, however, are professionals—doctors, lawyers, nurses or optometrists, like Stan and Luisa Thompson.

Both optometrists

Both are first lieutenants in the Brooke General Hospital eye clinic at Fort Sam Houston, Tex. They joined last June after graduating from the University of Houston as doctors of optometry.

Signing up, they say, saved them from investing in expensive equipment or taking state tests, both necessary to begin a private practice. The Army provides sophisticated equipment and requires no special exams during the first two years of service.

Because they will have plenty of military patients, the Thompsons expect to get practical experience in the Army that will prove beneficial in private practice, should they decide to get out after their two-year tour ends. With a monthly combined salary of $1300, they expect to have a tidy nest egg to see them through their first, lean years of private practice.

At face value the Army may be a good career for married couples. But before they march into a recruiting office they should be aware of the possible consequences.

Brief separation

The couples will be separated for at least the first two months of Army life while they take basic training. Men train at any of several bases throughout the nation; basic training for women is at Fort McClellan, Ala. There is no male basic training there. And if they signed up for different occupational schools, the couple could be separated, too, possibly for as long as eight months.

Also, the Army guarantees only that the couple will be stationed together during an initial 16-month period. After that, Army spokesmen say, everything is dependent on "the needs of the service"—although the chances of the couple staying together are "about 90 percent certain."

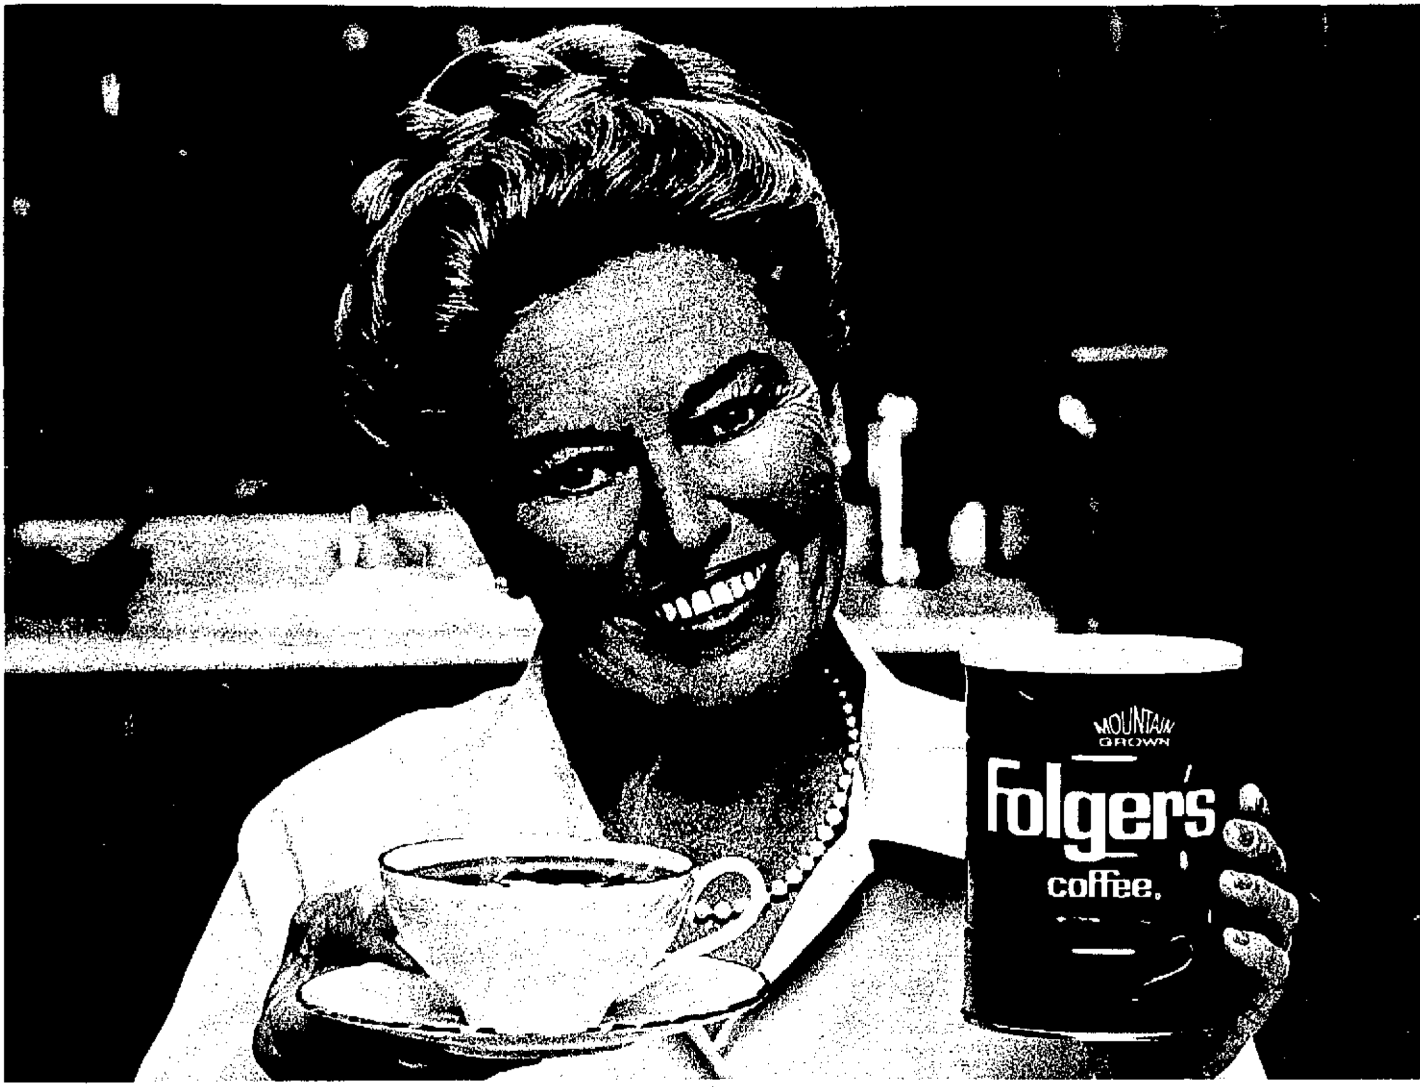

Finally, there could be social pressure against joining. The Koufs report many of their friends didn't understand why they would forsake civilian life for the strict regimentation of the military.

"They thought we were nuts," says Jane. "But if we stay in and collect that $20,000 bonus, we'll see who has the last laugh."

The Koufs spend leisure time as if they were still civilians: at the movies, bowling, playing golf or shooting pool at a nearby pizza parlor. "The Army is giving us plenty of free time," says Wayne Kouf. "We're having a blast."

I'm Mrs. Olson. And I'd like you to try Folger's. It's the best coffee I've ever tasted.

Keeping Up... With Youth

by Pamela Swift

JUSTICE WILLIAM O. DOUGLAS AND HIS WIFE

Advice to Youth

William O. Douglas, appointed by Franklin D. Roosevelt to the U.S. Supreme Court in 1939 when Douglas was only 40, is chronologically the oldest but in many ways the youngest and certainly the most liberal and stimulating Justice on the court.

Douglas proved that description several weeks ago when he addressed 1500 students at the University of Pennsylvania. "I have come," he began, "to talk about controversial matters.... The only possible remedy for the problems of our time is political action through the grass roots organization.... The greatest danger facing the nation is Presidential war.... The grass roots is right here, even if it is only 10 or 20 of you.... I hope out of this young crowd there may be a nucleus who will emerge with an understanding of the problems of your generation."

Douglas listed some of the problems as: pollution, the energy crisis, materialism, conservation and international relations.

"This is the most beautiful land in the world," he exclaimed. "Put your arms around it. Hold it tenderly. Protect it so it is not despoiled....

"There has been a gradual increase of material rather than spiritual values," he pointed out. "The golden gravy train has become the dream of many youngsters."

Douglas urged his audience to participate actively in solving the nation's problems, to stage rallies, write Congressmen, elect sympathetic legislators. "I trust the judgment of the people in this room," he announced, "rather than the experts in Washington."

The people in the room agreed with him.

Married In School

What kinds of young people get married in college? The answer is all kinds, but there are in particular certain types who are more liable than others to marry while in school.

For example, students with low academic ability, students who come from lower socio-economic groups, freshmen who regard themselves as Romeos, and girls who choose "housewife" as their goal—these are the types who marry in college.

That at least is what Alan E. Bayer claims. Bayer works for the American Council on Education which did a follow-up survey of 20,000 college seniors, 2100 of them married.

Bayer believes that married college students frequently drop out of school because educational institutions are ill-equipped to handle them. What is needed, he says, are services designed to keep married students in school—financial aids, inexpensive housing and a counseling service.

Hair Length

In the U.S. Congress, the House of Representatives is traditionally more conservative than the Senate. As would be expected under those circumstances the House has ordered its pages to trim their hair so that it does not extend over ears or neck.

In the U.S. Senate, however, which boasts four girl pages, there is no such edict. Senate pages are told to keep their hair neat. Hair-length in the Senate is no problem.

To Combat GI Racism

In an effort to combat racial tensions in the U.S. Army overseas, the Pentagon has instituted a program of sending to Europe many more black entertainers than formerly.

Of the 300,000 American servicemen in Europe, approximately 10 percent are black. Understandably they enjoy performers of their own race.

Several who recently played the European scene are Floyd Patterson, former heavyweight boxing champion; Linda Barney, who won the Miss Black America beauty contest, and a hot vocal group called "Tender Loving Care."

The Army's Special Service group would like to get Diana Ross and Cicely Tyson, two black actresses who were nominated for Academy Awards, to work overseas, but both are currently in high Hollywood demand. Miss Tyson is preparing for a film based on the life of Rep. Shirley Chisholm (D., N.Y.), while Miss Ross, discovery of Motown Records of Detroit when she was recording with the Supremes, is preparing to film "A Couple of Swells," described by Paramount as a drama with music.

AMAZING NEW ISOMETRIC BEAUTY BAND

LIFTS YEARS OFF YOUR FACE!

These photographs are completely unretouched.

★ Lifts and Smooths Sagging Skin. ★ Strengthens Face Muscles. ★ Improves your looks immediately . . . builds lasting results.

How would you like to give yourself an instant face lift . . . see sagging skin, lines around your mouth, bags under the eyes and telltale crows feet smooth out as if some miracle of youth had suddenly touched your face? Sound too good to be true? Not at all! Because Mark Traynor, the man behind a thousand beautiful faces, has created a real beauty coup—an isometric beauty band you can wear all day . . . or just a few minutes before bedtime . . . that literally lifts your face . . . restores that smooth youthful look and at the same time helps strengthen muscles and tissues so that your face not only looks younger and firmer, but is actually being toned and conditioned toward the natural resilience of youthful beauty.

Wear the look of youth as you build back beauty into your features

The Isometric Beauty Band, developed by one of today's most famous TV Makeup artists, works two ways: as a beauty lift, and as a facial exerciser. When you wear it during the day it firms up facial muscles, takes up the slack in the contours of your face, widens your eyes, and gives your face a zesty, vibrant look. Used just before bedtime, as a facial exerciser, it works to firm and strengthen the facial muscles, diminish lines and sags, and generally recontours the structure of the face. From the moment you put it on, you'll see instant, almost magical results, and the longer you use it the more lasting beauty it will bring to your face.

A Simple Band of Beauty that Works Isometrically

It's really all so simple! You merely slip it on, fit it to your head size, then wear it as a stylish headband. Or you can wear it under a wig! From the moment you put it on, it begins to work its magic. It strengthens the muscles of your face in the same manner that an isometric exercise strengthens muscles in any part of the body. Wearing the band draws the facial muscles upward. Your regular facial movements such as speaking, closing your eyes, laughing, smiling, even yawning . . . all work the muscles against the resistance of the band and create an automatic massaging exercise. It firms the skin as it strengthens the underlying muscle structure. You can wear it as long as you wish or for short exercise periods. In either case, utterly amazing results will be yours from the moment you put it on.

MARK TRAYNOR . . . THE NAME BEHIND THE FACE

If you've ever envied that glowing look of beauty on the faces of models who grace such magazines as Vogue, Harper's Bazaar, Seventeen, Town and Country and many, many more, then you're already familiar with the work of Mark Traynor, the man behind a thousand and one beautiful faces.

Beauty expert and make-up man to Hollywood Stars, models, TV personalities, Mark himself has appeared many times on the Tonight Show, Merv Griffin, David Frost discussing his beauty secrets and how he has brought almost instant youth and beauty to thousands with his incredible techniques such as his Temporary Face Lift and now his Beauty Band. Now Mark Traynor wants you to enjoy the fruits of his talents, and see for yourself how his miraculous Beauty Band can give you the look of the Stars.

No wonder such beauty bibles as Harper's Bazaar, Vogue and others have seen fit to talk about Mark Traynor and his accomplishments with little less than awe. The results of his devices are absolutely incredible. And now you, too, can take advantage of his knowledge and experience in working with some of the most beautiful women in the world. If your mirror tells you that the shadows of age are clouding your looks, it's time to make this dramatic step back toward youthful beauty . . . order your Mark Traynor Isometic Beauty Band, now, only $9.95.

My Favorite Jokes

by Stanley Myron Handelman

EDITOR'S NOTE: The subtlety and skillful absurdities in Stanley Myron Handelman's jokes as he describes them are "comments on the way people's minds work. The jokes themselves are an external manifestation of something, of some quirk in the way people think; twisted values, things that are all out of proportion." And here we might illustrate with a Handelman maxim: "Ignorance is bliss; that's why ignorant people are so unhappy. They're too ignorant to realize that they're ignorant."

Stanley Myron Handelman was a television regular for two seasons on Dean Martin Presents The Golddiggers, has been on the Merv Griffin show 30 times, and appears in top spots like Caesars Palace and the Sahara Hotel in Las Vegas. Originally from New York, Stanley now lives in Malibu, Calif., where he can dwell on life's quirks and ironies in the sunshine.

Here are some of his jokes and comic thoughts:

My dog had worms, so I brought him to the vet. The vet told me that I should chomp off little bits of garlic—you know, it's good for worms—and give it to him. Now his bark is worse than his bite.

In my local hamburger place they have this fruit salad that's reversible: If you don't like it, you can turn it over, and it's just lettuce.

Harry is a two-headed midget who worked as a longshoreman for many years. Then, one day he got fired because he used to kid around a lot. Anyway he couldn't get work and he was becoming panicky. So as a last resort he went to the circus and applied for a job as the strongman—he'd gotten very strong working on the docks. But they already had a strongman, so they hired him as a two-headed midget.

This guy goes into a store and he says, "I'm selling window protection. This is a very nice place you got here; that's a really nice window, and $10 a week will be enough to protect it. You know, you never know what's going to happen." So the other guy says, "It's not my place, I just work here." "Well," says the first guy, "let me put it this way, that's a very lovely smile you have!"

My parents thought that I would be an inventor, because there were a lot of inventors in my family. I had a couple of uncles who were inventors. One uncle worked with Alexander Graham Bell—Morris Handelman. After Bell invented the telephone, my uncle invented the extension.

I was in a place called the Ulysses S. Grant Hotel, and right across the street was a little park called the Ulysses S. Grant Park—they named it after the hotel, because it was very famous. There were all kinds of religious groups meeting there, some of them really weird. One guy, a faith healer, was talking to his congregation. And an old man was there. He was crippled, but he was so poor that he had a branch from a tree that he used as a crutch. He went up to the faith healer, the faith healer asked him if he believed, and the old man said, "Yes, I do believe." And all of a sudden there was thunder and lightning, and the whole sky got dark. Then, like a miracle, the branch from the tree turned into a real crutch.

New lady's shaver:
Flicker
Designed to cut hair...not skin.

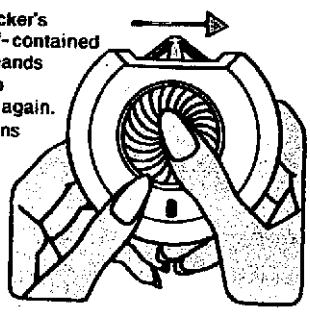

Finally, a lady's shaver designed to do what you always wanted it to... cut hair, not skin.

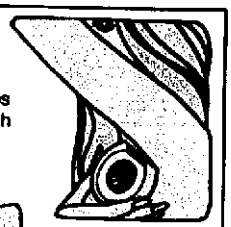

Flicker's stainless steel blades are specially protected so they just glide over the top of your skin without cutting it.

Thanks to Flicker's exclusive self-contained design, your hands never have to touch blades again. Flicker contains 5 blades.

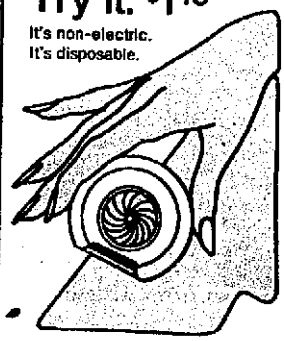

Flicker lets you shave your legs close and smooth. And it's designed to make shaving underarms and all those hard-to-reach places easier and safer.

Try it. $1.49

It's non-electric.
It's disposable.

Helps Shrink Swelling Of Hemorrhoidal Tissues Caused By Inflammation And Infection

Also Gives Prompt, Temporary Relief in Many Cases from Pain and Burning Itch in Such Tissues.

There's an exclusive formulation which actually helps shrink the painful swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues caused by infection. In many cases the first applications give prompt, temporary relief from itching and pain in hemorrhoidal tissues.

The sufferer first notices relief from such painful discomfort. Then this medication helps to gently reduce swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues. Tests conducted by doctors on hundreds of patients in New York City, Washington, D.C., and at a Midwest Medical Center showed this to be true in many cases.

The medication used by doctors in these tests was Preparation H® —the same exclusive formula you can buy at any drug counter without a prescription. Preparation H also lubricates the affected area to protect the inflamed, irritated surface and so helps make regularity more comfortable.

There is no other formula like Preparation H. In ointment or suppository form.

EMPEROR CLOCK MOVEMENT FOR MODEL 120 - WEIGHT DRIVEN - EIGHT DAY - WESTMINSTER CHIMES

The Emperor Clock 100-M movement is manufactured by a third-generation firm of West German clocksmiths. Embossed overlays surround the solid brass dial. The permanently polished face features serpentine hands. The arch above the dial face features either a moving moon dial with lunar calendar or a shaped aluminum world with "Tempus Fugit" inscribed in black enamel. The completely weight driven movement strikes the famous Westminster chimes four times an hour on musically tuned rods. All plates are solid brass; all pinions are hardened steel. Detailed instructions make installation and adjustment a simple, easy job. Movement includes weights, brass weight shells, pendulum and brass bob.
